"In the multitude of words there wanteth not sin: but he that refraineth his lips is wise" (Prov. 10: 19).

EVIL thinking always precedes evil speaking. It may be set down as a rule with but few exceptions that we never speak evil of any one without first thinking evil of him. We never think evil of wife or husband, as the case may be, if we have the love we should have. Love thinketh no evil, hence never speaks evil. When you hear a man speaking disparagingly of the church, in which he holds membership, or of any of the members with what judgment ye judge, ye shall be judged; a with what measure ye mete, it shall be measured to y again" (Matt. 7: 1-2). And then he tells about t hypocritical mote-puller who has a beam in his o eye. As a rule, the man quick to judge others, c trary to the teaching of Christ, is troubled with a bea

Because of our shortsightedness and our inability know all, we are incapable of always rendering righteous judgment. Once upon a time one said to n "But the Scripture teaches that we can judge a t by its fruit." I asked him to find the scripture wh this is taught. And this is what we found—Chris words—"For the tree is known by his fruit" (Ma 12: 33). There is a vast difference between judgi and knowing. If I taste an apple and find it sour know that the tree that bore it is a sour apple tr When I say so, I am not judging but am speaking a fact that I know. If I see a man stagger out o saloon, with a red-blossomed nose, puffy cheeks, a bleared eyes, finally tumbling into a ditch, I know have seen a drunken man, and when I tell that, I not judging him, I am speaking because I know. would seem that the reason Jesus told us not to jud is, because now we do not know all. "For now we through a glass darkly; but then face to face: now know in part; but then shall I know even as also I known" (1 Cor. 13: 12).

For years the writer has been trying his best not think evil and speak evil of any one, and never to

"WHEN the Son of man cometh shall he find fa on the earth?" What is the answer, yes or no? I it ever occur to you that the answer depends, in so measure, on what you do about it? And in a v large measure on what you, and others like you, about it?

Did Jesus ask the question for his own informatio Did he want to know, and did he expect somebody his audience to tell him? Or was it his purpose to his hearers and their successors ever afterward to d cussing it and deciding it so they would know whet it was of any use to try to be Christians themselves to try to make Christians out of other people? Or, least, so they would know about how many it would worth while to try to reach? Or was it the purpose Jesus to impress everybody with a sense of perso responsibility for the answer?

When the question was asked, there was not mu Christian faith on the earth. It is pleasant to kn that there is more now than there was then. But it a very solemn thing to reflect that there is not as mu as there might be. Not as much as there would be every professing Christian had been a faithful ambi sador of Christ. Even more solemn and much mo worth attention is the fact that the amount of fa there will be on the earth in years to come is in o hands. We can change it. It isn't a fixed quanti It depends.

Not more than two of the six city churches have a membership of over fifty. The majority of the members of the twelve village churches live in the open country.

With the above facts spread out before us, let us draw some practical conclusions. In the first place, allow us to use Iowa as a fair sample of what exists in the Church of the Brethren throughout the United States. The history of church work in Iowa is largely the history of the rural church. The problems the church has to solve, at the present time, are rural problems. The Forward Movement of the church in Iowa is almost wholly concerned with the church of the open country. The evangelistic work of the church is vitally related to the rural life in the vicinity of the churches of the State. The new recruits for the ministry will come largely from the farms.

What the churches of Iowa need most—and this is true of the whole Brotherhood—is a vision of the possibilities of the rural field of America. We have always been a rural church. Our greatest work, lying just ahead of us, is to be done in the country. Our church is peculiarly adapted to the country. We have been, in recent years, losing much valuable time in trying to adapt ourselves to the city, to the neglect of the development of the country work. We need to go on adapting our work to the city, but, at the same time, we should keep a firm grip upon systematizing and developing the best methods of carrying on the country work. We need to lay firm hold upon the rural problem and work it out in a practical way. Which of all the denominations of America have any better claim upon the distinction of solving the rural church problem than the Church of the Brethren?

What we need, right now, in the Forward Movement of the church, is to lay plans for the training of men who will feel that there is just as much heroism, and just as much sacrifice, and just as much favor, in the sight of God, in giving themselves to the work of the church in the open country and in the villages of America, as there is in training for missinn work in India or China.

We need men who have taken thorough courses in schools, fitting them in a special manner for this rural work. The country church is worthy of as well-trained men as the city church. Why not emphasize the training of men for the work which is still the backbone of our church life?

These trained men should be willing to offer themselves for the rural work of the home field just as they do for the foreign field, eliminating all idea of commercialism. They should go to the field with no other thought than to receive a living and to stay in the work for life. The church should make it possible for them to do this by making ample provisions for the education of their children, and also making provision for sickness and other possible needs of their families.

It is high time for the church to become active in a survey of our resources. Such a survey will reveal the fact that the hope of our church lies in our solving the rural problem. The backbone of foreign missions lies in the country church of America. The hope of foreign missions lies finally in the systematic care we take, in strengthening the home base.

Efficiency

BY S. Z. SHARP

EFFICIENT-work is thorough, accurate, complete and nn time. It is best illustrated in the works of the Creator. As the universe was created, step by step, the Creator pronounced each day's work good. It was efficient. This is still displayed in the wonderful accuracy with which the planets revolve in their orbits through the countless ages. When we turn to the testimony of the rocks and notice that it accords with the testimony of the Bible, and when we observe the higher order of species in each successive age until they reach the highest type in the creation of man, we are filled with wonder and amazement at the grand and sublime plan of creation and its perfect execution on the principle of "going on to perfection" and the efficiency with which it was done.

Not only is efficiency displayed in all of God's works, but he requires that man's work shall he efficient also. This is illustrated in the manner in which the tabernacle was to be built and its services performed. Under the law of Moses, accuracy and precision was required in everything. To many a slight violation, the death penalty was affixed. Moses himself, who was one of the meekest of men, and who served God with great fidelity for forty years, was prohibited from entering the promised land because he struck the rock when he should have spoken to it only. His work in that one case was not efficient.

When the Israelites were commanded to destroy the city of Jericho, with all its inhabitants and every living thing in it except Rahab and her family, and to place the gold, silver, brass and iron into the Lord's treasury, Achan, an Israelite, coveted a Babylonish mantle, some silver and a wedge of gold. These he hid in his tent. For this violation of the divine command, the Lord gave them into the hands of their enemies, when they attempted to conquer the next city, Ai. Such was the rigor with which the law of Moses was carried out that Achan, with all his family, flocks and herds, and all that he had, was utterly destroyed, before the Lord would grant the people a further victory.

For want of doing his work efficiently, King Saul lost his kingdom. The Lord commanded Saul to take his army and utterly destroy the Amalekites, who so cruelly harassed the Israelites as they came from Egypt. The work was to be done thoroughly and completely—not a living being, whether of man or beast, was to be spared. King Saul took his army and destroyed all the people except their king, Agag, whom he kept alive as a trophy. The best of the cattle he also saved, to sacrifice them at Gilgal, and have a great feast. He reasoned: "What is the difference whether we slay the animals in the land of the Amalekites or at Gilgal?—they will be killed all the same." On his return home, the Lord's prophet, Samuel, met Saul and told him that "stubbornness is as idolatry." "Behold, as thou hast rejected the word of Jehovah, he has also rejected thee from being king." From the foregoing we see how much value the Lord attached to efficiency under the Mosaic law.

In all human activities, such as the trades, manufactures, transportation, explorations and the learned professions, efficiency is the goal for which each one is striving, and its importance is admitted. In illustration we give this incident: A manufacturer had a large number of hands employed. Once, when his machinery became out of order, the work stopped, but the wages of the hands went on. A blacksmith was sent for, to make the necessary repairs, but he failed. Then an expert machinist was engaged, who had the machinery running in an hour. He was asked what his bill was and he said: "Twenty-five dollars." The manufacturer was surprised and asked for an itemized bill. The engineer wrote: "For repairing machinery, one dollar; for knowing how, twenty-four dollars Total, twenty-five dollars."

The engineer on the railroad must prove his efficiency before he is entrusted with the lives of the passengers. Lawyers and doctors must reach a certain degree of proficiency before they are permitted to practice their professions. In public schools, colleges and universities, each teacher is graded according to his ability, and is granted a certificate or diploma as a voucher of such proficiency.

Our great artists—such as musicians or composers, painters, sculptors and architects, whose works stand the test of critics for ages, and are the admiration of thousands—owe their reputation to their efficiency.

In nothing is efficiency so important as in religion. It takes the highest rank in this world and its influence extends to the world beyond. The Bible teaches it. The Israelites were required to do thorough work in teaching religion to their children. The command to the Israelites was: "Thou shalt teach the commandments diligently to thy children and shalt talk of them when thou sittest in thy house, and when thou walkest by the way, and when thou liest down, and when thou risest up." Eccl. 9: 10 says: "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might." Heb. 6: 1 says "Leaving the doctrine of the first principles of Christ, let us press on unto perfection." The last instruction that Christ gave to his disciples, while he was yet on earth, was: "Make disciples of all the nations, . . . teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I commanded you."

To obtain greater efficiency in all our church work, the Church of the Brethren entered upon a "Five-Year Forward Movement," by means of our General Boards and District Boards. The General Mission Board is the great power-house that supplies force and direction to the mission work in India and China, and in the home fields. The Educational Board stimulates and coördinates the work in our colleges, and especially so far as it pertains to the education of our ministers and missionaries. The Sunday School Board is the life and soul of our Sunday-school work, in furnishing us the Sunday-school literature and increasing efficiency in the individual schools. To increase the efficiency in our Christian Workers' Societies, a special board has been appointed.

The grandest example of efficient Christian work, found in all history, is that of the apostle Paul. Compared with all the other apostles, he "labored more than they all." Nothing could stop him. When persecuted in one city he fled to another. When stoned, and dragged out of the city of Lystra, and supposed to be dead, he got up as soon as his enemies had left him, and began to preach in Derbe. He surmounted every obstacle. When scourged with the Roman lash at Philippi, and cast into prison, at midnight he sang and prayed, and, lo, the prison was shaken, the prison doors flew open, and the jailer was converted and baptized. He ran the gamut of every form of trials. "In stripes above measure, in deaths oft. Of the Jews five times received I forty stripes save one. Thrice was I beaten with rods, once was I stoned, thrice I suffered shipwreck, . . . in perils of rivers, in perils of robbers, . . . in perils in the wilderness, in perils among false brethren." In concluding his most heroic career he could say: "I am already being offered, and the time of my departure is come. I have fought the good fight, I have finished the course, I have kept the faith; henceforth there is laid up for me the crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give to me at that day."

"Lives of great men all remind us
We can make our lives sublime,
And departing, leave behind us
Footprints on the sands of time."

Trust in God

BY JOHN E. MOHLER

IN the days now at hand, mankind at large will no doubt experience great suffering. A few may hedge against it and stave off the evil day, but sooner or later all must feel the violation of the laws of God. The only way of certain triumph, over all conditions which bring suffering, is in trust in God. He will not fail those who trust in him, but with every trial will make a way of escape.

How this is possible, may be illustrated by recent natural events. During the death struggle of national life, men developed their own natural resources to meet the foe, who thereupon resorted to new and more effectual methods of destroying life. When deadly gas was employed, it was met by masks with neutralizing chemicals for the air that had to be breathed. When submarines sought to keep our soldiers from crossing the ocean, they were made ineffectual by convoying our ships fully protected. Upon every hand a new invention of destruction was met by resources, hitherto latent or unknown to man. Each successive occasion called forth thought and power to meet each new feature of attack. Without this fertility of mind, to meet aggressive warfare, the aggressors would have been the victors. Therefore, in the last analysis, the conflict was one of mind against mind, and the most resourceful won.

As a result of man's transgression of the laws of God, the powers of darkness have been let loose, and an enemy, whose resources can not be fathomed by man, is ruling in great power To those who perceive asked to accept Christ through faith and obedience? Certain conditions were laid down for Naaman, but one ever thinks of calling these conditions a price. l yet, the very instant that mention is made of h, repentance, confession and baptism, as a condi- there is talk about a price being placed on pardon. ten the physician tells his patient to take one of the e white tablets every two hours, two brown ones ore retiring, and to keep quiet a day or two, is any so lacking in reason as to claim that the sick ient, in complying with the directions of the doctor, paying a price for his restoration to health? A two lar bill may be the price for the doctor's visit, but s the man, in the act of taking his medicine, pay a ce? If he does not, then, by what process of rea- ing, can it be shown that the believer who repents l is baptized, pays the price of his pardon?

One more illustration should settle any dispute on s point. When Saul was experiencing the deepest sible conviction, he was told by an inspired preacher "arise and be baptized, and wash away thy sins, ling on the name of the Lord" (Acts 22: 16). In uiring him to submit to the external act of baptism, Paul ever, in any period of his life, accuse Ananias placing a price on his pardon? In Acts 9: 18 we d that Saul "arose, and was baptized." Did he, in act of baptism, think that he was paying a price? d if Paul did not think there was any price-paying his baptism, as one of the conditions of pardon, why it that when we insist on baptism we are accused of cing a price on pardon? How is it that the act of ptism, as one of the New Testament conditions of rdon, is now regarded as a price set on pardon, while inspired men of the New Testament times never eamed of branding any Gospel requirement as such?

Then, too, bear in mind that Paul, who was told to ise and be baptized, was the very man who wrote out the just living by faith, and about being saved grace, through faith. Did he mean to find fault th Ananias for demanding baptism of him? Or is not misinterpreted by those who are pressing the ctrine of justification by faith, independent of obe- ence? Whenever we see an article in which is taught lvation by grace, independent of what was required Paul at his conversion, or independent of what was manded of the three thousand, converted on the Day Pentecost, we are led to conclude that both Paul d Peter are being misunderstood and misrepresented.

True, Paul does teach, referring to the saints whom was addressing, that "by grace are ye saved through ith: and that not of yourselves; it is the gift of God, ot of works" (Eph. 2: 8, 9). The pronoun "ye" eans those who had complied with the conditions of rdon, and not those who had deliberately neglected em. In this connection note what Paul wrote in eb. 5: 9, where we have this, referring to Christ: Being made perfect, he became the author of eternal lvation unto all them that obey him." Who are aved by grace? There can be but one logical answer: Those who obey him." Since Jesus is the Author of ternal salvation, unto all those who obey him, it fol- ows that there is no eternal salvation independent of bedience. Hence, what Paul writes about salvation y grace, can be applied solely to those who believe and bey, or those whose faith includes obedience.

To interpret the doctrine of salvation by grace, or ustification by faith, in any other light, means confu- ion. It is also misleading to insist on clearly-stated Gospel conditions of pardon being a price set on par- lon. Gospel obedience is not a price. The things commanded may be conditions, but in no Bible sense an they be called a price. To do so is to do injustice o the teachings of inspired men.

In nothing is efficiency so important as in religio It takes the highest rank in this world and its influen extends to the world beyond. The Bible teaches the extent of this power, the situation is one to strike terror to the human heart, but to the person who knows the true God, there is surety in placing their trust in him. And this trust must be analogous to the trust that the men of the nations had in the late struggle of the world war. As they had trust in the powers within themselves, in inventive genius and methods of battle, so must the ones who trust in God have faith in the God within themselves, to meet all darkness and evil, and to triumph in joy. Such alone can escape the calamity of earth, which will try the souls of men from every angle.

God within man is the moving Cause that can bring into the mind of man the wisdom necessary to meet all conditions that threaten to destroy. God within man is a Spirit of holy boldness, that can meet without fear all that threatens. God within man is Love, that can keep man sweet and forgiving and gentle towards all anger and evil. God within man is the Light that must light the ways of the world into a perfect solution of the world problem before the nations of the earth. God within man is the Resource that must keep him from poverty when obstacles would withhold the material things of life. God within man is the Health that must flood the body to prevent contagion and the scourge of disease which stalks the earth.

Such a God within man is impossible except in the Person of Jesus Christ, man's Savior and Redeemer. He is the only One who has overcome the world in human flesh. He is the only One who is able to bring such power into the flesh of living man. Only by strengthening Christ within self, can man have a God within him who will give him triumph over every possible obstacle of spirit, of health, or of prosperity. This is the hope of the world in the days that are at hand. Then, shall we not strengthen this God within us with all our might?

How is this done? First, by knowing " the true God, and Jesus Christ " whom he hath sent. This is " eternal life " within. (See John 17: 3.) Second, by trusting Christ within. Third, by continual praise, in heart, and much in voice, of Christ within, to give him strength over our mind and body, to rule us in thought and health and action, that the man of God may be thoroughly furnished in every conflict of life.

Christ tells us: " Behold! The kingdom of heaven is within you." It is this kingdom within that he wishes to rule, and for this purpose be declared: " And lo! I am with you alway, even unto the end."

Obeying the Commands of God

BY H. A. BRUBAKER

OBEDIENCE to God's commands is dependent upon our relationship to him; our loving him (John 14: 15, R. V.); and our knowing him (1 John 2: 3, R. V.). The better we become acquainted with an individual with a lovable character, the more we love that individual, and delight ourselves in performing loving deeds and tasks, asked of us by the individual we have learned to love.

God first loved us, and he so loved us, that he gave the best he had in heaven for us (John 3: 16). But he did not stop with the Greatest Gift possible, to give to man. He also continues to give every needful blessing to meet the smallest need of man. How can we help but love him and obey the loving tasks asked of us!

All the desires of God for us are recorded in his Word, and obedience to them is all that is necessary for our salvation. As an organization, the Church of the Brethren has always taken great pride in the fact that our founders formulated no creed, but took the Bible as our standard of Christian life. We claim to live so near the teachings of the Word, that many times we have heard the statement: " If I can find a church living nearer the Bible than ours, I will affiliate with that body of believers." That statement should possibly be the attitude of every follower of Christ, but a question arises in my mind as to what is most likely to be the prompting motive. I rather doubt if we have in mind all of the commands of the Word.

We are often interrogated as to what church we belong to, and we are always pleased to reply: " The Church of the Brethren.' We are glad to say that our faith and practices are: " Trine immersion, as taught by Christ; feet-washing, the Lord's supper and the communion, as instituted by Christ; Scriptural precepts regarding nonresistance, nonswearing, nonsecrecy; Paul's teaching on the salutation; nonconformity to the world in regard to dress; we are law-abiding citizens and do not go to law; we do not believe in the divorce evil; we are pure in motives and temperate in life."

The teachings and commands, enumerated above, are surely to be taught and obeyed, but not to be made the supreme commands of God. We are very careful, in instructing applicants for baptism, to see to it that not one of the above items is omitted. And might it not be that we are largely alluding to the same teachings and commands, when we speak of living up to what the Bible teaches? And if we are not very careful we will say, in action if not in words, " Upon these hang the whole teaching, law and discipline of our church." And they have, in far too great a measure, become a creed to us.

We now desire to call attention to the supreme command of God, upon which hangs the law and the prophets: Matt. 22: 36. Love to God, with all the soul, heart and mind, is THE essential thing in the Christian life. Without this essential, baptism, feet-washing, partaking of the communion and many of these other things, in which we almost place our faith, would be but a mockery, and avail nothing to spiritual growth.

Jesus said: " The second is like unto the first " (Matt. 22: 39; cf. Luke 6: 31, " Love thy neighbor as thyself). Above all others this command is the most difficult to fulfill. We say it is impossible to love some people. Listen again to Jesus (John 13: 35), " By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one for another." Also 1 John 4: 20, " He that loveth not his brother whom he hath seen, cannot love God whom he hath not seen." Christ concluded these two supreme commands with this significant statement: " Upon these hang the law and the prophets." Let us remember that obedience to all other commands will not avail us unless we first render obedience to the greatest. How much more effective our preaching and teaching would be, if the principle of love—to God and fellow-man—were first implanted in the spiritual nature of those under our leadership.

Some more positive commands, which are receiving too little attention, are the following: Matt. 6: 33: Seeking possession of God's Kingdom to receive first place in life, and then an earnest endeavor to get others into that service of the Kingdom (Matt. 9: 38). 1 Cor. 16: 2: " Upon the first day of the week, let every one of you lay by him in store as the Lord hath prospered him." Were we to obey this command for just one year, what would the results be? Instead of giving as we have been prospered, we have been and are loving what the Lord has given us. " Be ye free from the love of money; content with such things as ye have " (Heb. 13: 5, R. V.).

So little stress is placed upon many of the commands, that they are scarcely recognized as such. Perhaps many of the following come under that head: " Be ye holy as I am holy." Many of us are as afraid of holiness as we are of sin. " Be ye perfect as your heavenly Father is perfect." " Be ye stedfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord." " Let no corrupt communication proceed out of your mouth, but that which is edifying, that it may minister grace to the hearers." " Be not anxious for your life, what ye shall eat, or what ye shall drink, nor yet for your body, what ye shall put on." " Do all to the honor and the glory of God." " Leaving the first principles of Christ's doctrine, let us press on."

We have cited only a few of the commands affecting our every-day life, in exemplifying our love to God and our fellow-men. As a church, we have been exacting in our legislation and discipline in a few of the commands, until, in many localities, the importance of the great commands is lost sight of. Let us give each its rightful place in our spiritual life. Why is it that we are so often severe in our discipline upon those who are offenders, or are disobedient to some of the commands, when at the same time, perhaps—and too often it is true—those administering the discipline are guilty of disobedience to some other command, but nothing is said because the church does not have a ruling on that particular one? It has never seemed fair to us, to enforce discipline upon others who do not live up to the commands I am obeying, while, at the same time, I do not want anything said about my deficiency regarding other commands.

Jesus, very forcibly, rebuked the Pharisees in Matt. 23: 23, 24: " Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites, for ye tithe mint and anise and cummin, and have left undone the weightier matters of the law, justice, and mercy, and faith: but these ye ought to have done, and not to have left the other undone. Ye blind guides, that strain out the gnat, and swallow the camel."

Were Jesus to visit us today, would he speak as strongly in denunciation of our present practices? Would he restate James 2: 10, regarding those offending in one point, being guilty of all? Are any of us guilty? Will we get right with God?

Divine Victuals

CHRIST gave himself for the life of the world. His flesh is meat indeed, as he says. He that eateth thereof shall live, because of Christ's assurance. There has been theological effort made to define the idea of eating the flesh of Jesus, and exhaustive attempts have been made to identify the communion wafer, or bread, with the body—the flesh of Jesus Christ. After all, the conclusions do not prove wholly satisfactory, particularly not after more recent researches. Doubtless the communion was instituted to remind the partaker that there is something serious and vital in the purposes and experiences of Jesus. Eating must mean partaking, consuming, assimilating. The flesh tabernacled, manifested, and was made real to the senses. It bore the burdens of the labor, and suffered the stress of inconveniences. It felt the persecutions and afflictions and was crucified.

To eat Christ's flesh is to enter into his being, live again what he lived, suffer again as he suffered the disappointments incident to saving humanity. " If any man would come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me. For whosoever would save his life shall lose it: and whosoever shall lose his life for my sake shall find it." That means digesting and assimilating his flesh. " If so be that we suffer with him, that we may be also glorified with him." Every Christian knows that there is an antagonism which he must bravely meet and overcome. That is eating the flesh of the Son. Read Rom. 6: 1-11.

Christ said: " I have meat to eat that ye know not of. My meat is to do the will of him that sent me, and to finish his work." " My Father giveth you the true bread from heaven. The bread of God is he which cometh down from heaven, and giveth life unto the world." " My Father worketh even until now, and I work." This is clearly different from the suffering, disappointment and pain attending the work of the righteous. It is the work, engagement and employ of preaching the Gospel, of declaring the good tidings of life, of impressing the virtues of divine life on the attention of others. The bread is the Christ, as a worker. The Gospel is a regenerative agency. The Christian is a vitalizing factor. Righteousness, truth, and holiness in our lives serve as a divine preservative.

Again Christ says: " Whosoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall never thirst; but the water that I shall give him shall become in him a well of water springing up unto eternal life." This again can be thought distinct from either the " flesh " or the " bread." It should be viewed as a cooling, calming, refreshing, cheering and satisfying agency or accompaniment in the Christian association. It is a personal realization of Divine Presence, Guidance and Help. It indicates the joy, peace and resignation experienced in the association and fellowship of the children of God. It is the zest of the whole Christian economy—that which appeals to our personal craving for something satisfactory.

" The tree of life also in the midst of the garden."

This signified that out of the very heart of human hopes grew the personification of a higher ideal. Out of it also crystallized the personalization of the Christian's absorbing pursuit and engagement. The tree of life—that which matured and bore fruit with his every effort—was the sum of his suffering, his ministry and the joy of his fellowship. It bore fruit—love, peace, respect, contentment, clear conscience, pure life, a group of happy, healthy children, a clean business record, the admiration of the poor, the presence in his home of the Divine Trinity, a happy judgment and the crown of righteousness.

The Word of Life is the New Testament—the book the Christian daily reads for his enlightenment and comfort.

The Spirit of life is that force in a Christian's own being and nature by which he recognizes the Father and the Son.

The crown of life is the certificate of divine approval. It is largely made up of our Christed pursuits and deeds. It is the grand summary of our labors. It is the announcement to the host of heaven of our fidelity to God.

Satan Cast Out of Heaven

BY J. HARMAN STOVER

THIS expression, "Satan was once cast out of heaven," has occurred several times lately in the GOSPEL MESSENGER. The first thought that arises, when reading the expression, with the emphasis on "was once cast out," is, "When was he cast out?" Then other questions, throwing light on the event—such as to his origin, his fall, his present limitations, his powers and his final destiny—arise.

While the Scriptures may not be clear upon each and all of these queries, yet we think that revelation concerning his Satanic majesty and his relationship to God, the saint and the passing ages, is not so obscure as to justify some very popular notions concerning the whole question.

Very quick and hearty answers were obtained by a minister from his large congregation upon the following questions:

1. Who was Satan? "An angel of light," was answered in chorus.
2. What changed him into a devil? "He rebelled against God," "He made war in heaven," "He was a liar," and several other answers were given.
3. What became of him then? "Michael fought with him and cast him out," was the ready response, and seemingly unanimous.
4. When did this occur—in what age of the world? "Before the world was made," came readily. "He was the 'son of the morning,'" said one.
5. Where has he been since? "In hell" (meaning Gehenna). This was unanimous, some quoting Scripture about the place "prepared for the devil and his angels."
6. What is to be his final destiny? "An angel is to come down from heaven and bind him and cast him into the bottomless pit," was readily given.

Now a scripture may be quoted, to prove the claims expressed in these answers, with about as much truth sustained, as to quote from Second Kings that Solomon built the temple and "pitched it within and without," using Gen. 6: 14 (Noah finishing the ark) to prove how it was finished, or to quote Christ's "Simon, son of Jona" to prove that the apostle Simon Peter was a son of the great Nineveh evangelist.

Isa. 14: 12-17 evidently refers to the severing of filial relations that once existed between God and Satan, but it does not, in the verses here cited, even intimate that Satan personally was separated or limited in his full liberty and perfect freedom of access to an easy and ready communication with God, granted to other privileged beings.

Let us see: We find Satan among the sons of God in their assembly, freely reporting to God of his going

It was evidently through Satan's leadership that, a few hundred years, he had the earth filled with This, finally, terminated in the destruction of the with a flood. It is clear inference that he is so m of a deity that he was immune from the destruct he had brought upon the race he had deceived ruined, for no sooner had Noah landed and set to cultivation and homesteading of the earth, than Sat diabolical work began, and has not yet ceased.

In the New Testament, Satan is four times de nated as the "Prince of this world," and once as "Prince of the power of the air." He is known many names. The terms "dragon," "serpent" "devil" are shown, in Rev. 12: 9, to be this same Satan.

He has power to tempt humanity, and even temp the Christ in the days of his incarnation. He can ter, by agency at least, into man, or into swine. has power to withstand a nation as he withstood Is (1 Chron. 21: 1). He has power to withstand great immediate invisible messengers of God as Gab (Zech. 3: 1, 2 and Jude 9). In this case the po of Satan is shown by the fact that the angel w not rebuke Satan, but called upon the Lord to reb him. Now, when we begin to note this powe enemy of God and man, it is no play upon word refer to him as a lion seeking to devour. And we w der, at least, why God has taken six thousand y to subdue him. To read: "He [Christ] must r till he hath put all enemies under his feet," would gest that Satan has not yet been put under him, in consummation.

It is quite clear that Satan fully superintended rejection, the trial, the condemnation and the c fixion (when God had determined to let him—Chri go), and he, no doubt, thought he had prevailed, in the resurrection lies the victory over him and de Here is the hope and safety of the saints—even "earnest of our inheritance." We are "sealed that Holy Spirit of promise, which is the earnes our inheritance until the redemption of the purch possession unto the praise of his glory." As lon the saint "abides," he is safe and free from Satan, the "nations" are up against his machinations in e conceivable way, and he has access to saint and si in a power to tempt and harass as long as we ar the flesh.

Now as to the casting out, Rev. 12: 7-12 is the direct reference to that event. And how that cita can be placed in ante-world times, is unjustifiable terpretation to any course of reasoning that claim place events in a plausible chronology.

Even the citation from Isaiah, referred to above, clearly its double of historic record and of prop perspective, for that prophecy, in its context, refe future events. But in the citation from Revela after John was shown the past and present, and told to write it, he was instructed to "come up hith and was shown and told specifically to record what to come to pass "hereafter." John saw the visio the year 96.

Now the scripture here cited speaks of a "wom and a "child," neither of which are under discus in this article—both symbols of some institution persons, or both. But how can we symbolize Satan his relation to these and make it less a fact than he, personal Satan, viciously attacked the work plans of God, to destroy them, and was "CAST O (verses 7-9)? And as to time, this occurred long a the things shown to John, as coming upon the ea had happened.

It is not sufficient to assert that an event, prophe of, has happened because its fulfillment is referre in the prophecy in a certain consecutive order, for things, as there stated, are sometimes the last in scale of their fulfillment. It was true of the three

THE ROUND TABLE

The Right of Way

BY IDA M. HELM

"Make ye ready the way of the Lord. Make his paths straight" (Mark 1: 3).

TODAY each one of us should be willing to be a way over which Jesus shall come to our friends, to our neighbors, to our homes. Give Jesus the right of way It will cost us something, but it's a priceless privilege that we can not afford to miss, no matter what it costs.

When President Garfield was shot, he was taken to an isolated home, where he could have absolute quiet and rest in his fight for life, and a special railway was constructed to facilitate the bringing of doctors, nurses and loved ones to his bedside. The railroad, as the engineers laid it out, ran directly through a farmer's front yard. The farmer refused to grant the right of way, until they explained to him that it was for the President. Then the farmer exclaimed: "Why, if that railroad is for the President, you may run it right through my house."

Are we willing to give Jesus the right of way through our house? It may run right through our most cherished room, through our plans, our business appointments, our social engagements and feasts. It may necessitate the removal of some of our social pleasures, it may require us to turn square around and face the other way.

There are many ways of making ready the way of the Lord. An act of sympathy may do it, a letter may do it, perhaps a song or a smile and a kind word may be sufficient, or it may require a heart full of charity. Charity suffereth long and is kind. Are we willing to give Jesus the right of way?

"First Things First"

BY G. W. TUTTLE

HERE is a Kingdom-motto, a life-expander, a harvest-bringer: "First things first." First the Kingdom; then the service of the Kingdom; then the blessings of the Kingdom, as surely as light follows darkness. There is nothing new or unique or original in these words. Did not Paul say the same thing in different words? "For I determined not to know anything among you, save Jesus Christ, and him crucified."

"First things first." Fine furnishing and great thoughts for the soul, before added luxuries for bodily ease—the substance before the stabling of life. The prayer meeting before the auto ride; the Sabbath-school before the quiet hour for reading, or the restful walk; the missionary collection before the unnecessary pleasures; the smile of God before the approval of men.

The Kingdom is life. Here is a Kingdom whose key-note is life. How different from some of the great world conquerors! What heartless words are the words credited to Napoleon: "One must break a few eggs in order to have an omelette"; referring, as they did, to the sacrifice of soldiers. The ruler of our Kingdom says: "The very hairs of your head are all numbered." Alexander wept because there were no more worlds to conquer and enemies to slay—wept because he could not bring death. Christ wept because men would not come unto him that they might have life. What a contrast! What a Kingdom! Yes, the Kingdom is life—rich, flowing, abundant life that radiates from man to man, from needy soul to needy soul, from nation to nation. Here is the supreme need of the soul—the Kingdom. Here the restless soul finds rest, the homeless soul a home.

The Kingdom is knowledge. Knowledge, how it flows in! Knowledge of our sins, knowledge of God's mercy, knowledge that we are the almoners of his bounty and the objects of his love. How knowledge of the needs of those about us unfolds! We have been so blind to our neighbor's virtues, so short-sighted, that we could not see his burdens, but now God has enlightened us. "He who was common in our eyes has become uncommon." we say, as we admire his virtues and lift on his burdens. All life is transformed when the Kingdom comes in.

The Kingdom is love. Listen to the words of the Master: "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends. Ye are my friends, if ye do whatsoever I command you." The wings of love and prayer will waft the Gospel to all nations as well as to the heart of our neighbor.

Temptation

BY VIOLA FRISER

MUCH has been said and written on the subject of temptation, and it is not to be wondered at, for the enemy of mankind has been given power to tempt every man, woman and child that has reached the age of accountability. Yes, even the children of God are not exempted. Many he has ultimately slain by the use of them.

There are many kinds of temptation. We will speak of two. Those of one kind appear so innocent and harmless and yet under their influence, many have been led on down to destruction. Then there are others that appear large as mountains, so to speak, and if we are not prayerful and trustful, immediately these inspire fear and distrust, which is, of itself, sin.

Any of the temptations, if yielded to, destroy, to a certain extent, the good influence of a Christian, cripple his usefulness, and grieve our dear Savior.

"Does Jesus care when I've tried and failed
To resist some temptation strong?
When in my deep grief I find no relief,
Though my tears flow all the night long?

"O yes, he cares, I know he cares,
His heart is touched with my grief;
When the days are weary,
The long nights dreary,
I know my Savior cares."

Yes, as the failure to overcome sin, means deep grief, loss of influence for good, and, perhaps, the loss of one's own soul, or the soul of some other person, because of the influence that has been given on the side of wrong, why shouldn't our Savior care?

But, oh, how he does sympathize with us! He knows from experience that we must not only "watch and pray," but that we must fight sometimes, in order to overcome. Yes, fight against our enemy, the tempter, until our strength is almost gone. But, praise God, he will renew our strength and he who made Jesus victorious in the wilderness, so many years ago, will also give us the victory if we bravely do our part. And when the fight is over and the victory won, Satan will leave us for a season and angels—no, not angels, perhaps, but saints of God, who, we are told, are infinitely above the angels, will come, if necessary and minister to our needs. May we not, then, accept the advice which is given in the following lines, which we use in song and which, in this instance, we will revise a little:

Yield not to temptation, for yielding is sin,
Each victory will help me some other to win;
Fight manfully onward, dark passions subdue.
Look ever to Jesus, he'll carry ME through.

Shun evil companions, bad language disdain,
God's name hold in reverence, nor take it in vain,
Be thoughtful and earnest, kindhearted and true,
Look ever to Jesus, he'll carry ME through.

To him that o'ercometh, God giveth a crown,
Through faith we shall conquer, tho' often cast down,
He who is our Savior, our strength will renew,
Look ever to Jesus, he'll carry ME through.

Chorus

Ask the Savior to help me,
Comfort, strength and keep me:
He is willing to aid me,
He will carry ME through.

"Selling One's Self"

BY A. E. HECKER

DID you ever sell yourself? Maybe not. Did you ever sell your services? Most of us have been in the employ of some one else at some time, in our life. Our object was the remuneration that we or our family expected to receive. Before going to work, the wage was probably stipulated. When there were several parties whom we could work for, we usually decided in favor of the one paying the most. In other words, we sold our services to the highest bidder. A day is a fraction of our life. Therefore, when we sold our services, we were really selling our lives at so much per day, month, or year, as the case may have been. Taken as a whole, what is your life worth and what are you getting in return? When cornered on the field of battle, the soldier makes the enemy pay as dearly for his life as his gun, ammunition and time will permit.

Spiritual life should be sold in much the same manner. Simon Peter came dangerously near selling out his spiritual inheritance, getting not even so much as a mess of pottage in payment. He was one of the loved disciples and in close fellowship with Jesus. Yet, in an hour of fear, he denied his Master three times, and when he realized what he had done, he wept bitterly. But there was one other of the disciples whose end was not so happy as Peter's later turned out to be. That one was Judas Iscariot. He thought he could sell Jesus. Instead, he only betrayed him, and sold himself and his inheritance in eternal life for thirty pieces of silver.

Eternal life! Valued by Judas at thirty pieces of silver! What value have you placed on it? How much have you invested in it in time, money, or service? That is the measure of your value. Paul's value was a life-time of service. Like the soldier on the battle-field, he sold his life dearly. As we come on down through history we see the value that Luther, Wesley, Livingstone, Moody, and scores of other missionaries have placed upon eternal life, and at the expense of sin—how dearly they sold themselves in behalf of the Kingdom. How are you selling yourself? To whom are you selling yourself? What is the price? And last of all, has your sale been a benefit to the Kingdom?

The Coming Jewish Commonwealth in Palestine

BY M. M. ESHELMAN

OCT. 6 we had the pleasure of listening to Mr. Rosenthal, who, with Mr. Brandeis, Associate Justice of the United States Supreme Court, recently returned from Palestine, having made a thorough investigation, with a view of creating a Jewish commonwealth.

They also spent some time in Paris and London, with the notables who are formulating the Peace Treaty. As no Treaty has yet been signed with Turkey, nothing can be done in a stabilized manner at this time. Great Britain will act as trustee for Palestine. It is befitting that Ephraim should assist Judah in this wonderful reconstruction, in harmony with Hebrew prophecy. In the meantime the Zionist organization, the three tribes of Israel (Judah, Benjamin and Levi, now known as the Jews) will undertake the colonization of the land. This organization now has $1,500,000 and will need next year $5,000,000 for sanitation, road construction and schools. The first thing, asked by this organization, of Great Britain, was the assurance of the Mosaical Sabbath, and this was guaranteed them by Mr. Balfour of England.

During the war 3,500 young Jews, natives of the United States, volunteered for service in Palestine and served under Gen. Allenby, with the assurance that they were to have land in Palestine at the conclusion of the war. No treaty having yet been signed, this agreement can not be carried out. But the Zionists purchased 2,000 acres of land, and by a Board of Selection chose one hundred young Jews, to be placed on the land. The plan is so arranged that there can be neither oppression nor strikes. It is remarkable that the Jews were the first to settle this vexed problem.

The land is yet owned, one-fifth by the Sultan of Turkey, one-fifth by Mohammedans and three-fifths by the Shepherd Barons of Arabia. These latter are the big bosses of the country. This land question, no doubt, will be settled in the treaty with Turkey.

The geology of the country indicates that a good supply of oil can be obtained, with some copper and asphalt. No other minerals have thus far been located. Extensive irrigation projects will be developed. The 20,000 square miles in Palestine will sustain 12,000,000 people. There are now in the land about 90,000 Jews, 100,000 Christians and 500,000 Mohammedans.

The plan of government under Great Britain, while not interfering with the rights of Christians and Mohammedans in religion and citizenship, will embrace such features as will be strictly Jewish or Israelitish. The prophecies demand this.

The land is protected from exploitation by any man or class of men by the issuing of land certificates, which are limited, so that no large body of land can pass into the hands of any corporation for exploitation.

The first colony of 100, out of the 3,500, is named Balfourean, in honor of Mr. Balfour, of England, who has charge of the treaty stipulations. This name was chosen by the colonists after securing the consent of Mr. Balfour.

Already leading Jews are considering with Great Britain the annexation of Mesopotamia to Palestine. This must and will come, for God said to Abraham in Genesis 15: 18: "Unto thy seed have I given this land, from the river of Egypt, unto the great river, the river Euphrates." As this has never yet been accomplished by and for the promised seed of Abraham (the twelve tribes of Israel according to Ezekiel 48) the beginning is in view. The land has been almost dormant, except for pasturage, for centuries, and now is exceedingly fertile. Nothing can stop its onward, wonderful development, for God is the leading Partner of Israel. Great Britain and the United States are deeply involved in this prophetic infillment and fulfillment. Mr. Rosenthal will become a citizen of Palestine and a leader in the reconstruction.

God's Pulpits

BY MRS. WALTER SELL

A QUESTION is asked in 1 Cor. 6: 19: "What? know ye not that your body is the temple of the Holy Ghost which is in you, which ye have of God, and ye are not your own?"

Can every child of God truthfully answer: "Yes, we know it, and remember it always"? Not every one realizes the full meaning, the fathomless depths of the statement: "Your body is the temple of the Holy Ghost."

In the inspired Scriptures we find that a temple was a place of worship, a place where God dwelt, and where his presence was keenly manifested and felt. In other words, it was a house of prayer.

Now Paul says that we ought to know that our bodies are used by the Holy Ghost in such a way. What does it mean to us? Is our temple always kept pure and sacred so that it is a fit place for the Divine Dweller? He will not dwell in a place that is not kept for that purpose.

If our bodies are the temples of God, can we not say then that our lips are his pulpits; our tongue, the preacher, and Christ is over all? Our lips are not our own. Psa. 12: 3, 4 tells us that. They are supposed to be used to testify for Christ, but some of us make a sad failure of it sometimes. The messages that sometimes come from our pulpits (the lips), show all too plainly that our temple is defiled, and needs cleansing.

Have you ever had the experience of attending a religious meeting, at which the message that morning was not in harmony with the Gospel, or at least some of it was false? How did it make you feel? Did it not make your righteous indignation boil over? You could hardly sit still. You felt that you must make that minister see the truth before he leads any more souls to hell. And yet, that afternoon, perhaps, some one called, and you listened and took part in a conversation against a dear brother or sister, or perhaps against the church. Was the message that you were proclaiming from your pulpit any closer to the Gospel than that which you heard at the religious meeting? When we talk against our brethren and sisters, we do not hurt them so much, but we do crucify Christ afresh, for they are children of his, bought with his own precious blood.

We are always keeping the preacher (our tongue) busy It is natural that we can not refrain from talking. It is a gift from God that we can talk. But what kind of messages come from our pulpits? Do they glorify God, or do they present him in a false light? Unsaved souls, and even saved ones, with whom we daily come in contact, are listening to those messages, and, knowing our profession, they many times have cause to think that our temple is anything but a house of prayer, but is being used for sacrilegious things.

We are responsible for all messages coming from our pulpits, for Matt. 12: 37 says: "For by thy words thou shalt be justified, and by thy words thou shalt be condemned."

We hear many dear, good people testify and tell of the wonders of God, in church or prayer meeting, and we are bitterly disappointed when we hear their daily pulpit messages that do not correspond.

We are very careful, when we make a public talk, that our words correspond with the Scripture, and yet, perhaps, in our conversation around the family table, we will suddenly drift on some talk that means the same thing as "Crucify him, crucify him."

If our temples are kept pure, if Christ guides our tongue, every message that comes from our pulpits will be a blessing and a glorification to man and to God.

Abound in This Grace Also

BY WM. J. TINKLE

IT has been said truly that the Church of the Brethren is a church of protest. It was founded as a protest against militarism, against secrecy, against the vainglory of life, against the omission of sacred ordinances, against inequality of society, for instance slavery, against the use of stimulants and narcotics. This last we held in a negative way for a long time, but during the last few years we have joined actively in the temperance movement, with good results.

We also have protested against the divorce evil, but in a negative way; about all we have done is to keep divorced people out of the church. What about other phases of the same evil? Have we worked against the white-slave trade? Have we warned our children against sexual sins as much as against lying and stealing? Have we prepared young people to make homes that will be a success, making divorce unnecessary? Let us abound in this grace also.

You say: "We have such a big program already." But this added grace is not an added burden. It makes our program more complete, and so the whole goes better. A young lady of another denomination remarked: "It must be harder for you people to live your profession than for others, because you profess more."

Not so. The closer we follow Christ, the easier. Peter fell because he followed "afar off." Brethren, if we try to stem the tide of this sensuous age without teaching social purity, or with only a negative stand on the question, it is like driving a wagon through the mud with one wheel broken down. Let us show to the world that we not only shun vice ourselves but that we are active in teaching social purity.

Better Christians

3. For the World's Sake

THE world needs to see, through us, that we, by faith in Christ, have become partakers of a joy and power that the world can neither give nor take, and which is able to transform a life into a new creature in Christ Jesus

Let us, in thought, go back to Sodom in Lot's day. It was early in the morning, when the sun, for the last time, cast its rays over that wicked city. Lot has been informed of its pending doom. In the eleventh hour he is anxious to do what he can for those who are nearest to his heart. He hurries to his sons-in-law We can almost imagine him standing before those worldly young men, saying with a trembling, yet urgent, voice: "Up, get you out of this city, for Jehovah will destroy it." But it had no effect upon them; his words seemed as an idle tale to these young men. But why Was not Lot a man of God? Yes, Holy Writ calls him "Righteous Lot" Why, then, did not these men believe him and heed his urgent appeal? There can be but one answer—that religiously he lived a half-hearted life in their presence When the crisis came, his testimony had no power

It is a sorrowful condition, when a Christian lives such a half-hearted life that the message of God from his lips loses its power. Perhaps some one, who has had dealings with you, might smile with contempt if you were described as a sincere Christian. I once heard of a priest, who was visited by one of his parishioners, who thus expressed himself: "I have now followed you closely for five years, to see if you really serve the Savior you proclaim. Now, since I am convinced of

The Tribute of a Grateful Heart

For Week Beginning November 23, 1919

1. God's Blessings New Every Morning.—Gratitude is taught only in that school of faith which declares that God is so good and so great that he starts every day along its own new path, bringing to us new material blessings, letting us look into new faces, revealing to us new phases of truth, opening to us new regions of character, and putting before us new opportunities for work. Under this view of the divine care, even the somber Book of Lamentations ceases its wailing, and says of the Lord's mercies: "They are new every morning." Instead of monotony we see variety; instead of occasional benefit, the constancy of mercy; instead of heartless machinery, the hand of the Loving God.

2. Thankfulness an Incentive to Higher Aspirations.—Paul, in Eph. 5: 18, warns his hearers against turning to material stimulants in conditions of depression and gloom. He is not referring merely to mental and moral weariness, but also to physical tiredness and exhaustion. He advises people, who are spent in body, mind or soul, to turn to the ministries of the Spirit, and particularly does he mention "giving thanks always for all things." It is a counsel which is much ignored. If thankfulness exhilarates the soul, what about all the murmuring and complaining in which our common life abounds? Every moody complaint adds to the burden we carry. Every word of thanks lightens our daily load. There is no exhilarant like praise, and thankful people always carry a shining face.

3. The Thankful Heart.—Henry Ward Beecher pertinently said: "The unthankful heart, like my finger in the sand, discovers no mercies; but let the thankful heart sweep through the day and, as the magnet finds the iron, so will it find, in every hour, some heavenly blessings; only the iron in God's sand is all gold." Dr. Hall adds his testimony in the following: "Learn the lesson of thanksgiving. It is due to God, it is due to ourselves. Thanksgiving for the past makes us trustful in the present, and hopeful for the future. What the Lord has done is the pledge of what he will do."

4. Our "Benefits" Itemized.—Here is the summary of one saint who had learned to count his blessings:

(1) I thank God for Christian parents, whose solicitude and prayers have followed me every day of my life, have succored me in the hour of temptation, have strengthened me for life's responsibilities, and have been a constant buoyancy to my soul when the fire has burned low.

(2) I thank God for the spark of divinity in my soul that teaches me that I was not made for meanness, and constantly urges me upward toward God.

(3) I thank God for a spirit of human sympathy which brings me into touch with the great, throbbing heart of humanity and will not let me live a wholly selfish life.

(4) I thank God for good men and women, whose pure lives are a perpetual rebuke to my imperfections and make me believe in a possibility of my achieving personal goodness.

(5) I thank God for the Great Friend, whose abiding presence grows ever sweeter to me, and who forgives my sins and believes to me below others do not, and I despair of myself.

(6) I thank God for his church, for a place in it in which to work, and for a disposition to work.

(7) I thank God for faith in him and his Son, the world's Redeemer.

(8) I thank God for faith in men and women, for a disposition to believe in their goodness, to be sorry for their faults, to forgive their wrongs, and to wish them ever the greatest happiness attainable in this life, and everlasting bliss and happiness in the world to come.

(9) I thank God for enough sorrow to keep my heart tender, and to make me sympathize with all others who sorrow.

5. Suggestive References.—Praise the Lord for his goodness (Psa. 106: 1). God's "wonderful works" (Psa. 107: 15) "Honor the Lord with thy substance" (Prov. 3: 9, 10) "Giving of thanks" (Eph. 5: 4, 19, 20). "Prayer and supplication with thanksgiving" (Philpp. 4: 6). "Giving thanks unto the Father" (Col. 1: 12). "Abounding with thanksgiving" (Col. 2: 7). "Be ye thankful" (Col. 3: 15-17) "In everything give thanks" (1 Thess. 5: 18)

AROUND THE WORLD

Foreign Mission Work Well Managed

While, at times, there has been considerable criticism of the management of missionary enterprises, the facts in the case show that workers on the foreign field are by no means guilty of unwarranted expenditures. One man has been a missionary in China for twelve years, in a field with a population of 500,000. In that field, with sole responsibility for all Gospel activities and educational work, he has never had a budget of more than $2,000 (Mexican), to cover the entire expense. This showing is typical of fields all over the world—reports show. When the foreign survey is completed, churches will know, for the first time, the actual truth as to the wise administration of world missions.

Sound Advice

Premier Clemenceau, of France, is a man well stricken in years, but none the less well qualified to give good counsel. In a recent address he plead, most eloquently, for universal tolerance and social justice. He also urged the workingmen throughout the world to return to labor's pre-war methods and conditions. Pointedly he said: "The world's only salvation from the social and economic chaos, from which it is now emerging, is 'work.'" Thus, with characteristic brevity, the premier pointed ont the solution for the many problems which now confront the world. He is, undoubtedly, correct in his analysis. An increase of production will, unquestionably, mean a more adequate supply of food, and more satisfactory living conditions.

Tobacco Runs to Three Billions a Year

American tobacco growers expect to realize a billion dollars from the sale of their crop this year. That enormous amount of the filthy weed, when converted into cigars, cigarets, and smoking and chewing tobacco, will have to be paid for at the rate of nearly three billion dollars—far more than some of the real necessities of life cost during the same period of time. Those who had fondly hoped that the consumption of cigars, cigarets, and tobacco in general, might decrease in course of time, will doubtless be surprised to learn that the sale of these products is rapidly increasing, and especially so since the beginning of the late war. Last year more than ten billion cigars, and twice that number of cigarets were sold—owing to the propaganda of those financially interested.

The Restoration of Palestine

While the future of Palestine has not been definitely settled, for the present, at least, Great Britain is in control. Under the administration of British officials, extensive plans are being made to render the land productive, as in the days of old. The reforestation of the hills and mountains of Palestine is one of the first tasks to be undertaken. Long centuries ago the trees were cut down, without any attempt at replacement. This is to be remedied by the systematic planting of forest trees and orchards. The Jordan Valley is to be cleared of undergrowth, and irrigation systems are to insure plenty of moisture for growing crops. Inefficient systems of agriculture are to be replaced by modern methods that insure the very best returns for the labors of the farmer.

Promoting Coöperation

Conferences on the "furtherance of coöperation between Protestant churches of all denominations" are to be held in every State in the Union between Dec. 1 and 19, according to the announcement of officials of the Interchurch World Movement. According to arrangements that have been made, the delegates to each State Conference will be selected from the foremost representative members of Protestant churches in every county. The State Conferences will be addressed by leaders of the Interchurch Movement, who will meet in a preliminary conference at Atlantic City. Without question, much might be gained by a closer coöperation of the various denominations. If the forces of righteousness stand shoulder to shoulder, there should be a notable gain for the cause of Christ.

A Big Problem

A really important question at the present time, and one that is likely to be a vital issue for many years, or at least long enough to upset the country seriously, is this: Just what can the Government do, to control adequately large bodies of organized workingmen who seek to regulate their wages and hours through industrial upheavals and struggles—when the country's general welfare is so seriously menaced by these demonstrations? True, courts can be induced to enjoin the men from striking. That procedure has repeatedly been made use of, but the strikes have gone into effect, nevertheless. Soldiers have been delegated to protect such of the workers, as may be willing to work, against the attacks of those on strike. By means of injunctions, through contempt of court proceedings, and by action of the nation's legal department, men may be punished for conspiring to violate court orders. But you can not punish a man for not working in a coal mine if he does not choose to labor there. Growing slowly but surely, a big problem has assumed tremendously large dimensions. The war, with the reckless outpouring of money and the great increase in wages, has brought on the crisis, but what is the remedy?

The Inward Monitor

"Be sure your sin will find you out," is the voice of Holy Writ, and the truthfulness of that warning was recently demonstrated most emphatically, when an aged man in North Dakota confessed, on his deathbed, to the murder of a woman in Ohio, twenty-five years before. Goaded by the lashings of his conscience, the guilty man had traveled from State to State until he reached California. He was successful in eluding the avenging power of the law, but he could not escape the voice within. Finally, unwilling to die with the consciousness of having to face the Great Judge as a murderer, he made a frank confession. Now, though he must pay the penalty for his crime, he is at peace. His conscience is at rest.

Our Industrial Problems

When the miners in the bituminous coal regions entered upon a strike Nov. 1, President Wilson declared the action both unjustifiable and unlawful. He charged the miners with breaking a contract as to wages—an agreement to which the Government was a party, and which was to run "during the continuance of the war, but not beyond April 1, 1920." Latest press reports announce the further disquieting fact that the American Federation of Labor has decided to back the miners in their fight, in open defiance of the injunction proceedings, that have been instituted by the Government in the hope of a speedy restoration of orderly conditions. It is to be hoped that sane counsels will prevail, and that law and order will be allowed full sway.

He Opposes Compulsory Military Training

Senator Penrose, of Pennsylvania, was recently addressed by a mother in the State of Utah, whose boy was killed in France. In reply to her strong appeal, the Senator gave this assurance: "I have your letter, protesting, as a mother, against certain legislation pending in Congress, in reference to compulsory military training. I am opposed to the legislation now under consideration, and do not believe that it is necessary to resort to compulsory military training, to maintain a suitable and adequate defense for the country." The American Union Against Militarism is fighting the compulsory training bills, now pending, with the united support of the anti-war churches. One thing is sure—sinister influences are at work day and night to fasten the monster of Prussian militarism upon our fair land. Those opposed can not remain silent.

Born Rich, Now in Poverty

Sometimes the busy arena of human life presents incidents that have their own peculiar lesson of warning. Take the case of Alonzo J. Whitman. Here was a son of wealthy parents, favored with every educational advantage that money could provide. He graduated from Hamilton College with every prospect of a bright future. He was elected State Senator by an admiring constituency. Somehow or other, however, his integrity could not withstand the test that came to him in the hour of temptation, for he eventually became one of the most notorious swindlers in the United States, and a number of times penal institutions opened their doors to him as a convict. Released at last—penniless—he has found his final refuge in a New York poorhouse. What a life and what a lesson! The poor boy, after all, has the better chance and fewer temptations. He is bound to hustle, and is generally too busy to get into mischief.

Seditionary Propaganda Among Negroes

So seriously does our Government regard persistent evidences of radicalism and sedition among the negroes, that exhaustive investigations have recently been made. Reports of these have just been made public. They reveal a determined effort, on the part of certain leaders, to prey upon the minds of law-abiding, peaceful negroes, and make of them a lawless band of race antagonists. The full extent of the propaganda, which began well in advance of the recent race riots in Washington, Knoxville, Chicago, Omaha and Arkansas, is gradually being discovered by officials of the Government. A close analysis of the situation, made by a trained investigator for the department of justice, leads to the conclusion that "there can no longer be any question of a well-concerted movement among a certain class of negro leaders of thought and action, to constitute themselves a determined and persistent source of radical opposition to the Government, and to the established rule of law and order." Several features in the attitude of this small but highly influential group of negro leaders may be classified as follows: "(1) A decided inclination toward race-rioting. (2) The threat of retaliatory measures in connection with lynchings. (3) Openly expressed demands for social equality. (4) Affiliation of the negro with such radical organizations as the 'I. W. W.' and an outspoken advocacy of the Bolshevist or Soviet doctrine" Several of the higher class publications of the colored people, edited by men of education, are making fervid boasts of race superiority. They plead strongly for greater race unity, in order that important concessions may be gained. On the editorial board of one of their magazines are men bearing degrees from Harvard University, so that it can not be said that untrained minds are fomenting the prevalent spirit of unrest. This very publication is the most radical of all, openly counseling the negro to align himself with the Soviet movement. Preaching a doctrine of physical as well as economic force, one of the largest negro publications appeals to men of that race, to stand up for their rights at all hazards—the very sort of advice to stir up undue racial antagonism.

Belgium Discards Distilled Liquors

It was no slight concession to the cause of prohibition when Belgium, by its recent action, prohibited the manufacture and sale of whiskey, gin and other liquors of a high alcoholic percentage. In times past that country has been a notoriously heavy consumer of distilled liquors, the per capita rate being larger than that of almost any other country in Europe. While the sale of beer and light wines is still to be permitted, it is hoped that eventually even these will be ruled out in the interest of public welfare. Some valuable lessons have been learned by little Belgium during the troubled days of the war, and not the least of these is the folly of indulgence in strong drink.

The Value of Tract Distribution

We have taken occasion, every now and then, to call attention to some of the most remarkable results achieved by tract distribution, wisely and taetfully directed. An interesting testimony along that line is given hy Mr. E. Grey, of Buenos Aires, who left England in 1905, and has since been carrying on a most successful evangelistic campaign in that country. He says: "We early appreciated the efficacy of systematic tract distribution in the increased attendance at the various meetings. Several young men always took out a large number of tracts for distribution, and sneceeded, by taking different routes to their place of business, in distrihnting many thousand. The effect on the attendance was electrical. From 'fifty or sixty, the hearers increased to two hundred or more, many of whom were converted."

The Great World Field

According to latest estimates, the population of the entire world is placed at 1,650,000,000. Of this number, 635,250,000 are nominally Christian—either Protestant or Catholic. This means that 1,014,750,000 men, women and children are not Christians, but are Jews, Hindus, Buddhists, Confucianists, Shintoists, Mohammedans, or unclassified. That the showing should be as deplorable as above indicated, is truly remarkable, considering that more than 1,900 years have elapsed since the birth of Christ. Another striking fact is that among the 635,250,000 professed Christians, the total Sunday-school enrollment, throughout the world, is hut 35,000,000. This means that 600,000,000 Christians—Catholic and Protestant—have no connection with the Sunday-school. In strong contrast with the above is the decidedly encouraging fact, that in recent years the annual Sunday-school increase has been phenomenally large. For 1920, a gain of 1,000,000 is looked for, according to a noted worker.

How He Does His Preaching

Sam Higginbottom, a big Welshman out in India, considers himself a missionary, though he may not reach the people in exactly the commonly-accepted way. A few of his achievements are of decided interest: He has introduced American weeders, which saved the hard labor of nineteen men. His modern mowing-machine will cut several tons of grass in the time that it would take a native, using the old method, to cut enough grass to feed one horse. Though labor is cheap in India—a laborer's wages being but eight cents a day—Mr. Higginbottom has proved beyond doubt that by the use of machinery it is possible to harvest at one-third the cost of Indian labor. The English plow, which he uses, goes eight inches deep, and tills the soil at one-twentieth the cost of digging it with native implements. He has taught the farmer how to save forty-two and a half miles in plowing a single acre. While expert agriculture may not be deemed by some to stand in direct relation to the work of the missionary, Mr. Higginbottom thinks otherwise. When he was induced to go to India, as a member of the faculty of Ewing College, he was at once impressed with the fact that India's economic problem is chiefly inferior agricultural production, aggravated by moral, social and spiritual shortcomings. With a ready grasp of the situation, he set about at once to provide a remedial agency. On his model farm the natives are learning Christianity while making themselves familiar with the best methods of farming. As a result of his efforts, Mr. Higginbottom finds all India interested in farming, and even more anxious to learn all about the Christianity which brings such apparent wonders to pass. He has found one way of reaching the heart of India, and therefore its soul as well.

HOME AND FAMILY

Just Now

Selected by Viola Priser, Sidney, Ind

Just now, O Father, while we stray,
And wander from thy paths away,
While weak and blind we slip and fall,
We turn our eyes to thee and call,
Oh, lead us back, our feet set right,
To walk again in thy blest light.

Just now, O Father, uft we fret,
In tribulations, thee forget;
But hearken, Lord, hend low thine ear,
That thou our humble prayer mayst hear,
Give peace, and help us by thy grace,
Our trials patiently to face.

In thy sure mercy, Lord, we trust,
For thou remembrest we are dust;
Our very frame thou knowest well,
Our every need thy wisdom tell,
We fear not then, but know that thou
Wilt care for us, just here and now.

Practical Playthings

BY BESS BATES

THE Wise Mother was placidly embroidering a dainty dress for her third granddaughter. She had not had time to embroider for her own children, so she took just that much more pleasure in doing it for the second set of little ones that was growing up about her. She often said that she had all the pleasure and none of the work in raising her grandchildren, and how she did enjoy them.

But Daughter Alice came up the walk, just then, with small Jimmie and Arthur tagging along. Alice had the responsibility and joy of raising those two small boys, and sometimes she thought it was almost all responsibility. As soon as they got in grandma's yard, the two boys ran for the sand-box which was conveniently hidden behind the lilac bushes for their especial benefit. Alice dropped on the porch-steps at her mother's feet and sighed.

"They do love to play over here. They play so much better than they do at home. It seems to me they always want something besides what they have. We get them so many things but they are never satisfied. I don't see why it is."

"Would you like to know?" asked the Wise Mother.

Alice glanced up and caught the twinkle in her mother's eyes. She faced her mother and said: "Yes, I would. I thought I knew what to buy for the boys, and I have done all I can for them. Tell me what the matter is."

"You buy them things to look at mostly and I get them things to do something with. You have gotten them so many things that the very number confuses them. They have so many bright mechanical toys that they can't use yet themselves. For instance, Jimmie's electrical train has to be run for him. All he can do is sit and watch it go around. An active boy will get tired of a thing like that. They want things that they can do something with.

"When I was a young mother like you, I used to look into the toy-shop windows and long to buy all those beautiful things for you children. We did not have the money to get them, so I had to give them up. And because I wanted those things so much for my children, I have watched the effect of them on others. All you have to do is to go into a house one week after Christmas and see what is left. You children would always go back to your blocks and your 'doll-rags,' as the boys used to say, almost before Christmas Day was over. I used to feel rather badly about it, when I would save so hard to buy you some bright toy, to see it laid aside after the first interest was over, and see you all return to the things that had stood the test of a whole year.

"So, after lots of experience, I came to this conclusion, that lots of playthings that look so fine in the windows are made to attract the loving parents' eyes. And they do. But the thing that lasts bests for an active child is the thing with which they can make something.

"Jimmie and Arthur are happy out there with sand, a few cocoa cans and an old spoon. They fill up those cans by the hour and empty them out again. Before long they are going to need a little diversion, so I have a piece of old spouting laid by which will be fine to run sand through. That will be another step in their playing. After that I imagine they would enjoy moving some of the sand to another box, but as long as they can have something to work at out there, they will be happy.

"In winter time, when all of you children used to be in the house, I found that the little ones would play with blocks by the hour. Sometimes they would tire of one shape of blocks, so I managed to have several different sets. Your brother John played two weeks steadily with an old set of dominoes. He was the greatest child to make things that ever was. You and Mary used to work over your doll-clothes until I never could find enough scraps in my piece-bag to keep the clothes properly mended. Now Mary has gotten Jeanne a doll completely dressed. After a bit Jeanne will tire of dressing and undressing that doll. She will want to do something else for it. So Mary will probably make it some more clothes. Or if Mary doesn't have time for that, you will see Jeanne dressing that doll up in scraps of ribbon she may find lying about the house. Jeanne is getting old enough to do a little sewing; and sewing for her doll would give her the greatest pleasure. It will keep Jeanne playing with that doll indefinitely if she can only work for it.

"Keep those boys of yours working at something, Alice. That is the best way to keep them out of mischief. Help them to get their work started and when you see them begin to tire of it, supply something else to give them a little diversion. But see that they keep busy. They will thus form a habit that will be invaluable later in life. And the nice part about keeping a child busy is that there are so many things about the house they can use in their play—string, spools, cardboard boxes, pieces of wood and empty cans, paste and a few old magazines, a round-pointed pair of scissors—all of these things will help to keep a child busy.

"Give them only a few things at a time and always have something laid back to bring out when they are tired. And, of course, give a little of your own time to help them play, for they need direction, just the same as any inexperienced person does."

"I begin to see," said Alice. "That is why the boys like it here so well. You show them how to do something and then let them go ahead and do it."

"That's it," said the Wise Mother, "and smile while you are helping them."

A Tragedy in Old Age

BY M. H. GEYER

"Why is thy countenance sad, seeing thuu art nut sick? This is nothing else but sorrow of heart."

"How do you do, Grandma Coy? How are you this evening?"

"Oh, quite well. I'm so glad to be able to be here at this communion meeting tonight, but I've got so many, many troubles these days."

"Well, well, that's too bad for you, grandma. What seems to be troubling you, anyway?"

"Oh, my troubles are church troubles, and they are so terrible I can hardly stand it. I just think sometimes it will almost kill me."

"Well, grandma, that's really too bad. What is the nature of your church troubles? Can I help you any?"

"Haven't you heard about it? They have locked the church door."

"Locked it—the door of the church?"

"Yes, the door of the church. Betty Yontz came and told me. I couldn't believe it at first, because Betty had come just a few days before to tell me that there were so many out to Sunday-school, that there was not even a copy of Our Young People left for me. You see, I can't get out to church very much any more, so they bring the paper to me. I like to read it so well. But that made me feel good and I said: 'I will freely give up my paper if there are so many coming out to Sunday-school, because you know I can't see very well to read anyway, and there is no one at home to read for me, so it does not make so much difference if some one else gets it instead of me.' But Betty came back a few days after and told me that the officials called a council, and it was decided to shut up the house until next April."

"Why did they do that?"

"Because of the finances. Betty feels so bad about it, and I just could hardly believe it was true, so I got my cane and I hobbled out to the church on Sunday morning, and, sure enough, when I got there the door was locked."

And Grandma Coy's voice trembled with the emotion of her soul, and her lips quivered and her fingers, bent with ninety-three years of toil, clutched as if in a convulsion as she said: "I could hardly believe my own eyes, the door was locked."

It was, indeed, a tragedy to her in her old age, when compared to the assets of this church—two ministers, three deacons, including nearly a half hundred members, representing a wealth to exceed $100,000, a good churchhouse, with modern equipment in electric light and heating system, in a little city of 1,000 inhabitants, with a surrounding country of beautiful farms and fertile fields and the tillers of this land a numerous and peaceful people. Yet, with all this, the archives of hell resound with a jubilee, and heaven mourns, and the Master's heart is saddened, for the door of the church is locked

The Leper Woman's Hope

BY JULIA GRAYDON

I HAD come home from a meeting where a speaker had assailed the doctrine of the second coming of Christ and as I picked up the mission study book for the year, "A Crusade of Compassion for the Healing of the Nations," I came across part of a letter written by a leper woman to her benefactor: "I have received from you a bed's wadded quilt—in coldest weather, covered at night, my body will have warmth, will have gladness. Alas, the wideness of the world prevents us from seeing each other face to face, but wait until the last day, when, with the Lord, we meet together in heaven's clouds. Then, what else can I utter but a whole-hearted mouthful of thanks? You will want to know what my body is like—there is no wellness in it. No feet, no hands, no sighs, no feeling; outside body greatly distressed, but inside heart is greatest peace, for the inside heart has hopes. What hopes? Hopes of everlasting blessedness because of God's love, and because of the Savior's grace."

How can we help but say that the poor leper woman has more here on earth and more to look forward to above, on account of her blessed hope of the Lord's second coming, than the highly-educated man who has lost his faith in the Savior's appearing?

your sincerity, I have come to ask you how I may be able to serve him also."

The world is, at present, in great distress. It is not Christendom that has failed, but the things of this world. There is a cry for peace, the whole world over, a cry for power, a cry for hope. There is plenty of work for all who have learned to know their Savior and are willing to point out to others the way of deliverance.

Have you ever stopped to think, that with the close of this war there is a demand, as never before, for love to heal wounds and to restore wrecked civilization? And who is better prepared to assist in this great work of reconstruction than the Christians of the neutral nations?

Methinks I can hear the Master loudly calling, in this present day: "Ye are the salt of the earth," "Ye are the light of the world," "But if the salt have lost its savor, wherewith shall it be salted?" Dear reader, let us pray God that the Spirit of Grace might go forward in the path of righteousness and true holiness for the world's sake.

4. For Our Own Sake

We may well desire to become better Christians for our own sake. Thus we may enjoy a greater degree of peace in our soul. Many Christians vainly think that merely to remain at the cross will insure perfect peace, that then they need have no more concern about holiness. It is true that the fountain of peace is only to be found at the cross: "The chastisement of our peace was upon him" (Isa. 53: 5). But the Lord also says through the prophet: "O, that thou hadst hearkened to my commandments! Then had thy peace been as a river" (Isa. 48: 18). And by profound meditation we may understand that it is impossible to have peace with God and, at the same time, to live in direct opposition to his will. But what is the will of God? "For this is the will of God, even your sanctification" (1 Thess. 4: 3). Peace is a pearl of great price, but holiness is the essence of the whole matter, which helps us to keep and develop this peace. Many a Christian is satisfied with a half-hearted peace because there has been too little faithfulness in his battle for a holier life.

What is the real status of holiness with the so-called Christians of our time? There may be a Christian with an inborn desire for evil, to which he constantly and disgracefully succumbs. Another has not yet become master over his high temper; he is daily plunging forward uncontrolled, to his own shame and disgrace. Another allows his business life, in one way or another, to sanction acts that can not stand the searchlight of an all-seeing and righteous God. There are even Christians, in good standing among their fellowmen, who can begin and end each day of the week without a season of communion with God in reading the Bible, in meditation and in prayer. How can there be peace in the soul when one is so indifferent concerning holiness?

In the second place we may also consider our eternity, and because of this we may be led to become better Christians. If even one has come to the faith in Christ Jesus, with the full assurance of being a child of God, it is still possible for that person to be finally lost. Without holiness it is impossible to see God.

We note how often Jesus speaks regretfully of those who began a life of true discipleship, but in the end were lost forever. Many shall say in that day: "Have we not prophesied in thy name?" And the answer will be: "I never knew you." They had, for a time, been Christ's faithful disciples, but in service for the Lord they had neglected meditation at his feet, to learn his will and to do his bidding. And the Lord himself says that these shall not only be a few, but many.

The Lord also speaks of a servant who owed his lord 10,000 talents. He so humbled himself, and prayed for mercy and forbearance, that finally his debt was forgiven. He was perfectly free. His debt was fully forgiven for time and eternity. Still, however, he was a lost man, for ere long he showed an unforgiving spirit toward a fellow-man.

Remember, also, the wedding-guest, who had entered the guest-chamber, thinking he was in perfect order. There was no remonstrance until the king came in. He saw what the others had not seen—that the man was not robed in a wedding garment. Consequently he was cast out into outer darkness. There must have been a flaw in his spiritual life that would not admit him to heavenly bliss.

In this connection we may well think of the foolish virgins, who took their lamps to meet the bridegroom, but when, because of a lack of oil, there was no light, they were not admitted to the marriage feast. These are a type of Christians, who gradually, and unaware even to themselves, lose their fellowship with Jesus. They have a form of godliness, but deny the power thereof. The inner and vital life is lacking. The lamp of faith has gone out, and this at the time when most needed—at midnight.

Too often we take it for granted that when one exercises faith in Christ, he is sealed for heaven. The minister, at a funeral, may speak of the deceased as being in the heavenly mansions because he was a member of a certain church. But is it a fact? It is possible—I am sorry to say—for one, who has laid hold upon salvation, to fall from that happy state and to be eternally lost. It remains for a Christian to hold fast to what he has received through faith in Christ, and to develop that gift by the grace of God, in order to receive a crown of life (Rev. 3: 11). You can not retain your fellowship with God and receive your crown of life without a healthful and gradual growth in holiness. Standing still spells decay in the Christ-life. And decay is the beginning of eternal loss.

5. For Heaven's and Perdition's Sake

It is wonderful, as one reads the first chapters of Job, to note the career of that righteous man—balanced, so to speak, between heaven and perdition. The accuser desires to lay hands on Job, and one storm after the other passes over him, as the hosts of heaven as well as perdition, with great anxiety, await the outcome of this great struggle. "In all this did not Job sin with his lips." And the happy result of this was that God, through Job, was glorified, both on earth and in heaven. The plan from the pit ended in a perfect failure.

In Heb. 12: 1, 2 we read: "Therefore let us also, seeing we are compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses, lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race that is set before us, looking unto Jesus the author and perfecter of our faith." Watching the Christian athlete's race course, there stands an innumerable host—the saints of all ages. These are the witnesses who behold the fight of faith in our daily life—the struggle to attain the prize of our high calling in Christ Jesus.

Dear reader, think of this! Not only are the eyes of the world turned on you, but all the saved, of centuries past, are compassed round about you, as witnesses, to see how successfully you are running "the race set before you."

The aged commentator, Bengel, says: "There is joy in heaven over every servant of the Lord who wins his crown." And according to John, the revelator, there is endless joy in heaven over every soul who, by the blood of the Lamb, has overcome the adversary and safely reached the goal.

"Be ye filled with the Spirit." But how does that Spirit accomplish its great work? It comes as the dew from heaven. Man can not command dew or rain to fall from heaven: it is not in man's power to draw water out of the clouds. But there is one thing he can do—to pray for rain for the refreshing of the earth. Let us pray also for refreshing showers of God's Holy Spirit, and may our hearts be ready to receive the heavenly outpouring! Then God shall, according to his promise, cause our hearts to overflow with joy and gladness.

CORRESPONDENCE

"Write what thou seest, and send it unto the churches"

A WIDE-AWAKE DISTRICT CONFERENCE

It was a great privilege to attend the Conference of the Middle District of Iowa. A splendid program for the various lines of church work had been arranged for part of Saturday and Sunday, while the business session of the Conference was scheduled for Monday. This arrangement gives opportunity for many to attend the Sunday-school, Christian Workers' and Missionary sessions, when otherwise they could not do so.

The elders met on Saturday afternoon. Besides the routine work of the meeting they discussed some live questions, interesting and helpful to elders and pastors of churches. They ought to understand enough of their own needs, to unite on a common basis of work that would eliminate confusion among themselves and between congregations. Each one ought to sink his own personal view enough to meet on a common ground for church work. I say this because it is the cause of some confusion all over the Brotherhood, and probably much more so in other Districts than in Middle Iowa. The elders ought to lead rather than to follow.

The Five-Year Forward Movement received its share of consideration. There was a confident expression of sentiment that Middle Iowa would go over the top, including their share of the funds for missions and education.

In the meeting they pledged a subscription of $2,000, half for their Children's Home and half for the purpose of starting a new mission point in the District. This item fully illustrates the spirit of the District in the Forward Movement.

The Panther Creek church entertained the meeting for the three days entirely free. It WAS free too. And good? They know how. They enjoyed doing it, too.

The special music furnished by the various groups was commendable, and shows fine progress along this line. The encouragement and inspiration that these District Meetings give to all is hard to realize at its full value.

GLENDORA, CALIFORNIA

Oct. 26 was a day long to be remembered by us, the occasion being our love feast. At the morning hour of public worship Bro. C. W. Guthrie preached a heart-searching sermon on "Self-examination." He set forth: (1) The import of the trio of ordinances to be observed in the evening, explaining, very carefully and beautifully, the relation of the material to the spiritual service, which, truly rendered, is the most glorious seal of God, leaving the imprint of spiritual union with God himself. (2) The imperative need of preparation on our part, that the service may become a real factor in our experience, and not simply a form, eventually to condemn us. (3) The necessity of "partaking," in union with one another and with the Lord, "discerning the Lord's body."

In the evening, at 5 o'clock, a song and praise service was enjoyed by the audience. Then, as nearly two hundred surrounded the Lord's tables, we felt, indeed, that the Holy Presence was with us, making real, and helping us to feel, the grief and sorrow and burden of the Christ's death on the cross—the greatness of the sacrifice. He gave us, also, an earnest of the rapture, to be known in full when we see him "face to face."

Bro. Guthrie officiated at the feast, assisted by Brethren Gish and G. H. Bashor. Others of the ministry present were Elders B. F. Masterson, S. G. Lehmer, and M. M. Eshelman. We have planned to begin our series of meetings Nov. 23, with Eld. Geo. Mishler in charge.

CONFERENCE DELEGATES

It is the general supposition that when a church chooses a brother or a sister as delegate to Annual Conference, it chooses such as have the needed intelligence, judgment and ability.

True, such may not always conform to the order in dress, as recommended by the church. The writer is of the opinion that the delegate's own church knows his qualifications better than any one else. Some of these delegates are active workers in the church—Sunday-school superintendents or teachers in the Sunday-school. They lead in prayer and in song service. The writer has a knowledge of a brother who was sent by the church as its delegate, but because his coat was not after the pattern generally worn by our brethren, though plain, he was not permitted to serve.

The writer also knows of a deacon brother—an active worker in the church, a leader financially and otherwise—who was sent by his congregation as a delegate, but his coat was not of the cut as recommended by the church, though plain. Consequently he was not permitted to take his seat as a delegate.

The writer is a firm advocate of uniformity and plain apparel, but would not want to be compelled to judge and vote, at all times, by the outward appearance of some one who is brought in question. Cornelius Kessler.

KIND WORDS

A little four-year-old boy had climbed to the top of a sixty-foot windmill tower without his parents' knowledge. The father (Eld. Chas. Keltner), seeing the danger in which his son was, thoughtfully and kindly said to him: "Well, John, you had better come down now." Slowly the little boy made his way safely to the ground. If the words had been spoken in a different tone, the Lord only knows what the results might have been.

Again I was made to think of a little boy's first day at school. The father went along with him and stayed till recess. It was not long until the little boy thought that the door should be opened, and he went and opened it. Then it was not long until he changed his mind and thought that it had better be shut, and he went and shut it. In a little while he asked what kind of a stove that was, etc. At recess the father told the teacher that she would have quite a time with the boy, getting him to stop talking out loud in school-time. "No," she said, "I will not have any trouble at all with him. He will soon see that the older scholars do not talk out loud, and he will follow their example."

How nice it would be if the older members of the church would be like those scholars at school—set a good example to the younger members of the church, and not talk so loud in so many different ways. Albert Myers

PRIZE CONTEST

Special Announcement by Committee on Dress Reform

We, the General Committee on Dress Reform, Church of the Brethren, wishing to stimulate interest in the subject of simple life and dress, and to secure the best available manuscript for promoting our plans, do hereby offer the following prizes:

First, a prize of $15 will be awarded

(a) To the best original manuscript of any essay or address delivered at any of our District Conferences (Temperance, Ministerial, Christian Workers', etc.) on the subject of "Simple Dress" (or any synonymous title) discussed from the common sense, moral and scriptoral standpoint; or,

(b) Any such production as shall have been the winning essay or address in any District Contest, using special Christian Workers' Program outline, Sept. 29, 1918; Nov. 30, 1919; or, March 28, 1920 (provided by Mary P. Ellenberger), the essay having been rendered in the local congregation on any of these dates.

(c) There is no age limit under the above plan, but the manuscript submitted shall contain not over 3,000 words.

Second, a prize of $10 will be awarded the best original manuscript of any essay or address rendered in any local church Christian Workers' Program of Nov. 30, 1919, or March 28, 1920. The contestant in this case shall not be over thirty years of age, and the manuscript submitted shall contain not over 1,500 words.

Rules Governing the Contest

1. All manuscripts must be neatly typewritten, and must be in the hands of the Secretary of the Committee not later than April 15, 1920. However, all manuscripts sent in at the earliest possible date after their rendition, will greatly facilitate the Committee's work.

2. Each contestant shall have the endorsement:

(a) In plan "first," of the presiding officer of the Conference, or of the local pastor or elder respectively, where delivery was made.

(b) In plan "second," that of the local pastor or elder in each case.

(c) Each manuscript shall have attached a separate sheet containing full name and address of the contestant (also AGE in plan "first"), together with the official endorsement herein stated; but no name or other marks of identification shall appear on the manuscript.

3. (a) The judges shall be chosen, as follows: Each of the five Dress Reform Committee members shall nominate one competent person for judge, and from these nominations the Committee shall select, by ballot, three persons to act as judges. In case of a vacancy, one of the remaining two nominees shall serve as alternate, as determined by the Committee vote.

(b) To insure fair and impartial judgment, the judges shall be personally disinterested, the decision being based on merit only, except in case of a tie, in which case neatness and accuracy as to manuscript and correctness of language, shall decide.

4. The awards shall be made at the time of the Dress Reform Committee Program, Annual Conference, 1920

Signed in Behalf of the Committee,
Lydia E. Taylor, Secretary-Treasurer
Mt. Morris, Ill.

OUR FAREWELL TO MISSIONARIES

A large number of friends and other interested persons assembled in the Stone Church, Huntingdon, Pa., on Friday evening, Oct. 31, to hear a final word from the outgoing missionaries, and to give them a word of cheer and a "God bless you," as they go on their lofty mission.

President Brumbaugh spoke in behalf of the college, and voiced the sentiments of the institution that it always brings great joy to all concerned, when members of the school go out to take their due part in the evangelization of the world.

Prof. A. Brown Miller, a member of the class in which Bro. Holsopple graduated nine years ago, spoke in behalf of the class. It did our hearts good to hear him tell that in his school career our brother showed the same qualities of perseverance, dependability and efficiency, which made him so valuable a worker on the mission field.

Bro. Galen B. Royer spoke in behalf of parents of missionaries. He was not blind to the hardships, inconveniences, dangers, and the hard work, which face those who go out to foreign mission fields, nor did he endeavor to minimize the pain of separation, suffered by having children so far away, but these all he brushed aside as not to be compared to the exceeding great joy and satisfaction of having one's own children in the greatest work of the church.

Bro. J. M. Blough, recently of Ahwa, India, voiced the feelings of the missionaries, when he told of the great joy that the coming party would bring to the hard-worked and overburdened workers who are face to face with the gigantic tasks and opportunities.

The key-word of the talks of Brother and Sister Holsopple was appreciation. They value the great privilege of having been in Juniata College, and friendships there formed are a constant inspiration to them. They appreciate the whole-hearted and enthusiastic sympathy of parents in their work in the foreign field. They appreciate the backing which the church at home is giving to the work, thus assuring them that they shall have all they need over there to meet the wonderful opportunities as they come. They appreciate the assurance of joy, on the part of the missionaries and Indian Christians, at the prospect of their return to India.

The whole audience stood and, by lifting their hands to their foreheads as in salute, expressed their good wishes and bade them farewell, after which Bro. W. J. Swigart prayed most tenderly and sympathetically for those who are leaving, for the whole mission of the church, and for those now on the mission fields.

During the night Bro. Holsopple hurried off to Washington to make sure of securing the passport which had not come as expected, and the family awaited news the following day. The hours wore slowly on until about three o'clock in the afternoon, when the message flashed over the wires: "Passport is secured." The car was hastily brought from the garage and its precious human freight was soon arranged within and final good-byes were said, while the sky wept a veritable shower of blessing upon them. Soon they were off on their journey by motor car to New York City. We were glad for them and for the great blessing they are to be to India. Dear Father, bless them and keep them as they journey! Bring them in safety to their destination, and through them bring to thyself there great glory, for the sake of our dear Savior, Jesus.

MANCHESTER CHURCH, INDIANA

Oct. 26 was our Sunday-school Rally and Home-Coming Day. The total Sunday-school enrollment is over 700. After a short recitation period, Bro. Otho Winger gave a very interesting discussion on "The Sunday-school." The remainder of our morning service was in charge of our pastor, Bro. T. E. George.

The Junior Band boys and girls gave an excellent program in the evening. It is an inspiration to the older members, to see the enthusiasm and Christian earnestness with which these little folks, most of whom have accepted Christ, conduct an entire service of this kind.

Nov. 2 was our regular mission Sunday. Brethren W. W. Peters and V. F. Schwalm very forcibly presented the conditions and the challenge of the African field. There were also several special musical numbers. Bro. J. H. B. Williams was with us in the evening service. The large assembly and the quietness showed the appreciation due Bro. Williams.

Bro. J. M. Henry, of Washington, D. C., is expected to be with us in a series of meetings, beginning Nov. 9. Each of the six churches in town will hold evangelistic services from Nov. 9 until the close of the month. Union meetings, preparatory to this evangelistic campaign, will be held at the various churches each evening this week. We have held a number of cottage prayer meetings, in addition to our regular weekly prayer services at the church.

Our love feast was held Oct. 29 and 30. Those, unable to be present on Wednesday evening, had the privilege of enjoying the service the following evening with the college students. The room was well filled both evenings.

LA VERNE CHURCH, CALIFORNIA

We met in council Oct. 13, with Eld. J. P. Dickey presiding. Oct. 21 we met at the church, to receive the annual visit from the deacons. Eld. John Heckman, of Polo, Ill., recently gave us an interesting discourse, explaining the Forward Movement program.

We have had some interesting section workers' meetings. One was in the form of a rally, when a number of short talks were given on our various lines of work.

The foreign mission field in our midst affords us many opportunities, and our college mission provides workers who make the most of these opportunities. Our intermediate Christian Workers are active along this line. Under their auspices three cottage prayer meetings are being held weekly in Mexican homes. They also assist in the regular Sunday afternoon and Monday evening evangelistic services at the Mexican Mission. Some of the Mission Band girls conduct sewing classes in the Mexican homes. We have Mexican men's night-school at the church and in two Mexican homes. We have six Mexican men coming to the church and six Japanese boys twice a week. These night-school students all receive regular Bible lessons, too. They are taught by volunteers, mostly college students.

We met for our semiannual love feast last Sunday evening, with about 330 present. Eld. I. V. Funderburgh had charge of the services. The examination sermon was preached in the morning by our pastor, Bro. R. H. Miller.

As our Japanese friends are coming back to our neighborhood for the winter work, we are delighted to have a number of them in Sunday-school again. One young man has been baptized since our last report.

Grace Hileman Miller.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL CONVENTION

Oct. 30, at the Germantown church, the District Sunday-school Association of Southeastern Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Eastern New York held its annual fall convention. A very interesting meeting was enjoyed by all present. Officers were elected for the ensuing year, with C. F. McKee, president; superintendents of various departments: Elementary, Mrs. W. S. Groff; Young People, Esther Swigart; Organized Bible Classes, Bro. A. M. Dixon; Teacher-Training, Bro. H. W. Rohrer; Cradle Roll, Mrs. W. G. Nyce; Home Department, Miss Emma Tyson.

The theme of the convention was "Moral and Religious Education," and its need was very forcibly brought to the attention of those present by the following addresses: "A Survey of Moral and Religious Facts," G. E. Yoder; "What Should Be the Relation of the Sunday-school to the Social Life of the Community," W. G. Nyce; "Moral and Religious Education in the Home," J. S. Noffsinger; "How May the Sunday-school Give Moral and Religious Training to Those Who Do Not Receive It at Home?" G. K. Walker; "The Place of Prayer in Moral and Religious Education," C. G. Hesse. The Forward Movement was discussed in an interesting Round Table, led by H. Stover Kulp.

A vote of thanks was extended to the Retiring Field Secretary, Bro. G. E. Yoder, for the excellent work done by him in his term of office. Since he has moved out of the District, Bro. W. G. Nyce was appointed his successor.

The evening session was a fitting close to the day's program. Dr. C. C. Ellis gave his splendid lecture on "The Boy," which was enjoyed by a large audience.

Norristown, Pa. Carrie W. Ellis.

SPECIAL NOTICE

A committee was appointed by last Annual Meeting to answer the query from Southwestern Missouri and Northwestern Arkansas, requesting the appointment of a "committee on loyalty." This committee has mailed to a number of brethren and some sisters, in various parts of our Brotherhood, a letter, asking that those receiving it would kindly write what they feel should be the answer, in order that the committee might have an expression from a number, before writing its final answer.

The committee has already received a number of replies, but still feels like earnestly requesting replies from all, if possible, who received its letter, and also from all others who may feel to do so, after reading this note. Replies should be mailed on or before Dec. 10, where possible.

In Behalf of the Committee,
P. S. Miller.

Notes From Our Correspondents

As cold water to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country

CALIFORNIA

Fresno.—After a prolonged visit in North Dakota, Bro. J. R. Rhoads addressed us in a profitable manner Oct. 19. Sister Laura Swadley, of Bethany Bible School, spent Oct. 21 and 22 with us, delivering three instructive and inspiring lectures. Oct. 25 our communion service was held, with more than 100 participating. The evening service was preceded by an all-day meeting, during which Bro. Q. M. Calvert preached the examination sermon. Visiting ministers, who spoke to us on Saturday and Sunday, included Brethren Fike, Blickenstaff, Calvert, Cecil Brower, J. J. Brower and Sanford Setty. Bro. Blickenstaff came in behalf of the Oakland Mission, and $300 was subscribed for a church at that place.—Mrs. O. N. Whitlow, Fresno, Calif., Oct. 28.

COLORADO

Haxtun.—Our pastor, Bro. S. G. Nickey, called us in a "Get-together" meeting. Suggestions were given as to how our work for the cause might be more effective. A Gospel Team was organized, and we are hoping to send it out through the country for work. Four were baptized preceding our love feast, which was held Oct. 25. Two of these were members of the home department. Bro. J. B. Moore, of Sterling, officiated at the love feast. Oct. 26 Bro. W. I. Buckingham, of Franklin County, Iowa, gave us an inspiring sermon on the subject, "Filled with the Spirit."—E. L. Lapp, Haxtun, Colo., Nov. 3.

ILLINOIS

Camp Creek church closed a revival Oct. 26, conducted by Bro. M. Flory, of Girard, Ill., assisted by Sister Lora Wagoner, of Virden, Ill., in charge of the song service. The latter also did personal work, which did a great deal of good. Bro. Flory preached fifteen interesting sermons to full houses. One was baptized, and the members all seemed strengthened. Oct. 25 we enjoyed a love feast, with Bro.

A Gospel Team was organized, and we are hoping to send it out through the country for work. Four and we are hoping to send it out through the country for work. Four were baptized preceding our love feast, which was held Oct. 25.

Flory officiating. Bro. A. H. Lind, at Astoria, Ill., was the visiting minister. Oct. 26 we met at the home of an afflicted sister and a few members enjoyed a communion with her, which was an inspiration to all present. Previous to the love feast we held our council, at which the visiting brethren gave a favorable report.—Ed Myers, Colchester, Ill., Nov. 2.

Coal Creek.—Bro. C. E. Walters, of Summum, Ill., began a two weeks' series of meetings at the county house, closing Oct. 26. Six were added to the church by baptism. The interest and attendance were good, and we feel that the community in general has been greatly benefited by these meetings.—Susie Vansyckle, Canton, Ill., Nov. 1.

Girard.—We met in council Oct. 28, with Eld. W. H. Shull presiding. Members of various committees were elected. The Sunday-school was reorganized, with Bro. E. A. Gibson, superintendent, and Sister Ethel Hardbarger, Primary Superintendent. Sister Lucille Gibson was elected President of the Young People's Society. Our Primary and Junior work has been hindered by a scarlet fever epidemic during the past month, but the quarantine is now lifted and the children and young folks will soon be at work again. We expect to have a series of "decision" meetings in the near future, conducted by our pastor, Bro. D. W. Shock. Since our last report, Bro. Emmert Stover gave an interesting lecture on ways of dealing with the people of India. Brother and Sister Chalmer Shull, missionaries under appointment to India, recently spent a number of weeks with us, this being Bro. Shull's home. We enjoyed several messages from them.—Ethel Hardbarger, Girard, Ill., Oct. 29.

Lanark.—Our business meeting convened Oct. 31, with a good representation of members present. We decided to have a series of meetings sometime during the year. The privilege of holding a two weeks' singing-class was also granted, provided the proper arrangements can be made. Our present pastor, Bro. J. M. Moore, was asked to remain until Sept. 1, 1921. We are looking forward with much pleasure to a Home Coming to be held in the church on Thanksgiving Day.—Nell Sites, Lanark, Ill., Nov. 4.

Virden.—Soon after our revival in August, a Junior Christian Workers' Meeting was organized, with Sister Etta Haynes, superintendent, and Sisters Ethel B. Yeatman and Iva V. Snell, instructors. Their lessons alternate, a Bible lesson one Sunday evening and a Mission Lesson the other. The meetings are held in our church basement, at the hour when the adult Christian Workers' Meeting convenes. Our Junior boys and girls are taking interest in this splendid work. Last Sunday evening they favored the adult Christian Workers with a most interesting missionary program. A talk was given about Bro. E. Hehn's work at Edison, Ga., and an offering of $8.43 was lifted for that work.—Stella Brubaker, Virden, Ill., Nov. 4.

Woodland.—Our council was held Oct. 29, with Eld. S. G. Bucher presiding. All officers for next year were chosen: For the Woodland house, Bro. Geo. Stambaugh, Sunday-school superintendent; Mt. Pleasant house, Bro. Clinton Wicker, superintendent; missionary committee, Sister Dollie Walter; President of Sisters' Aid, Sister Mary Danner; trustee, Bro. Wm. Miller; on the social welfare committee, Bro. Wm. Warner and Sister Louise Bolton. Bro. Bucher was re-elected elder for 1920.—Mrs. Lydia Bucher, Astoria, Ill., Oct. 30.

INDIANA

Beaver Creek.—Nov. 2 closed our revival effort of two weeks, held by Bro. Saylor, of Ohio. We also appreciated the presence and help of Sister Saylor. Although none accepted Christ, the members were encouraged and strengthened. We are still looking forward to the time when we may have a resident minister.—Sarah Hahn, Francesville, Ind., Nov. 4.

Blissville congregation met in called council Oct. 12 at the Blissville house, with Eld. J. M. Markley in charge. One letter was granted. A splendid report of the annual visit was given, and final arrangements were made for the love feast, which was held Oct. 26. Oct. 13 our series of meetings began, with Bro. Reuben Shroyer as evangelist and Sister Hilla Shroyer assisting in the song service. The meetings continued for two weeks with good crowds and splendid interest. Although there were no visible results, we hope that some good was done.—Stella Ruff, Plymouth, Ind., Nov. 3.

Huntington City.—Oct. 31 was Rally Day. Bro. J. E. Miller gave a splendid talk on the subject, "Our Business." In the evening he gave a stereopticon lecture on Armenia and Syria. The Sunday-school enrollment for the last quarter was 157, with an average attendance of 105, and an average of 15 classes in our school have raised money by saving their pennies and nickels, to be used for whatever they see fit. One class had each member invest a dollar a year ago, and over $50 was realized. On this year 14 were baptized recently. The Aid Society is very busy at this time, making garments for the orphans of the Home at Mexico, and for the poor. The Home Department have 105 on their roll. We hope to see each department in the church and Sunday-school continue to grow.—Mrs. Ermal Humbert, Huntington, Ind., Nov. 1.

Middletown.—Our love feast, held Oct. 25, was most enjoyable. Six ministering brethren from adjoining congregations were present. Bro. Miller, from the Mississinewa church, officiated. Bro. Jos. Holder preached for us on Sunday morning. During the week of our series of meetings, Bro. Arthur Hoppis, of Anderson, preached for us on Sunday evening, and Brethren Rood and Spitzer the rest of the time. Bro. Sam Emswiler led the song service, which we all greatly enjoyed. Bro. Ora Zirkle talked for us Nov. 1.—Florida J. E. Green, Middletown, Ind., Nov. 1.

Muncie.—We observed Rally Day Oct. 19. Our pastor, Bro. G. L. Studebaker, spoke in the forenoon on the subject of "Consecration." Dinner was served in the basement of the church, and in the afternoon Bro. Paul Studebaker spoke on the subject, "Volunteer Service." Our communion was held Oct. 26. The visiting ministers were J. S. Allbredge, who officiated, L. L. Teeter, A. C. Priddy and Paul Studebaker.—Mrs. Mark Beall, Muncie, Ind.

New Salem.—Bro. Ezra Flory, of Bethany Bible School, will be with the church at New Salem, on Saturday evening, Nov. 6, at 7 o'clock; also on Sunday following for three sessions—forenoon, afternoon and evening. The neighboring churches are invited to these services.—Dora Stout, Milford, Ind., Oct. 27.

Pipe Creek.—S. Bro. Levi Peterbaugh, of Argos, Ind., preached for us twice. On the following Sunday Bro. Buryl Hoover, of Manchester College, gave us a sermon on "The Good Seed of the Kingdom." Oct. 18 Bro. L. T. Holsinger, of Brethren, Mich., began a series of meetings, continuing for almost three weeks. One was baptized.—Ruth Dailey, Peru, Ind., Oct. 31.

Pleasant View.—Oct. 12 Bro. Geo. Swihart, of Roann, came to assist in a series of meetings, which closed Oct. 26. Sixteen were baptized and the church was greatly strengthened.—Harvey Kreider, South Whitley, Ind., Nov. 4.

Walnut Grove church is to have Rally Day Nov. 16. Bro. Flory, of Bethany Bible School, will be with us, speaking on Saturday evening, Nov. 13, and Sunday morning and evening. The children will give a program in the afternoon. Sister Swihart, also of Bethany, will lead the singing.—Helen Mowiser, Tippecanoe, Ind., Nov. 3.

IOWA

Shaldon.—A special Rally Day Meeting was held in our church Oct. 26. Bro. J. E. Miller, of Elgin, gave three addresses. The illustrated lecture of the Far East, in the evening, was intensely interesting. Most of those in attendance remained for lunch, which was served weeks' revival meeting, closing Oct. 26, with our love feast. Bro. Sollenberger brought to us many rich truths which, we believe, created a deep interest. Two new members were received into the church. There were about forty members present at the love feast.—Jesse Ball, Belleville, Kans., Nov. 3.

Olathe church met in council Nov. 1, with Bro. Henry Brubaker presiding. The annual visit was favorably reported. Our series of meetings was postponed this fall, on account of not securing a minister. Bro. Henry Brubaker was again chosen elder for the coming year, and the other church officers and the superintendent for the Sunday-school were also elected.—Goldie Hollinger, Olathe, Kans., Nov. 3.

Ottawa.—Oct. 21 Bro. Jesse B. Emmert, of India, and Bro. W. G. Reckner, of McPherson, gave us a most interesting service. The former gave an unusually interesting talk on the missionaries and their work, giving us some idea of what each day means to them. Oct. 25 we held our love feast at which seventy-six members were present. Bro. H. T. Brubaker, of Olathe, Bro. S. J. Heckman, of Overbrook, and Bro. Ellenberger, of Gardner, assisted. Sunday morning Brethren W. B. Deviller and J. S. Carney were ordained to the eldership, Brethren Brubaker and Heckman officiating. In the evening the "Forward Movement" slides were shown, which was another strong appeal for greater service. Prof. E. M. Studebaker, of McPherson, is to conduct a Bible Normal during the latter part of December.—Olive M. Wheeler, Ottawa, Kans., Oct. 29.

Richland Center church enjoyed a very refreshing revival meeting during the first two weeks of October. The evangelist, Bro. C. J. Eshelman, of McPherson, labored earnestly and faithfully in presenting Christ as the only hope of mankind. Incidentally he endeared himself to the hearts of all who came in touch with him. Two young men were baptized as a direct result of the meeting. Others were deeply impressed, and we hope to win them yet. We expect Bro. Edson Ulery, of Michigan, to be with us in a Bible Institute early in December. The first number of our lecture course will be a chalk talk by Prof. Ebel. Nov. 20.—Ira H. Frantz, Beulah, Kans., Nov. 3.

Salem.—Oct. 26 closed our revival, which was conducted by Bro. Isaac Frantz, of Covington, Ohio, who gave us some very good sermons. The song service was led by Sister Frantz. Eleven were received into the church by baptism. Our love feast was held Oct. 2 Bro. Frantz officiating.—Mrs. B. S. Trostle, Niekerson, Kans., Nov.

Washington Creek.—Bro. J. Clyde Forney, of McPherson, Kans., began a series of meetings Oct. 21, preaching each evening and three times on Sunday. His sermons were clear, strong and logical and were well received by all that heard him. There were on conversions but we feel that the meetings were a success in building up and strengthening the members. The song service was led by Sister Anna Fox and Florence Garber, and Bro. J. C. Postma. We closed with a love feast on Sunday evening, Nov. 2, with about 110 members communing. Bro. B. Forney, of Lawrence, Kans., officiated. Visiting ministers present were Brethren John Ward and C. A. Ward. We expect Bro. Forney to be with us again Jan. 25, in a week's Sunday-school Institute.—Ruth Hoover, Lone Star, Kans., Nov. 3.

MARYLAND

Baltimore (Woodberry).—Oct. 12 Prof. Kinsey, of Blue Ridge College, preached both morning and evening. In the afternoon our regular fall business meeting was held. Bro. A. D. Hoover was elected deacon. Our Rally Day service was held Oct. 19. A special program was given, consisting of recitations by several Sunday-school pupils, addresses and special music. In the evening Bro. Levi S. Ziegler, of Denton, Md., began a two weeks' evangelistic meeting. One Sunday-school scholar was baptized and two members were reclaimed. Our fall love feast was held Oct. 25.—Mrs. H. Carroll Yingling, Baltimore, Md., Nov. 5.

Locust Grove.—Eld. G. S. Harp, of Myersville, Md., came Oct. 1 and remained until Oct. 27, preaching fifteen sermons and conducting our love feast, at which 15 members were present. Our meetings were well attended. Bro. Harp is a consecrated, earnest worker and his sermons were enjoyed by all. The church is strengthened and encouraged. One was baptized and three reclaimed. Brethren W. T. Miller, Walter Thomas, Jesse Burall and Silas Utz were visiting ministers at our love feast.—Jessie Alsip, Emory, Md., Oct. 31.

Pleasant View.—Oct. 19 the Brownsville Christian Workers' Society by invitation, rendered a splendid missionary program. An offering of $18 was lifted for the General Mission Board. All present enjoyed the program.—Mrs. J. S. Bowman, Burkittsville, Md., Oct. 30.

West Point.—We held our love feast at the West Point house Oct. 19, with an attendance of about sixty-four members. Ministers present were Brethren S. E. Englar, Ed Bixler, J. H. Lan and Phil Englar.—E. N. Eaton, Owings Mills, Md., Oct. 30.

MICHIGAN

Bear Lake church held her annual love feast Oct. 25, with eighteen members present. Bro. Kniesly officiated. Bro. Kniesly, of Harbor Springs, preached for us on Sunday.—Julia E. Younce, Clarion, Mich., Nov. 5.

Onekama church met in council Oct. 4, with Eld. J. E. Ulery presiding. New officers were elected for the year, and Sunday-school officers for the winter months. Sister W. R. Miller was elected Sunday-school superintendent; Bro. J. E. Ulery, elder in charge. Many of our number leave again gone to the city for work or other fields of labor, leaving us with only a few to carry on the work of the church during the winter season. Yet we have much reason to be encouraged when nearly a full representation is present at Sunday-school each Sunday. Oct. 25 we held our love feast, which celebrated Bro. W. R. Miller's seventieth birthday. Bro. Miller officiated. While the attendance was very small, the meeting was quiet and spiritual. Bro. Roy Miller and family were with us. Last spring our president of Christian Workers' Meeting suggested that the children do some work or raise some particular thing during the summer, the proceeds of which might go for missions. A splendid program was given Oct. 26 by the children, which inspired the older ones to give, and a collection of $60 was taken, to be sent to the Armenian sufferers. This was raised by an audience of only thirty-eight, eighteen of whom were adults.—Alma Wise, Onekama, Mich., Nov. 3.

MISSOURI

Carthage.—During the month of October Bro. D. G. Brubaker conducted a series of meetings for us. Two were added to our number. The weather was not very favorable as we would have desired. The attendance was thus sometimes not so encouraging, but the excellent word by our brother was much enjoyed, and attended with revival of active and refreshing interest in the membership. Two have been granted letters since the meeting, and one sister has gone to her eternal home. The number of members, although encouraged by many ingatherings, continues without much change. There is more activity and life among the sisters of the church and younger members than formerly. Sunday-school, two preaching services and Christian Workers' Meetings each Sabbath day are producing good results.—J. L. Switzer, Carterville, Mo., Nov. 4.

Rockingham church met in council Nov. 1, with Eld. E. G. Rodabaugh presiding. Sunday-school officers were elected, with Bro. Jesse Early, superintendent. Sister Mable Lam was elected president of the Christian Workers. Brethren Oscar Ely, S. G. Newham and J. S. Bowman were elected as a committee to secure a pastor for this church.—Hester Bowman, Hardin, Mo., Nov. 3.

TO THE BRETHREN WITH THE TWO COATS

questions below are obviously addressed to tbe bretbren. Nevertbeless sisters may read tbem, and perhaps find a trutb therein for tbemselves.

Qnestion Number One

Wbat spirit directs a brother (and not an obscure one either) to board a train, taking him from Annual Conference, attired in plain clothing, and to emerge from the train at the nther end nf tbe jnurney, dressed in the fashion of tbe wnrld?

Qnestion Number Two

Is it tbe Spirit nf the Lord that causes a hrotber to appear at God's bouse, looking like a man of God, and wben away, about his business affairs, to look like a man of the world? No, verily no. Tbis is a new manifestation of the notorious "Sunday religion." Tbe Spirit of the Lord is not double-minded.

Question Number Three

Wben Jesus comes, dear brotber, which coat do you want bim to find you wearing? If it were possible to make an appointment witb the Lord, face to face, as you are, in the flesb, whicb coat would you eboose for tbe nccasion? Eva M. Brallier.

Curlew, Iowa.

SPRAY, NORTH CAROLINA

Spray is a cotton mill town nf about 11,000 inhabitants. The people in general depend on the mills for their support. Any one looking for a job can find it at Spray, whether man, woman, hoy or girl, and they are paid fairly good wages.

Yon will never find a more kind, generous and npen-bearted people than tbe ones in Spray. They can not dn enough for one. This was plainly manifested to the writer recently, while there in a series of meetings. They remembered him with a liberal offering and tbe good wife and children at bome were also presented with a number of niee blankets and several pretty gingham dress patterns. This spirit of liberality alone seems tn be a good sign of spiritual life.

They now have a neat little churchhouse, with a tntal membership of about eigbty. Fifteen have just been added to the church during the recent revival.

I must say, right here, that I never was in a series of meetings where all the membership took as active a part, and worked together as earnestly as in Spray. One dear sister walked four or five miles to attend tbe services.

The work there is under tbe care of Bro. L. A. Bowman as pastor and elder. His faithful service is mucb appreciated by all.

They have bad, in the past, preaching only once eacb month, and sometimes there is a disappointment even tben. But that is not enough. They are spending money, time and talent to get people into the church, and now they, like many others, are waking up to the fact, that these converts must be nurtured and saved for the church, if we are to gain anything in the end.

Now the little flock in Spray needs a pastor, and sbould have one hy all means. They voted, and unanimously pledged their part of a pastor's support. They are not able, financially, to support a pastor unaided, but they will do tbeir part. Doubtless the Mission Board will help. Some nne must answer hy taking up the work, or tbe good interest that is now afiame will wane. Witbout a shepherd or pastor, to be constantly on the scene and to encourage them, those dear young people, whn are now babes in Christ, will perish. Besides the earnestness and zeal, on the part of tbe membership there, people of other denominationa are interested, and want us to locate a minister there. I am sure that many nf tbem would contribute to a pastor's support. Witb a live, wide-awake pastor tbere, in a few years, our people might be tbe leading denomination. This is the conviction nf all with whom I talked.

Tbe First and Southern Districts of Virginia need men—ministers wbn will quit farming and other secular callings, and get into the Lord's work. May we dn our part! J. H. Wimmer.

Selma, Va., Oct. 27.

SOUTHERN ILLINOIS

The District Meeting was beld in Decatur Oct. 8. The elders met the day before and organized by electing Eld. Wm. Shull, Chairman, and Eld. Jesse Smeltzer, Clerk. A good representation of the elders was present, to consider tbe work of tbe District, looking toward greater efforts for growtb and development among tbe churches.

In the afternoon, while the elders were yet in session, tbe Sisters' Aid Societies held a meeting at whicb much interest was manifested. An offering of $30 was taken for Sister Minna Heckman, who is engaged in kindergarten and mission work in Champaign, and whose support is made up largely by offerings from Sunday-schonls, organized classes, Aid Societies and private donations.

Following this meeting a Missionary Conference was held. Nn program had been arranged, but it was soon discovered that the gensral theme was "Jny in Service." Several outgoing missionaries were present and gave nf their experiences. A call was made for volunteers, and fifty-three responded. This will surely mean something for the future work of the church.

Following the supper hour "The Home" meeting was beld. Bro. Jesse Smeltzer gave an interesting account of the inner workings of the institution, both among the old people and in the orphanage. An nffering of $450 was lifted. Next came tbe Missionary Meeting. Several inspiring addresses were given and $150 was raised for mission work.

The District Meeting organized by electing Eld. D. J. Blickenstaff, Moderator; Eld. S. S. Blough, Reading Clerk; Eld. Geo. W. Miller, Writing Clerk. No queries were presented. The reports from the various committees showed progress, witb a few exceptions. It was found that only two ministers had been elected during the past year. The meeting endorsed the Five-year Forward Movement and it is hoped that the local churches will take up the different phases of the Movement. It was decided to try to secure a Sunday-school expert during tbe summer nf 1920 to promote the Sunday-school work. The District was asked to raise $4,500 for missions this year.

Elders S. S. Blough and W. T. Heckman were selected as Trustees for Mt. Morris College. Eld. Geo. W. Miller was elected as a member of the Standing Committee, with Eld. S. S. Blough, alternate. The 1920 District Meeting is to be beld in Girard.

A rousing Temperance Meeting was beld in the evening—Eld. I. D. Heckman giving the address. One session of the Ministerial Meeting was held nn Wednesday evening, the other on Thursday morning. Tbe talks were interesting and instructive, dealing with constructive ministerial work.

The Decatur church certainly deserves credit for the manner of caring for a meeting nf this kind. Meals were served on the cafeteria plan in a tent just across the street. Lodging was furnished in the homes of the members and neighbors. The spirit of the meeting was excellent. It seemed to the writer that during the entire time the leading thought was for more aggressive work, greater consecration, and a desire for a deeper spiritual life among our membership. Geo. W. Miller, Clerk.

PRAYER'S POWER

About two years ago a certain minister fell ill, but despite the best of medical attention, he gradually grew worse until he could not sleep and had no appetite. The slow attack of typhoid fever was surely taking bis life. At last he told his wife that he was going to die, but he assured her that all was well.

At about tbat hour the saints beld their weekly prayer meeting. As the afflicted brother lay upon his bed in weariness, he glanced at the clock, and remembered that just then the faithful were gathered in a brother's bome, praying mightily to God, and remembering him especially. The thought comforted him and he lay quiet. He kept thinking about it, over and over, until he fell asleep. A few hours later he awoke with a start, called his wife to his bedside and asked her what had happened. He was more refreshed than he had been for weeks. He tnld his wife he was going to get well. Where medicine and science had failed, prayer had been the one thing needful.

Today he is well and hearty, and doing good work for the Lord, who spared his life when he was so near death's door.

Long ago, when the saints prayed for Peter's release, they were unable to comprehend so sudden an answer and thought that a spirit stood at their gate. There is a wonderful power in prayer, and it can heal the sin-sick soul as well as the ailing physical body.

Aline, Okla. Mary E. Prentice.

WHILE ON FURLOUGH

As we stand at the great Eastern Gateway, ready to embark for Sweden, we look back over the seven months of furlough we have enjoyed in the homeland, and ask ourselves the question: "Is it possible that we have been home seven months?" If the time has been short, it has not lacked in interest and inspiration.

We have been asked why we do not remain home longer. The only answer is: Because of the weak force of missionaries in Sweden, we consider our presence on the field of greater importance than our stay at home. The Scandinavian field is not manned as are our other foreign fields. Then, too, the climate in Sweden is cool and bracing, and therefore we are not as much in need of a long rest as are our India and China missionaries.

What the Scandinavian missionaries need, more than anything else, is inspiration. The slow grind of routine mission work is not very inspiring. We have our oasis in the desert, and refreshing seasons from the presence of the Lord, but they are not so frequent, inspirational and permanent as in the larger and stronger churches.

I am justified in saying that the intent of our furlough has been accomplished. Our prayers, concerning Sister Graybill's health, have been answered. Without a serious operation she returns with her health greatly improved. For this we praise the Lord. As for myself, this summer has been a very busy time. There was very little time for actual rest, but a change of work is also rest. This kind of rest has undoubtedly made the summer so short. We have visited a large number of friends. These visits were mostly in connection with our deputation work. The mingling with the saints at nearly one hundred and fifty meetings, of which the Becker Bicentennial Meeting might he called the climax, has indeed given us much inspiration. The nine love feasts, it was our privilege to attend, have also added their share in stimulating our lives and giving us strength for the tasks in life that lie before us. Two of these were just before our departure, Sunday, Oct. 19, at the Anwell church, in New Jersey, and Sunday, Oct. 26, a few days before sailing, at the Brooklyn church, N. Y.

Now we are at the port, ready to sail whenever the vessel is ready to take us on board. We are having a splendid lesson in patience. The "Stockholm" was scheduled to sail Oct. 22. We got here in good time for this, only to be informed that, because of the longshoremen's strike, the vessel could not sail until the 25th. When we got to the Danish Consul, he refused to visé Bro. Glasmire's passport until he would receive authority from the Department nf Justice at Copenhagen which, he said, would require about two weeks. It now looked very doubtful for the Glasmire family to accompany us on the voyage. We all felt sorry for this, because of the assistance we migbt give each other on the voyage. We now prayed that in some way conditions might change, so as to still have them accompany us.

Oct. 22 we were informed that the date of sailing had been postponed till the 28th, and Oct. 25 we received notice that a cablegram from Copenhagen, authorizing the Danish Consul in New York to visé Bro. Glasmire's passport, had been received. Now the Scandinavian missionaries here are patiently awaiting the date of sailing, which, accordiug to last reports, is tomorrow, the 29th. The continuation of the strike is one of the "all things" that worked together for good, as far as we are concerned.

Most all of the farewells have been said to loved ones and all our papers and things are in shape for sailing. We know that kind friends are waiting to greet us on the other side of the great deep, and now it requires just a little more than the normal amount of patience to wait until the vessel can sail. The "Stockholm's" 1,100 passengers are not the only ones who are disappointed in sailing. There are scores of vessels in the same predicament, and New York is overcrowded with guests, to the extent that one can hardly find place for lodging.

By the time our readers get this little message, we hope to be well on our way, or on our field of labor. May the Lord bless the church in the homeland! And may you daily remember your servants in the Scandinavian field at a throne of grace! J. F. Graybill.

BEATITUDES, THE, ... .75
S. N. McCann.

You will find the heart of Christ's message in the Sermon on the Mount. You will find the heart of this great proclamation in the opening verses—the Beatitudes. This is why the Beatitudes are worthy of the closest study under the guidance of one who has made their deepest meaning his life quest. Twelve excellently selected illustrations help to enrich the author's sympathetic study of the opening verses of the Sermon on the Mount.

CHARLIE NEWCOMER, ... .25
Wilbur B. Stover.

This touching story of a boy of our own times has been a great favorite with boys and girls. Seven editions have been printed; this is proof enough of the story's perennial inspiration. It is not only a story that the boys and girls like to read, but it is at the same time one that we can most heartily recommend. Be sure that the children have a chance to read the story of Charlie Newcomer.

CHRISTIAN ATTIRE, ... .10
Lydia E. Taylar.

An unusually able treatment of the subject of dress and that problem relates itself to the Christian life. Originally given as an address at Annual Conference. Quantity prices per dozen, $1.00; per 100, $6.00.

DOCTRINE OF THE BRETHREN DEFENDED, ... .65
R. H. Miller.

A clear and interesting exposition of the doctrines of the church. The author is commonly recognized as having been one of the most able thinkers of his day. The volume treats of the divinity of Christ, and of the Holy Spirit as well as the several distinctive doctrines of the church.

ORESS REFORM, ... .20
Wilbur F. Crafts, Ph. D., Elder J. W. Lear and Others.

A very sane and fair treatment of the problem of Christian adornment by Wilbur F. Crafts of the International Reform Bureau. The booklet contains also "The Price of Fashion," by Elder J. W. Lear, and selections from editorials by Editors J. H. Moore, Edward Frantz and D. L. Miller.

TOPICAL SERMON NOTES, ... .50
M. M. Sherrick, A. M.

A pocket-sized volume containing about 100 sermon outlines. These outlines are the fruitage of a practical ministry of more than twenty-five years, during which time the author has been pastor, teacher and evangelist.

TWELVE APOSTLES, THE, ... .75
J. W. Wayland, Ph. D.

The author has gathered together all that is known of the twelve men who stood especially near to the Master. He has told the story of each in an instructive and engaging manner.

The reader is continually surprised and delighted that so much material bearing on the life and work of the apostles is brought to light. No available means has been spared to make the volume as accurate and readable as possible. Cloth; 252 pages.

TWO CENTURIES OF THE CHURCH OF THE BRETHREN,
Artistic Cloth, ... $1.5
Half Leather, Gilt Top, ... 2.5

At the Bicentennial Conference in 1908 two centuries of church activity and progress were celebrated. Twenty-four addresses covering practically the whole field of church history were delivered. These were later collected and printed in a handsome volume entitled: Two Centuries of the Church of the Brethren. The book is a work of great historical importance. It is embellished with twenty-five full-page photogravure portraits of the speakers at the Bicentennial Conference.

UNIVERSALISM AGAINST ITSELF, ... .75
A. Willard Hall, Ph. D.

Over 100,00 copies of this convincing book have been sold. It is the best book on Universalism that can be had.

he will begin at Wheatville, Nov. 9.—Mrs. A. M. Rhinehart, Eaton, Ohio, Nov. 3.

West Dayton church has passed through a month filled with good things. It is especially gratifying to see the active interest of our young people. The first Sunday evening of October the young ladies conducted the services and gave their ideas of what young men should be. On Sunday, Oct. 26, Bro. D. L. Miller gave us a sermon on "The Sunny Side of Life." In the evening workers for Sunday-school and Y. M. C. A. occupied the pulpit. Nov. 2 services were conducted by the young men. We have a large and interested teacher-training class session each week.—Mra. Isabel McPherson, Dayton, Ohio, Nov. 3.

OKLAHOMA

Big Creek.—Our series of meetings began Oct. 12, with our pastor in charge. Bro. Sala arrived to take up the meetings Oct. 16. One was received into the church by baptism and the church in general was built up and benefited by this meeting. Owing to the very rainy weather the meetings closed Oct. 25, at which time our love feast was held, with sixty-one present. Several visiting members were with us from Paradise Prairie and Bartleaville churches.—Nellie B. Kinzie, Ripley, Okla., Oct. 31.

PENNSYLVANIA

Annville.—We held our fall love feast Oct. 25, with a good representation of members present, including three visiting ministers, Brn. S. R. Zug, of Palmyra, Pa., officiated. Three were received by letter. Bro. Elder Hartman and family moved into our District from the Maiden Creek congregation. We appreciate Bro. Hartman's work and help in the ministry very much. Our series of meetings at the Annville house is to begin Nov. 15, with Bro. J. L. Myers, of Loganville, Pa., in charge. We decided to have a series of meetings at South Annville, which will be announced later.—Fannie Kreider, Lebanon, Pa., Oct. 26.

Chest Creek church held her love feast Sept. 28, with Bro. D. K. Clapper officating. He also preached for us four evenings preceding the love feast.—Ora Owens, Manafey, Pa., Nov. 4.

East Petersburg.—Bro. J. L. Myers, of Loganville, Pa., conducted a very successful revival meeting at the Bellaville house, closing Oct. 26. Sunday afternoon, Oct. 26, five were baptized. We held our love feast at the Saluaga house Oct. 28 and 29, with a good attendance. A number of ministers were present from other congregations. Bro. Wenger, of Fredericksburg, officated.—Phares J. Forney, East Petersburg, Pa., Nov. 2.

Ephrata.—Oct. 23 the Twenty-eighth Annual Convention of the Lancaster County Sunday-school Association was held in the church at this place. Sessions were held in the morning, afternoon and evening. Although the weather was somewhat unfavorable, yet each session was well attended. The enrollment of delegates and visitors numbered 680, and the offerings received for the promotion of Sunday-school work amounted to $77.05. Many instructive and inspiring talks were given. Bro. H. K. Ober, President of Elizabethtown College, was elected president of the association for the coming year. Nov. 2 at the forenoon, Sunday-school hour, Bro. J. W. G. Hershey, of Lititz, spoke to the school on temperance. A Children's Day program followed, which included recitations and songs. At 4 P. M. our love feast was begun. Brethren J. W. G. Hershey, Abram Royer and Samuel Wolf were present.—Gertrude M. Shirk, Ephrata, Pa., Nov. 3.

Everett church has just closed a two weeks' series of meetings, conducted by Bro. Leonard Hollinger, of Pottstown, Pa., closing with our semiannual love feast Nov. 2, which was largely attended. Six were added to the church by baptism.—Nancy Lashley, Everett, Pa., Nov. 3.

Harrisburg.—Oct. 28 the members convened in council, with Bro. Conner presiding. Bro. H. K. Balsbaugh was elected Sunday-school superintendent, and Sister Katie Graybill, Christian Workers' president. Nov. 2, at 11 A. M., Bro. Geo. D. Bowser who is now here to hold a series of meetings, preached an interesting sermon. In the afternoon we gathered for the love feast, at which about 120 were present. Bro. Bonsack preached the examination sermon, after which Bro. Lininger, of Mechanicsburg, gave a short talk. Brethren Cochlin and Ober were also present. Bro. Bonsack officiated.—Sallie E. Schaffner, Harrisburg, Pa., Nov. 3.

Indian Creek.—Sunday, Nov. 2, we had an all-day meeting. In the morning four members of the Volunteer Band of Elizabethtown College gave inspiring and helpful talks on "Missions" and the "Five-year Forward Movement." Temperance exercises were rendered in the afternoon, with recitations by some of our young people, and a splendid reading and an address by children by two of the Volunteer Band workers.—B. M. Booz, Vernfield, Pa., Nov. 5.

Marklaysburg.—The meeting at the Bethel house, near Farmington, Pa., conducted by the writer, closed Oct. 29, with eighteen baptized, and three awaiting the sacred rite. The attendance was good, considering the very rainy weather, and bad roads. On Sunday, Oct. 26, two deacons were elected, and will be installed in the near future. The church here is in a flourishing condition.—D. K. Clapper, Meyersdale, Pa., Oct. 31.

Quakertown.—Our revival services, conducted by Bro. Adam Hollinger, of Shamokin, Pa., closed Oct. 19 with a love feast. Bro. Hollinger delivered seventeen Spirit-filled sermons, besides a very appropriate examination sermon on Sunday morning, prior to the feast. Visiting ministers present were Brethren W. T. Spidle and N. H. Blough. At the close of the least Bro. Hollinger gave the invitation, and one came forward and was baptized the following Sunday, Oct. 26 Bro. Blough filled the pulpit both moraiag and evening, preaching powerful sermons to eager listeners. Since our last report our Sunday-school sent $6.22 to the General Sunday School Board, and $5 to the First Brethren Mission at Valdosta, Ga.—Lucina Hershberger, Quakertown, Pa., Nov. 4.

Williamsburg.—Oct. 7 Bro. M. C. Swigart began a series of meetings, which lasted until Oct. 23. The meetings were very well attended and enjoyed by all. Twelve were baptized, two reclaimed and one awaits baptism. Three were received recently by letter and one alster was baptized prior to the revival. We held our love feast Oct. 26, with about eighty members present. Bro. M. R. Brumbaugh, nl Martinsburg, officiated at this service.—Mrs. M. C. Shelly, Wertz, Pa., Nov. 3.

TENNESSEE

Knob Creek church met in council Nov. 1, with Eld. R. B. Pritchett presiding. We had with us Bro. John Garst, of the Pleasant Hill congregation, who gave us some good instruction. He also preached for us on Sunday morning. We are planning to have a revival meeting in the near future. We held our love least Oct. 5. A number of visiting brethren were with us, and Bro. S. H. Garst officiated. Bro. A. M. Laughrun, of New Hope, gave us a splendid sermon on Sunday. —Mrs. C. R. Simmons, Johnson City, Tenn., Nov. 4.

VIRGINIA

Cook's Creek.—Oct. 11 Eld. J. S. Zigler, of Fayetteville, W. Va., began a series of meetings in the Dayton church, continuing until Oct. 26. The meetings were well attended, and the loterest was good. Bro. Zigler's discourses were well prepared and had the real Gospel ring. The church was much strengthened and five were baptized. Oct. 18 we held our love feast at the Garber church, with 133 members present. Bro. J. S. Zigler was with us and officisted.—S. I. Bowman, Harrisonburg, Va., Oct. 28.

Mt. Olivet.—Brethren W. T. Pannell and Geo. Maupin held a series of meetings, beginning Oct. 11 and continuing for a week, closing with our love least, at which thirty-three members were present. We have preaching every second and fourth Sunday, and hope to see our church grow and improve.—M. C. Coffee, Love, Va., Oct. 27.

Oronoco.—Sunday, Oct. 26, Bro. R. M. Figgers, our pastor, began a week's series of meetings at Brown Mountain schoolhouse, a mission point of Oronoco. He preached seven inspiring sermons. Seven came forward, three of whom were baptized; one awaits the rite.—Clementine Figgers, Oronoco, Va., Nov. 3.

Texas Chapel.—Bro. W. F. Vest began a series of meetings Oct. 15, continuing until Oct. 25. He gave us splendid sermons and the members were much encouraged and built up. We had a very spiritual love least at the close of the meetings, with about twenty-five members present. Bro. J. K. Keith officiated and preached an able sermon on Sunday.—Dessie Rakes, Alleghany Springs, Va., Oct. 28.

Troutville.—Our love least was held Oct. 11, with Eld. T. S. Moherman, of Daleville congregation, officiating. Quite a large number were present and we feel that we were spiritually blessed. Oct. 24 a love least was held at New Bethel, a mission point in this congregation, at which Bro. J. W. Ikenberry officiated. A number of the people of the community, other than our own members, were present and manifested a real interest in the services. The Sunday-school at this place is still moving along nicely, with good interest and attendance.—Frankie Showalter, Troutville, Va., Oct. 31.

Unity church met in council at the Fairview house Nov. 1. Bro. J. D. Hutchison presided over the meeting, and Bro. Walter Myers presided. All the ministering brethren were present, also Bro. D. H. Zigler, of Linville Creek, and Bro. Minor Miller, of Bridgewater. One letter was granted. The appointments for the different Sunday-schools were appointed: Bro. Russell Mason for Bethel; Bro. D. F. Roller for Fairview; Bro. J. F. Flory for Newdale. As the workers are few at the latter place, Bro. J. M. Mason and family were appointed to assist in the work there. Christian Workers' presiding are: J. M. Mason for Bethel; D. F. Roller for Newdale and Fairview. Bro. J. S. Roller will be elder in charge. Bro. John L. Holsinger and wife, having been elected as Elder and deaconess, former congregation, were installed. At the close of the meeting two, who had confessed Christ at our late revival, were baptized. Nov. 2, Bro. Minor Miller was with us at Bethel and gave an interesting and helpful sermon, after a talk to the children of the Sunday-school, to be held at Bridgewater.—Anna R. Roller, Timberville, Va., Nov. 3.

WASHINGTON

Spokane.—Sept. 14 Sister Eva Trostle gave an inspiring talk on "How to Be Truly Happy." Seventy-eight were present and an offering of $8.15 was taken. Sept. 21 our Sunday-school went in a body to the forest near Miller Station, and held services in the open air. Forty-five were present. Our council meeting was held Oct. 29, with Eld. C. F. Rupel presiding. Brethren Geo. Shamberger, Paul Shamberger and Elder Eby were present, to former congregation, one other organization.—Truman Aschenbrenner, Spokane, Wssh., Oct. 31.

Spokane.—The North Spokane mission, which is now the North Spokane church, is now fully organized to carry on the work, assisted by the District. Eld. Stephen Johnson is the elder in charge, with Brethren Bare and Clapper assisting. We have preaching and Christian Workers' Meetiag every Sunday, and mid-week prayer meeting. We have a good, live Sunday-school, with an average attendance of about forty-five, with twenty-five on the home department roll and fifteen on the cradle roll. We are all trying to do our bit in the "Forward Movement." More than 150 homes have been visited. We are located on Nappa Street, just on Richland Park-car. From town take the Hillyard car, get off at Rich and go one block west. We will greatly appreciate having members who may be passing through or stopping in Spokane, meet with us.—Elizabeth Johnson, Spokane, Wash., Nov. 1.

WEST VIRGINIA

Bethel church met in council Oct. 11, with Eld. Albert S. Arnold presiding. The reports of the visiting brethren were very encouraging. Bro. Arnold spent the day on Saturday with us. Sunday, Oct. 12, Bro. John S. Fike, of Eglon, W. Va., began a series of meetings, preaching ten very interesting sermons, which greatly strengthened the members. Two were baptized. We held our love least Oct. 18, with Bro. Fike officiating. Bro. Arnold gave us a talk to the children at the Sunday-school hour.—Bessie M. Newbrough, Old Fields, W. Va., Nov. 3.

Lower Lost River.—Sept. 14 Bro. Geo. A. Phillips, of Waynesboro, Va., began a series of meetings at the New Dale house, continuing till Oct. 3. He preached twenty-two sermons, besides helping to conduct our love least Sept. 27. During all these meetings there was much interest manifested and fourteen were added to the church by baptism. Bro. Phillips made many friends during his stay among us. Oct. 10 the writer went to Dover schoolhouse, near Moorefield, W. Va., and conducted church meeting and assisted Bro. B. Y. S. Teeter in a love feast which was enjoyed by all present. Our love feast was held Oct. 11, prior to which the writer baptized three applicants.—L. H. Miller, Needmore, W. Va., Oct. 29.

WISCONSIN

Chippewa Valley.—We held an all-day Harvest Meeting Oct. 11, which was well attended and very much enjoyed by all. Bro. C. C. Myers, of Waddams Grove, Ill., preached five sermons and remained over Sunday. We took an offering of $823.60, to be used for building sheds and repairing the churchhouse. Oct. 14 Bro. Roger D. Winger, of Chicago, came to this place in the interest of the "Forward Movement" and delivered four very fine lectures, which were an inspiration for greater service. An offering of $34.79 was taken for World-wide Missions. These meetings were very well attended and much appreciated by all.—John Cripe, Mondovi, Wis., Nov. 3.

Will You Thank the Lord for This?

Did the Lord bless you with a thankful spirit? Is it easy for you, even in hard circumstances, to find things to be thankful for? If so, that is itself a cause for thankfulness. Thank God that you can be thankful.

Because a thankful spirit is one of the greatest blessings you can have. It breeds cheerfulness continually, and that is a twin brother to happiness. And, as is the case with twins so often, you can hardly tell them apart.

A thankful person finds so many good things in life that other people miss. He can see better. And he understands the fine art of turning everything to some advantage. He is always on the lookout for something good. And always finding it.

Blessed are the thankful, for the very choicest things of life are theirs.

But perhaps the Lord did not make you thus. Well, did you ever speak to him about the matter? Did you ever tell him how much you would like to have a thankful spirit? He'll give you one yet if you can show him that you really want it.

A Thanksgiving, a Confession and a Prayer

Some earnest soul, contemplating the world situation, has proposed this thanksgiving: "That God has made it possible for Christian America to minister to the material, moral and spiritual needs of the world."

And this confession: "That this hour of supreme opportunity and responsibility finds our leadership as a nation weakened by racial and class hatreds, by industrial strife and selfish indulgence, by blindness and indifference to the manifest leadings of God."

And this prayer: "That the well-springs of our national life may be cleansed. That there may be awakened among us a new sense of moral responsibility. That our political leaders may rise to heights of Christian statesmanship, especially with respect to temperance and other social needs. That the church may be purified and empowered for moral and spiri-

Why This Thanksgiv

The morning paper headline to the effect that th threatened coal strike is bound to come, isn't very i spiring for a Thanksgiving editorial. But I am goir ahead just the same to record my conviction that t Christian never had such cause for thankfulness as h has this year. Never, not excepting even the Thank giving of a year ago, when we were all in that fir

Praise Ye the Lord

"O give thanks unto the Lord; for he is good; for his mercy endureth forever" (1 Chron. 16: 34).

"Thanksgiving and the voice of melody, joy and gladness shall be found in Zion. The Lord will comfort her waste places; and he will make her wilderness like Eden, and her waste places like the garden of the Lord" (Isa. 51: 3).

"Oh that men would praise the Lord for his goodness, and for his wonderful works to the children of men" (Psa. 107: 8)!

Noah was the first man of whom there is any account given to celebrate a day of thanksgiving; and his act so pleased the Lord that he made a covenant with him, declaring that "while the earth remaineth, seed-time and harvest, and cold and heat, and summer and winter, and day and night shall not cease" (Gen. 8: 22).

"In everything by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving let your requests be made known unto God" (Philpp. 4: 6).

flush of joy over the ending of the Great War. F things have happened since that time.

What the strike situation may be by Thanksgivi Day, no one can foresee as this is written (Oct. 30 The scare may all be over. Or we may be in the vs midst of the grimmest of realities. That doesn't ma ter. In comparison with the one great fact whi makes the heart of the Christian glad this year, su things as strikes, riots, cold, famine, and civil war, not count.

The old story of the poor man who was thankf that he still had his appetite when the dog snatch away his loaf of bread, points the truth. An appet is more important than a loaf of bread. Its loss much more serious. A man with an appetite may fi another loaf, while without this all the bread in t world is useless.

Let me insert a parenthesis here: The ground f gratitude I'm thinking of is very broad in its appe Individuals will have, as always, their own particul reasons for special thanks. Some will be thankful b cause their homes have been spared the sorrow of b reavement. Others, because, having gone down in the valley of weeping, they have found there hither untouched springs of comfort and strength, and ne are readier than before for the hard ministries of li And so each one can count up for himself blessin innumerable. I wish to speak of something for whi we can all be thankful.

And this brings us back to the story of the thankf hungry man. The biggest thing in the foreground the present, as a cause for thankfulness, is the spiritu hunger of the church. And this is big enough to ou weigh everything on the other side of the balance.

I refer to the Church of the Brethren in particul and to the churches of Christendom in general. To true representatives of Christianity the recent yea

CONTRIBUTORS' FORUM

Thanksgiving

BY LEANDER SMITH

"In everything give thanks; for this is the will of God in Christ Jesus concerning you" (1 Thess. 5: 18).

THE duty of thanksgiving is a duty which God himself has laid upon us. It is a duty that has been hallowed for us by the example of the Lord himself. "Having given thanks," we read, he distributed the loaves to the hungry multitude in the wilderness, and, similarly, at the institution of the supper, "He took bread, and when he had given thanks, he brake it." It is a duty, moreover, which, in our own hearts, we can not but feel to be both right and fitting, in view of the blessings with which, on all sides, God has surrounded us.

Think of the bounties of God's Providence. How numerous they are! What self-evident proofs of the loving-kindness and goodness of God! What have we that does not come to us from God? In all that concerns our natural, no less than our spiritual, lives we are dependent upon him. And consequently he demands from us, as he is entitled to do, the sacrifice of thanksgiving and praise.

In saying this I do not, of course, for a moment, forget that this thankful spirit may not always be easy. In the struggle with poverty, in the sorrows and trials of life, which fall to the lot of some, it may be hard to find place for a feeling of thanksgiving.

Well do I remember the time when we found our mother standing before us, erect, her hands clenched in her black hair, her eyes full of misery and amazement, her face white as that of the dead. She frightened us. She saw this, or else her intense will had mastered her agony, for, taking her hands from her head, she said, slowly and gently: "Let us give thanks."

Turning to the bed in the room, there lay our father dead. . . . Then were seen, in full action, her keen, passionate nature, her sense of mental pain, and her supreme will, instant and unsparing, making herself and her terrified household give thanks in the midst of such a desolation.

Even in the darkest hour some streak of light, the herald of the coming day, may be found. I have learned that those who triumphed over difficulties never lost heart, never despaired, but always praised God. Let us simply strive to make the best of what we have; let us look on the bright side even of our disappointments and failures—believing that they, too, will work together for good to them that love the Lord; and gradually we shall find that it is possible in everything to give thanks.

In this attitude we are confirmed, when, passing from the bounties of God's Providence, we think of the exceeding riches of his grace. When man sinned and fell, God spared not his own Son, that the work of redemption might be complete.

But not to dwell further upon that unspeakable gift of love itself, let us not forget how clearly and how freely the knowledge of that gift is brought within our reach. We have the Holy Bible, the Blessed Book. We have the church, with her great institutions of learning. We have the sacrament of his church, to bring his experimental knowledge into our very life and soul.

Has our thanksgiving been in proportion to our asking and craving? I think that many times it has not. We do not think, we do not consider. We are not ungrateful to our fellow-creatures. As a rule, when anyone does us a good turn and is kind to us, most of us would be willing to go even out of our way, to do something in return. None of us likes to be thought ungrateful, but our behavior towards God, our Father, the God who loves us, who has preserved us from harm, danger, accident, illness, or loss, is nothing less. We have become so habituated to taking God's gifts as a matter of course, that we fail in our duty of rendering him the thanks which are due him. God has showered blessings upon us, even more than we have asked for, and we have not been thankful for them. It is a thing that we can remedy. It only wants a little thought, a little consideration. If we would think, if we would consider, it might all be remedied, and our hearts might take their part in the worship of thanksgiving, which is God's due.

Let us look at just a few facts in our everyday life. If my heart were to stop beating but for a few seconds, I would drop lifeless. Who am I that this should not happen? I see an ambulance passing by. Some poor person is being hurried to the nearest hospital. He has met with some serious accident or other. Who has preserved me? I see people all around me suffering from diseases, infirmities, bad health, etc. Who has given me health? Then, perhaps, some of us have to be thankful to God that we have a good situation. Looking around we find many out of employment because circumstances are against them. Most of us have energy and strength for our daily work. How many thousands, in this land of ours, have to bemoan shattered health! It is not laziness. Their hearts would be in their work, if they might do it, but it has pleased God to afflict them. Then, too, the most of us have happy homes. We can look around and see others whose homes are very far from happiness indeed. All of us, even the poorest, enjoy some of God's gifts.

We should give God thanks for the promise, not only of the life that now is, but also of the life that is to come. The thankfulness that God desires is unrestrained, willing thankfulness, in the very uttering of which we not only gather its true blessings from the past, but by which we are strengthened and encouraged for the future.

Thanksgiving

By B. F. M. Sours

For the songs of merry robins,
For the rainbows in the sky,
For the aftermath of sunset
Glory, till the colors die;
For the little lambs in arms,
For the Love that watches over,
Shielding us from dread alarms,
O God, we thank thee!

For the daisies in the meadows,
For the sumach by the way,
For brier-roses in the fence-nooks,
For the dew at break of day;
For the glory of the wild-wood
When the basso-pines are heard
Intermingled with the drear winds
And the fearless song of birds,
O God, we thank thee!

For the fathers and the mothers,
For the loyal hearts and true,
For the ferns upon the mountains,
And the holy skies of blue;
For the sparkle of the waters,
And the fish that dart and play,
For the daylight and the darkness
And the loves that fill the day,
O God, we thank thee!

For the harvests in the garner,
For the apples in the bin,
For the blasts outside our windows,
For the light and warmth within;
For the year, the year of blessing,
For the sunshine and the shade,
For thy Hand of Love to succor
When our hearts were sore afraid,
O God, we thank thee!

O our Father! For the Savior
Who our sins and sorrows bore,
Who is building there our mansions,
With their wondrous treasure-store;
For the Love that came from heaven,
Him who died to ransom me,
That from sin and self forever
In his arms we might be free,
O God, we thank thee!

He Was Not a Christian

BY J. H. MOORE

A GREAT man, as the world estimates greatness, one time said that he got more out of Shakespeare than he ever got out of the Bible. He told the truth. Of course he did. Hundreds of others could say the same thing. Such people see more in Shakespeare than they have ever seen in the Bible.

When any part of Shakespeare comes on the stage, they will go to the theater, and some of them will pay five dollars for a reserved seat. They buy the different editions of the works by this noted author of dramas, and read them with the utmost care, as well as with great delight. They read other books about Shakespeare and his times, and, in the course of years, become thoroughly saturated with his thought. Of his writings they can quote, with ease, the most striking parts. In conversation or on the rostrum their talks abound in the sayings of the bard of Avon.

The great man, mentioned above, was of this type. He loved books, but it can not be said that he loved the best of all books—the Bible. However, he loved his Shakespeare. He read the different volumes, meditated over the best sayings, and in time was beard around the world, saying that his favorite work meant more to him than the Word of the Most High. He delighted in the author of his most choice reading, but had little time for the Book having back of it the Author of his being.

But why did he get more out of Shakespeare than he thought he could get out of the Bible? There is a simple answer to this question. He gave more attention to Shakespeare than he gave to the Sacred Writings. He never studied his Bible, and probably never read very much of it. He never claimed to be a Christian, was never born again, never put on Christ in baptism, never entered into the spirit of the Bible, and, of course, never made it the spiritual man of his counsel. He admired consistent church members as he looked upon consistency. He approved of churches, and especially of good church music. He liked the influence of Christianity in this and other countries, but he seemed to have no thought of identifying himself with any church or any special Christian movement. Christians are told to let their light shine, but our great man never had the true light, to let it shine, and never claimed to have. He loved his Shakespeare more than the Bible, and got more out of it.

He grew rich—immensely rich. He knew how to accumulate property and to him money came by the millions. He piled up wealth and then he distributed wealth. It is said that he gave away one-third of a billion, and when he died he still had a half billion left. In the world he did good with his money. In fact, so far as the use of his money was concerned he left the world better than he found it. But he was not a Christian. He possessed many noble Christian qualities, and yet he was never, while living, adopted into the family of God. He remained outside of the pales of any church, and the marvelous influence of his life was on the side of those who lived and died without making a public confession of faith in Christ or in the church he established.

Did he believe in Christ as the Son of God, and that he brought a saving Gospel into the world? Judging from what he said of Shakespeare and the Bible one would not think so. Yes, says one, but he gave his thousands for organs in churches, and at times contributed towards the erection of churches. He helped many a young man and woman to an education. Not only so, but he helped to feed the poor, clothe the naked and relieve the unfortunate. All of this was good and may have pleased the angels, as we know that it pleased a lot of people. But he did not even pretend to be a follower of the One in whose name, and his only, is salvation. He neglected the "one thing needful," even if he did give much of his goods in the interest of charity. He failed to take up the cross and follow his Master.

Well, but he lined up with Christian ethics better than one half of those whose names are on the church rolls. This is true, and even more is true. He was opposed to war, and set apart millions of dollars to aid in eliminating wars of every type. In this particular he held views far in advance of three-fourths of the preachers the world over. All of this is fine. It is commendable, and probably we have not told the half of the good that his millions given away are accomplishing. In view of what his money is doing, there can be no question about his good works following him. The money he left may go on doing good for a thousand years. But he was not a Christian. He was not a member of the body of Christ. He never had a word to say about a title to a mansion in the skies, though he held the title to a very costly mansion in this world.

Why should we say bad things about a dead man?

We are not saying bad things. About him we are telling of the good things that he did. He was a fine business man and his word was as good as his bond, and his bond was worth more than some nations. He loved his family, his neighbors, his nation, and some other nations, but did he love the God who made him, and the Savior who died for him? Ah, here is where the rub comes in. Can a man love the Master and persist in refusing to confess him as the Savior of his soul? Can a man love God and not love his Word?

He made many fine investments, and they were paying investments, but did he make any investments in heaven? Can a man who is not a child of God and does not even pretend to be, lay up treasures in heaven? Suppose a rich man should give all his goods in the interest of humanity and have not love—love for God and man—will his acts of charity profit him? Not if 1 Cor. 13: 3 be true.

It takes more than a mere moral life and great deeds of charity to secure a title to a mansion in the land beyond the stars. It requires a new birth. The man who would enter the Kingdom of God must be born again. He must become a child of God. Deeds of charity are fine, but in the eyes of God, who owns the universe, they cut no figure in the claim to eternal life.

Did our great man believe in the resurrection and in the judgment? In one way it makes no difference whether he did or not, for the judgment is coming." We read: "There shall be a resurrection of the dead, both the just and the unjust." This means the rich man as well as the poor man, the great as well as the small. Both of them must come forth. We further read, "The dead, small and great shall stand before God." At the judgment the books will be opened, the Old and New Testament, and the dead will be judged out of the things written in the books. This takes in all, whether they have been able to get much out of the Bible or not.

But there is another book, the Book of Life, with its list of the children of God—a list of those who have been born into the family of God. We are told what disposition is to be made of those whose names are not found in this book. Can one, who has never registered with the saints while on the earth, expect to find his name among the saints above? Deeds of charity may cover a multitude of mistakes, but if the Scriptures be true—and they are—charity can never be made to atone for the mistake of the man, be he great or small, who has failed to enroll among the believers while in this life.

The Spiritual Meaning of the Cup

BY D. W. KURTZ

As indicated in a previous article, the symbols of the church can be used with different motives and, therefore, with different results. The priestly idea is that the symbol may have a magical power over God and make him propitious. The legalistic use is to obey the letter of the Word merely as a command, and the result is legalism and Pharisaism. The Christian use is pedagogic, wherein the symbol exists for man, the language of the Spirit, the means of grace, the divine method to help man to understand, to appreciate, and to lay hold of the divine life. The Christian use of the symbol is always to change the mind and heart of man, to get man in tune with God.

The "cup" represents the blood of Christ. He offers us his blood. Unless we drink his blood we have no life in us. If we eat his flesh and drink his blood, we have eternal life (John 6: 53-55). This is strange language. The Roman Catholic church takes this literally and believes in "transubstantiation." They hold that when the priest consecrates the bread and wine, they change in substance—not in qualities, of sight, touch, taste, etc.—into the very flesh and blood of Christ. Thus the very literal flesh and blood of Christ are partaken, and this is the "medicine of immortality." The literal substance of divine flesh and blood has magical powers and therefore saves the soul. The crudity and materialism of this view need no comment. Protestantism has rejected this view.

Luther did not hold to the Roman transubstantiation, but held as nearly to it as he could, and therefore adopted "consubstantiation." This view holds that the substance of the bread and wine is not changed, but that the body and blood are present with, and are imparted and received in and with the bread and wine. But Luther held, as do all Protestants, that faith is essential to any efficacy, while the Roman Catholics believe that faith is not essential to the efficacy of the sacraments.

It was difficult for the disciples to understand the meaning of Jesus, so he explained (John 6: 63). "It is the spirit that giveth life; the flesh profiteth nothing: the words that I have spoken unto you are spirit, and are life." This clearly states that the flesh and blood must be spiritually interpreted, not materially. Elsewhere Jesus said that it is not what a man eats that defiles him—or sanctifies him (Mark 7: 18, 19).

The cup represents the blood of Christ (1 Cor. 10: 16; 11: 25). What does it mean to drink, symbolically, the blood of Christ? The only way to interpret the Bible is to do so in the light of customs and meanings which prevailed when the Bible was written. The Israelites were forbidden to eat blood. The reason is summed up in Lev. 17: 14: "For as to the life of all flesh, the blood thereof is all one with the life thereof, . . . for the life of all flesh is the blood thereof." The life is the blood, and the blood is the life. This is the Jewish point of view. Paul has this in mind when he speaks of the cup as the "communion"—or common union, or union, oneness with the blood, the life of Christ. The communion of the blood of Christ is the same as union with the life of Christ. In other words, the cup is the symbol of the blood covenant.

A Hymn of Praise

By Eleanor J. Brumbaugh

O, bless the Lord, my soul!
And be exceeding glad,
"Joint heirs with Christ," he makes us whole
And brings us back to God.

Accept this proffered prize,
And live today with him,
Nor look ye up into the skies
For that which dwells within.

Secure and sacred rest
We find in him alway;
O, rest in him, nor be dismayed:
And wait his coming day.

O, bless the Lord, my soul!
And be exceeding glad;
"Joint heirs with Christ," who makes us whole
And leads us home to God.

What is the blood covenant? Oriental scholars usually interpret the covenant of Jonathan and David (1 Sam. 18: 1-3) as a blood covenant. "The soul of Jonathan was knit with the soul of David." They were one in spirit, in purpose, and they welded their union by a covenant. If this was a blood covenant, let us describe what happened. Jonathan said to David, "I will be your friend, and be loyal to you if I must forsake my father, my mother, my brothers and sisters, my houses and lands, my throne, and my own life. I will protect you and defend you and be true to you at all costs, and nothing in heaven or earth can separate us." Then Jonathan stuck his dagger into his arm, so that the blood flowed and David drank the blood of Jonathan. Then David made the same promise of loyalty to Jonathan, and likewise shed his blood, which Jonathan drank. They signed their covenants in blood, placed these parchments in a little leather box and wore them upon their arms where the wound was made. All who saw either Jonathan or David knew that he had a "friend," and was not alone.

Jesus wants every Christian to be one with him and the Father (John 17: 21). Paul wrote (Philpp. 2: 5): "Have this mind in you which was also in Christ." The end of the Christian life is the symbol of that oneness. Jesus taught this oneness in John 15: "I am the vine, ye are the branches." "Abide in me and I in you. As the branch can not bear fruit of itself, except it abide in the vine; so neither can ye except ye abide in me." The doctrine is clear. We can not have spiritual life, nor fruit, except as we abide in Christ, are one with him, have the same mind, the same life, the same purpose as Christ. There must be a common life. The symbol of a common life is common blood. The cup—the grape juice—is the blood of the fruit of the vine. It is the symbol of the blood of Christ. Hence the cup is the blood covenant. This means oneness with Christ—communion—a common union with him—a unity of life.

When we partake of the cup—Jesus says to us: "I am giving you my blood, in pledge of my love to you. I will be your Savior, your Teacher, your Lord. I will be loyal to you. Neither height, nor depth, nor powers, nor principalities, can separate my love from you." When we take that cup we say to him: "I am going to be loyal to Christ, even if I must break with father and mother, with husband or wife, with houses and lands, with children and fame—I will be loyal to Christ, even if it takes my own life. I will be true to Christ and his Kingdom, no matter what it costs. I will be one with him in all things." This is the meaning of the cup. The whole idea of sonship in the New Testament is "likeness to God." We are to be in tune, in harmony with God, be like God in character. The cup is the symbol, the means of grace, the language of the Spirit, that represents this relation, and the help to get man into this spiritual unity with the Father. But there is no magic in the cup, without a living faith. But a vital faith that believes in Christ as the Son of God, that loves Christ as the Supreme Good, that follows Christ as Lord, such a faith, making the blood covenant with Christ, creates the unity and oneness which means sonship.

Better Christians

Studies of the Bible by Bro. K. Lewis Jonsson
Translated by J. F. Graybill

THIRD INSTALLMENT

Part II.—How Can We Become Better Christians?

LET us stop to consider four conditions that lead a Christian onward in holiness and blessing:

1. The first condition in Christion development is to clear up all perplexities before the Almighty.

As long as grave perplexities exist between the Christian and God, holiness will wither as the leaves on a tree unsound at heart. God's Spirit is the Spirit of Truth, which reveals our whole life in the light of his countenance. He can not endure anything that is doubtful. When the Spirit of God places his finger on any tender spot in the Christian's life, he will not remove it before the matter in question is adjusted by the grace of God.

There may be such things in the Christian's life as have not been rightly cleared up from the very time of his conversion—such things in his present life that are not at all pleasing to God, be it in the home-life, the shop-life, the business-life, the social-life, etc. The Christian may, time and again, get a clear view of himself as the Spirit of God brings things to his remembrance. Possibly, while listening to the preached Word, the searchlight is turned on some dark spot in his life. Something may happen in his life, whereby the Lord wishes to point out the particular sin that is displeasing to him. At times one can hear the Lord plainly say what he told Simon Peter on the night when he washed the disciples' feet: "If I wash thee not, thou hast no part with me" (John 13: 8).

While on my travels in Germany, during the war, I heard a minister tell how he once was in great distress. He served a city parish where his labors were not in vain. The Word of God was bearing much fruit, although there was much opposition. One of the greatest opposers was a business man of more than ordinary prominence. The minister was one day on his way to call at the home of a sick man. Just as he turned into a lonely street, that led up to the sick man's home, he saw the man in question just ahead of him. The minister wanted to avoid this man, and therefore slackened his pace, and, as it was raining, even tried to hide himself under his umbrella. But the man ahead had noticed him and so he waited for him. An interview was unavoidable.

The man asked the minister: "Why did you walk so slowly? Did you not see me?"

The minister answered: "No."

What was this? A lie. He did not at once confess his sin, but went on with this untruth troubling his conscience until he was greatly distressed. He realized that the Lord placed his finger on the tender spot

Responding to his pleasant greeting, I begged him to stop a moment, and at my request he kindly took charge of my precious letter. I thanked him, and God as well, for this providential help in a time of need, and for the patience he had granted me.

The Quandary of the Business Man

His business was getting low and soon lower still. Everything soon seemed at the lowest ebb. What was to be done for his family? was the grievous question of his heart. He was becoming quite disheartened. His wife realized that their help must come from God; and that was what she sought. A neighbor of his felt so concerned for him, that he tried all he could to discover the reasons for the trouble. It was no fault of his, and seeing that there was no likelihood of any improvement, he asked him to come to his office, and he would find him work. He found the man's work so efficient that not long afterwards he became his partner. Everything now went smoothly with his family. His wife felt, with thankfulness, that her prayers had been answered, and she asked now that her husband may be given the same feeling!

"Carry to him our troubles,
To the One divinely strong
And while he bears the burden
We'll carry away the song!"

The Purpose of Excommunication

BY PAUL MOHLER

I SUPPOSE that the most unpleasant thing a church ever has to do is to withdraw fellowship from one of its members. It is always unpleasant to look at sin and see a soul that insists on living in sin. It is also unpleasant to recognize a failure, and whenever a member of the church has to be expelled, it is an evidence of some one's failure. In addition, there are always feelings involved. The one expelled may be the relative or friend of some one who is grieved by the action of the church.

It would be a strange sort of Christian that could do this kind of work and enjoy it in the doing, yet it is sometimes a necessary line of action—absolutely necessary to the best interests of all concerned. When this is the case, there is really no reason why any one should feel at all reluctant in doing his part in it, especially in view of the real purpose of it.

This is the important thing—the purpose of it. It is all-important that the members of the church all understand this. Otherwise, many who are especially interested in the ones so treated, will misjudge the action of the church and be weakened in their loyalty. I think the purpose is best stated by Paul in 1 Cor. 5: 5, where he asks the church "to deliver such a one unto Satan for the destruction of the flesh, that the spirit may be saved in the day of the Lord Jesus." In verse 7 he says: "Purge out the old leaven, that ye may be a new lump, even as ye are unleavened."

Here are two purposes represented: (1) The salvation of the offending member. (2) The purification of the church. Can there be any objection to either of these motives? I think not. The only question that can arise is as to whether, in each case, expulsion is the best method that can be used to reach the end desired. Here is required a nicety of judgment, calling for the fullest guidance of the Holy Spirit. It is a terrible thing to err here. To expel one who ought to be retained in the church, does not purify the church. It rather defiles it by allowing hatred, indifference, carelessness, or some other such thing to weaken the mutual love of the members.

It is equally dangerous to retain a member that ought to be expelled. It is dangerous for him. When a man is bound by sin, so that he is not living a Christian life, nor concerned about his spiritual condition, he needs to be brought to a realization of his sad state. Sometimes expulsion from the church is the only thing that will make any impression on him. Just at the time, it may only make him angry. He may, indeed, not become even angry—just indifferent; but if he has any spark of religious interest, any respect for the church at all, sooner or later he will think. And the very fact that a congregation of Christian people has judged him to be unworthy of their fellowship will set him to examining himself in the light of whatever Christian ideals he possesses. If the church is praying for him—as it should be—the Holy Spirit will bring conviction to his soul, if he has any capacity for spiritual activity. Conviction will bring godly sorrow, godly sorrow will work repentance, and repentance will bring restoration to fellowship with the church.

But suppose it does not work in this way. Suppose it just makes him more stubborn or indifferent. Is that a proof that the action was wrong? Not necessarily. When the church acted rightly, the failure of proper results is not the fault of the church, but of the individual. No method has ever been found to save everybody that joins the church. As long as Satan has the opportunity, he will place just as many of his servants on the church roll as he can, and he will keep them there as long as he can, and, after they are removed, he will keep them under his control just as long as he can. Don't forget that. The point is that the church should labor with a man to bring him to repentance just as long as that is the thing to do. Then the church should expel him, to show him, as well as to place him, just where he belongs. It is a "kill-or-cure" method, and no one knows which it will do.

Now as to the purification of the church. That is a thing not to be lost sight of. As Paul says: "A little leaven leaveneth the whole lump." If the church allows one member to do wrong unrebuked, another will take the same privilege, and the evil will spread in every direction until the standards of the church have to be lowered definitely, to secure workers for its various activities. When the church has reached that stage, it has lost its savor and is thenceforth good for nothing but to be cast out and trodden under the feet of men. It is no longer the church at all, but the world trying to masquerade under the name of the church. How much better it is to maintain a standard so high that people, wishing to leave the world and find a real church, can do so.

But some one says: "Purify the church by the Word, preached from the pulpit and taught in the classroom." That is all right, but actions speak louder than words. Of what use is it for the minister, just one man, to declare that sin is sinful and that it separates from God, while the church says by its action, that it is not so very sinful and that the sinner can retain his fellowship with the church and its head, the Lord Jesus Christ? How often, indeed, does a minister nullify all he has said in the pulpit, in condemnation of sin, by insisting that some sinner be retained as a member of the church, in spite of his impenitence! Paul says: "Put away the wicked man from among yourselves."

I Thank Thee, Lord

By Myra Brooks Welch

All the beauty and the grandeur
Of the universe is mine!
All the treasures of the ocean
And the mountain heights sublime!
All the diamond-flashing dewdrops,
All the sunset's purest gold!
All the sunshine on the meadows
Mine to have and mine to hold!

I've a friend or two to love me,
I have all the world to love,
I've the solid earth beneath me
And the bright blue sky above.
I am heir to barns o'erflowing—
Cattle on a thousand hills,
While a vested choir of song-birds,
For my pleasure, sings and trills.

Should I pine for folds of satin,
I may stoop and pluck a rose;
Or for velvet, seek the woodland,
Where the purple violet grows.
Though my steps be slow and halting,
Yet I mount on eagle's wing,
I've a royal daughter's birthright
For my Father is a King.

Some may think my lot is common,
Mine a life of toil and pain,
If so be, their "eyes are bolden,"
For I'm counting all things gain.
I've a heart to sing God's praises,
For the best life does afford.
Words are small and inexpressive,
But for all, I thank thee, Lord.

Will We Divide?

BY EDITH E. PETERS

ANOTHER harvest time has come, and with the key of love the great storehouse of heaven has been opened and God has poured out his blessings innumerable. Our granaries, our storehouses are filled, and should not these hearts of ours swell with praises to him who has given us such a bountiful harvest?

But there are other lands that somehow (not because God loves them less) have not reaped such a harvest as we have. Somewhere there are children who go to sleep hungry, only to awake to the sad fact that no breakfast awaits them. Somewhere there are those who are praying, "Give us this day our daily bread" more earnestly than you or I have ever prayed.

"Sad, indeed," did I hear you say? How far will your sympathy go? Has it ever occurred to you that perhaps a part of the harvest stored away as your own, belongs to the dark-skinned brother across the sea? To the little hungry orphan begging for bread? Or perhaps some one near who needs assistance?

God, in his goodness, wants to give us an added blessing if we prove worthy and he finds us willing to divide. God doesn't expect more than we are able to give—just the most reasonable terms—"Give as I have prospered you." Perhaps we say: "There are so many things we need just now. I'll give more later." And when the real truth is known, there are more things we want than we really need. Perhaps the little outstretched hand of the orphan will be reaching no longer when we are ready to give.

Isn't it enough to touch the angels of heaven, when you and I have "bread and to spare" and will not divide? May we ask the Father for strength to give up some cherished object we had planned for, and thus minister to the Master himself, by helping one of "these little ones."

Perhaps we think we have already given much, but the need is not supplied, and God has not ceased blessing us, neither does he expect a cessation in our gifts to others. Multiplied numbers will need food and clothing during the coming winter. God is looking to us to answer the prayer of many needy souls. Will he find us unworthy of the great love wherewith he hath loved us?

If for a moment we are inclined not to share our blessings with others, may we compare our own selfish hearts with the great compassionate heart of the Father, and our selfishness ought to fade as the dew before the morning sun.

May we pray the Father to touch the hearts of men and women all over this land of ours, making us to feel, as we have never felt before, the need of sharing our blessings with others. Then, when we stand face to face with the Father, one smile of approval will be enough to compensate for every sacrifice we have made.

"Sunset and Evening Star"

BY JULIA GRAYDON

WE were attending a Quaker Sunday service, and after sitting for quite a while in meditation, as is their custom, a tall, elderly gentleman, with snow-white hair, arose, and repeated the beautiful words of Tennyson's "Crossing the Bar," the first verse of which is:

Sunset and evening star
And one clear call for me.
And may there be no moaning of the bar
When I put out to sea.

He then said: "I find that on account of advancing years I can not speak as easily as I once could, so I will ask you to let me read what I have written."

We listened as he read to us what the poem meant to him, a man nearing the "other side" and trusting in his Pilot to meet him at the end of life's journey.

As he stood by the open window, the leaves glimmering outside, he reminded us of a patriarch of old, and all those in the room gazed at him and felt a little of his trust enter their own spirits. He was looking forward calmly to what men call death and did not "dread to enter there."

ction with the vine, it grows and bears fruit. This also the secret of a Christian's life of fruit-bearing. here must be continuous, life-giving connection with sus, the True Vine, so that his love may continuously transferred to our soul-life, and in this way manist itself in fruit-bearing. If you have not yet tried is, accept at once the grace of God's Spirit, in order at you may be in constant fellowship and communion th him, so that you, at any time, when tempted and ed, may say: "Lord, thy strength!" When you el strong say: "Lord, thy holiness." When you are gry, say: "Lord, thy forbearance." When you are troubled waters say: "Lord Jesus, give me more of y patience." "He that abideth in me and I in him, e same beareth much fruit."

The message to the angel of the church of Philadelhia, was: "I know thy works, . . . that thou st a little power, and didst keep my word, and didst ot deny my name" (Rev. 3: 8). Why was this comendable message given to this church? Because—espite its small amount of power—it was faithful in l things. This is the secret of holiness—naught of lf, but all of Christ.

As I sit in my study I hear a loud knock on the oor—a person of great strength evidently. I say: Walk in." The visitor opens the door and readily nters. At noon my smallest child is sent by her other to call me to dinner. I hear the little one on e outside, trying in vain to reach the knob. Then I ear a gentle rap on the door. At once I walk to the oor and open it, and the little girl enters. In the same ay the good Lord deals with us while we are here on rth, attending to his business. Let us ever remember that for the weak one the Lord opens the door to rvice, and then helps him to perform the allotted sk.

Thanks for Small Mercies

BY LOUISA A'HMUTY NASH

WHEN things seem untoward, and we're inclined to et, how often something suddenly appears to our elp, and we are saved from what might have proved worry! Do we always remember to thank God for ese small mercies—that are yet not too small for im to bestow upon us?

The Hidden Door

I was going through a half-dark passage, which was eally dark to my near-sighted eyes. I bumped suddenly against the door, which happened to be closed. ut for my prominent nose, my eye-glasses might have roken—and then what would have become of my ght?

In the first breath that I drew, I thanked the merciul Lord for having saved me from such a catastrophe!

The Car-Companion

A sister of mine met a very pleasant doctor and his amily, while traveling in Switzerland. He found himelf later a neighbor to a young son of hers in New Zealand, when he discovered the relationship that existed between the young man and his Swiss railroad ompanion.

My nephew was sick and needed the best medical ttention. This he obtained from his doctor-neighbor. He became his staunch friend, giving him help in his usiness, whenever it was needed.

What a trifling thing it seems, just to make a casual raveling acquaintance! And yet, what blessings ocurred from it! I know how truly his parents thanked he Heavenly Father for his succor.

Mailing the Letter

I was in the country, having been six weeks away rom home. It was quite a trip to mail a letter. There was an important one, that I wished to send to my husband.

On reaching the road through the fields, I found I had missed the "R. F. D." What could I do? Nothing, but seek for patience for us both. Before returning to his pleasant greeting, I begged him to stop a moment, and at my request he kindly took charge of my precious letter. I thanked him, and God as well, for this providential help in a time of need, and for the patience he had granted me.

BY PAUL MOHLER

I SUPPOSE that the most unpleasant thing a church ever has to do is to withdraw fellowship from one of its members. It is always unpleasant to look at sin and see a soul that insists on living in sin. It is also unpleasant to recognize a failure, and whenever a member of the church has to be expelled, it is an evidence of some one's failure. In addition, there are always feelings involved. The one expelled may be the relative or friend of some one who is grieved by the action of the church.

It would be a strange sort of Christian that could do this kind of work and enjoy it in the doing, yet it is sometimes a necessary line of action—absolutely necessary to the best interests of all concerned. When this is the case, there is really no reason why any one should feel at all reluctant in doing his part in it, especially in view of the real purpose of it.

This is the important thing—the purpose of it. It is all-important that the members of the church all understand this. Otherwise, many who are especially interested in the ones so treated, will misjudge the action of the church and be weakened in their loyalty. I think the purpose is best stated by Paul in 1 Cor. 5: 5, where he asks the church "to deliver such a one unto Satan for the destruction of the flesh, that the spirit may be saved in the day of the Lord Jesus." In verse 7 he says: "Purge out the old leaven, that ye may be a new lump, even as ye are unleavened."

Here are two purposes represented: (1) The salvation of the offending member. (2) The purification of the church. Can there be any objection to either of these motives? I think not. The only question that can arise is as to whether, in each case, expulsion is the best method that can be used to reach the end desired. Here is required a nicety of judgment, calling for the fullest guidance of the Holy Spirit. It is a terrible thing to err here. To expel one who ought to be retained in the church, does not purify the church. It rather defiles it by allowing hatred, indifference, carelessness, or some other such thing to weaken the mutual love of the members.

It is equally dangerous to retain a member that ought to be expelled. It is dangerous for him. When a man is bound by sin, so that he is not living a Christian life, nor concerned about his spiritual condition, he needs to be brought to a realization of his sad state. Sometimes examining himself in the light of whatever Christ ideals he possesses. If the church is praying for him as it should be—the Holy Spirit will bring conviction his soul, if he has any capacity for spiritual activ Conviction will bring godly sorrow, godly sorrow work repentance, and repentance will bring restorat to fellowship with the church.

But suppose it does not work in this way. Supp it just makes him more stubborn or indifferent. that a proof that the action was wrong? Not ne sarily. When the church acted rightly, the failur proper results is not the fault of the church, but of individual. No method has ever been found to everybody that joins the church. As long as S has the opportunity, he will place just as many o servants on the church roll as he can, and he will them there as long as he can; and, after they are moved, he will keep them under his control just as as he can. Don't forget that. The point is that church should labor with a man to bring him to pentance just as long as that is the thing to do. the church should expel him, to show him, as well

Of the universe is mine!
All the treasures of the ocean
And the mountain heights sublime!
All the diamond-flashing dewdrops,
All the sunset's purest gold!
All the sunshine on the meadows
Mine to have and mine to hold!

I've a friend or two to love me,
I have all the world to love,
I've the solid earth beneath me
And the bright blue sky above.
I am heir to barns o'erflowing—
Cattle on a thousand hills,
While a vested choir of song-birds,
For my pleasure, sings and trills.

Should I pine for folds of satin,
I may stoop and pluck a rose;
Or for velvet, seek the woodland,
Where the purple violet grows.
Though my steps be slow and halting,
Yet I mount on eagle's wing,
I've a royal daughter's birthright
For my Father is a King.

Some may think my lot is common,
Mine a life of toil and pain,
If so be, their "eyes are holden,"
For I'm counting all things gain.
I've a heart to sing God's praises,
For the best life does afford.
Words are small and inexpressive,
But for all, I thank thee, Lord.

Now as to the purification of the church. Tha thing not to be lost sight of. As Paul says: "A leaven leaveneth the whole lump." If the chur lows one member to do wrong unrebuked, anothe take the same privilege, and the evil will spre every direction until the standards of the church to be lowered definitely, to secure workers for its ous activities. When the church has reached stage, it has lost its savor and is thenceforth goo nothing but to be cast out and trodden under th of men. It is no longer the church at all, but the trying to masquerade under the name of the ch How much better it is to maintain a standard so that people, wishing to leave the world and find church, can do so.

But some one says: "Purify the church b Word, preached from the pulpit and taught i classroom." That is all right, but actions speak l than words. Of what use is it for the minister one man, to declare that sin is sinful and that it rates from God, while the church says by its a that it is not so very sinful and that the sinner c can be accomplished effectively by no other method than that of patient and persistent teaching. Our people are reasonable, and purpose always to do that which is right. but they need light and guidance.

In the light of the foregoing statement, we, therefore, recommend that the official boards of our congregations utilize the teaching agencies of the church—viz, the pulpit, the Sunday-school, and the Christian Workers' Association—in carrying out the following program:

I. The Spiritual Life—a series of sermons: (1) The Sin of Worldliness. (2) The Doctrine of the Spiritual Life. (3) The Fruits of Godliness. (4) The Business of Being a Disciple.

II. Personal and Social Life—lectures, programs, literature, and personal work: (1)) The Tobacco Evil. (a) A series of lectures, preferably by a physician, at least by some one who has made a scientific study of the problem. (b) A strong and positive emphasis against the evil by the Sunday-school teachers and boys' and men's classes. (c) An anti-tobacco organization among the boys and young men of the church, requiring a pledge against its use. (2) Personal purity. Where competent teachers are available we suggest that the young people of the church be brought together in small groups for heart-to-heart conferences on this problem. (3) Amusements—lectures, sermons, and proper provision for the recreational life of our young people. (a) A sermon on the subject, "The Christian's Relation to Amusements." (b) Provide for instruction on the subject through the Sunday-school classes. (c) Provide class outings of the proper kind and at the proper time. These should never violate the sanctity of the Lord's Day and should not involve absence from the services of the church. (d) Provide an educational program of entertainment and instruction for the young people of the church and community.

III. Church Loyalty—lectures and programs. (1) The History of the Church of the Brethren. (2) The Early Leaders of the Church in America. (3) The Literary Life of the Church. (4) The Foundation Principles of Our Church. (5) The Peculiar Symbols of the Church. (6) The Doctrine of the Simple Life. (7) Our Relation to the Church.

THE FORWARD MOVEMENT AT BRIDGEWATER, VIRGINIA

The first part of the session at Bridgewater has been very encouraging. Probably we do not have our full quota of the 3,500 students. I am sure that Bridgewater is not as large as we should like. The encouraging thing is the fact that we have about as many students as can be accommodated with the present equipment. It has been necessary for some of the ladies to go into town, where homes have kindly been opened to them.

In order to meet the State requirement, it has been necessary that Bridgewater much more than meet the Forward Movement goal this year, in regard to endowment, and we hope and pray that there may be a constant increase to this fund, in order that our educational work may grow as the church wants it to grow. We surely believe this will be realized.

The church evidently desires, above all things, that students in our colleges be encouraged in Bible Study, else the standard of 90% of the enrollment would not have been made. Unless the Sunday-school, Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. were allowed to represent some Bible Study, our school could not claim ninety per cent, probably not more than sixty per cent, but the Bible work has been organized more definitely than ever before and there is every reason to believe that Bridgewater, in the future, will be used more extensively in this way.

The purposes of the student body at Bridgewater are noble and it might be said without exaggeration that the probability is that more than twenty per cent will give their time to the work of the church in a definite way. While not fifty per cent of the graduating class are ministers, that many are ministers, volunteers, etc.

We are thankful to our Father for the number of students that have come to Bridgewater this year, for the way in which the spirit of education is awakening in the church, as evidenced by the growing endowment fund, and we pray that there may be more students and more equipment for all of our schools; and, most of all, let us pray that with our students and equipment everything possible may be done for the conservation of our forces and the sending forth of servant leaders, to invite others into the Kingdom of Jesus.

It should be noted that we are having a most interesting revival in our congregation and school, held by our pastor, Bro. A. B. Miller. There have been 31 accessions. We praise our Father in heaven for this blessing.

A MOTHER IN ISRAEL

Sister Anna Myers Driver, widow of Eld. Samuel Driver, of the Barren Ridge congregation, Augusta County, Va., passed peacefully to her reward August 11, 1919, at the advanced age of eighty-one years, four months and eight days. She was the daughter of Benjamin Allen Myers and wife, and was born and grew up in the community of Timberville, Va.

In May, 1856, Brother and Sister Driver were married. Eleven children were born unto them—seven sons and four daughters—nine of whom survive. There are thirty grandchildren, also four great-grandchildreu—their offspring numbering thirty-four in all.

In 1867 Brother and Sister Driver became members of the Church of the Brethren, in the Middle River congregation, Augusta County, being baptized by the late Eld. Levi Garber, and both became devoted, valuable members of the church. Bro. Driver was of an aggressive temperament, and was active in the work of the church from the beginning of his membership. His wife was of a mild, retiring temperament, and the two together struck a happy medium. Two years after their baptism Bro. Driver was elected to the ministry, and fifteen years later he was ordained elder, giving to the church thirty-nine years of active service in the ministry, the last twenty-four as elder of the Barren Ridge congregation. In all these years of self-sacrificing service his faithful wife bore a large share. She stayed by "the stuff," caring for the children and the interests of the farm, while her husband traveled on horseback over the mountains and valleys of Eastern Virginia, West Virginia and elsewhere, preaching the Gospel.

But the biggest contribution made to the Kingdom of God by this father and mother is their large family of children, beyond doubt. All the children are members of the Church of the Brethren, and twenty of the grandchildren. The oldest child, Katie, became the wife of Eld. D. C. Flory, the founder of Bridgewater College, and who was called to his reward in the midst of his life. She was the mother of a large family of children, all devoted Christian children. Two of them, Byron and Edna, are missionaries in China. One son, Casper M., is serving as pastor of the Fairview congregation, Pa., where the lamented James Quinter lived and preached in his younger day. A grandson, Carl S. Driver, a young minister, is now in Vanderbilt University, in preparation for the foreign mission field. The father of Carl S. is an active deacon.

So you see what a big, valuable contribution Brother and Sister Driver made to the Kingdom of God in the world. Few parents have done more. If all fathers and mothers in the church had done as well with their children, it is certain that the Church of the Brethren would number its present membership several times over. The saddest page of her history, no doubt, is the loss of so many of the young people belonging to her by birth.

Sister Driver was of a mild, sweet spirit, with hardly an enemy in the world. She exerted a strong, silent influence for righteousness, goodness, mercy, honor. She did things in her quiet, modest way. She did much to mould the lives of her children, and she was greatly loved and honored by them. One of the sons said to me, on the day of her burial: "This is the saddest day of my life." She was much respected by the people of the community, without regard to denominational church relations, as was evidenced by the throng of people of all classes at her funeral. Her departure was mourned by the community; most keenly by her children.

Mother Driver was laid peacefully away in the Barren Ridge cemetery by the side of her husband, who preceded her to the land of spirits eleven years, to await the resurrection of the just. Peace to her ashes! And God bless her memory and life to those who remain!

THE SPIRIT OF SOME DISTRICT MEETINGS

It has been my good fortune to attend five different District Meetings in the fall season just closing. McPherson College intends to have a representative of the school at each District Meeting in the territory of the institution. This is not always possible, but it is the plan on which we work. Others of our force in the school are sent out also, but the most of this kind of work has fallen to me as Field Secretary.

The meeting in Middle Missouri has already received extended notice in the "Missionary Visitor." Missouri is divided into three State Districts, and suffice it to say here that the Middle District has some hustling to do, or her neighbors, on both sides of her, will outstrip her. Some of her leaders are well aware of this. They are awake to the bigness of the Forward Movement and are pushing it with all their might. An increasing number of her young people are getting into our schools, and are thus coming in touch with the environment that leads them into consecrated church life. The future of Middle Missouri is bright indeed.

The Southern Missouri Conference was favored, from the first session to the last, with the presence of Bro. Jesse B. Emmert of India. He proved to be one of the "live coals from off the altar" and his splendid presentation of the work in that land, backed up with the appeal of a wonderfully sincere soul, certainly proved a great blessing to the District. Southern Missouri is a remarkably rich field for evangelism, and the Brethren there know it. Leadership, however, is the crying need. More workers is the clarion call. Whence are they to come? It seems to be apparent to the folks there that workers must come from their own homes and congregations—that the young folks must be sent into our schools, and trained and inspired for the work. Hearts were touched when, during the meetings two young people stood, and thus declared their purpose to prepare themselves for the work of the Lord, wherever he shall lead, either in the home field or the foreign. God bless them! May he make them a great blessing! A number of the folks, attending the meeting, pledged themselves for the support of the work in India.

Northern Missouri held a wonderful meeting. Again the presence of Bro. Emmert proved a great blessing. From first to last the spirit of the meeting was missionary —evangelistic. More than a thousand dollars was pledged for scholarships and station shares in the India work. Never was such a meeting held in the District—so said the folks who know. Surely, there are bright days ahead for Northern Missouri. Not only was money pledged, but when the opportunity was given, seven splendid young lives were offered. A declaration of purpose was there made by them to follow the leading of the Lord into his great field of service for the saving of the souls of men. How it melted our hearts to see them standing, saying by their action: "Here, Lord, take and use me." What rejoicing!

Suggestions for the Weekly Devotional Meeting Or for Prayerful, Private Meditation

The New Man in Christ Jesus

2 Cor. 5: 17 (Am. Rev., margin)

For Week Beginning November 30, 1919

1. The Conditions of Becoming a New Man.—He must be "in Christ." If any man is really in Christ, he is A CHANGED BEING—"a new creation," as the "American Revision" puts it. Such a state implies that the sin-burdened soul has fled to Christ for shelter and salvation. It reminds us of the gracious provision that was made for the man-slayer of old, who fled to the City of Refuge. So it is with us. Relying wholly upon the atonement provided for guilty man, we may assuredly come to Christ for needed strength and supply, even as the branch is in the vine. As members of his household we are assured of sympathy and coöperation.

2. The Nature of the New Man.—He is "a new creation." This means that his reformation is a most radical one. As children of God, we are his workmanship, created in Christ Jesus unto "good works" (Eph. 2: 10). There must be a NEW LIFE—wholly dissimilar to the old. We must be born—not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God. There is a NEW MIND—"Renewed in the spirit of the mind" (Eph. 4: 23), and able now to comprehend something of the character and power of God in Christ Jesus. There is a NEW HEART. The affections, that were alienated from God, are now centered in him. There is a NEW SPIRIT. The Spirit of God now bears witness with our spirits, implying oneness of purpose in service and testimony. There is a NEW SONG, because there has been a new revelation of Divine mercy and grace (Psa. 40: 1-3)

3. The Results of Attaining to the New Life in Christ Jesus.—The change is thorough—"The old things are passed away; behold they are become new." When there is a new creation within, there come new views of sin. It is now seen as a grievous transgression—a curse—for which there is not the shadow of an excuse. Then, too, there also come NEW VIEWS OF SELF. Self is now seen to be a worthless, unclean thing, and it is revealed to us in all its hideousness. The old unscriptural views of Christ pass away, for now, with spiritual discernment, we see him as the Lord of life. He becomes a living reality in the daily life—our all in all. The old things which formerly interested us in the world, have wholly passed away, and behold, new interests have been awakened. In the old life the pleasures and diversions of the world seemed all-important—they were the objects of our desires—but now the chief desire of our heart is the salvation of the world. For many of us, in days gone by, the chief aim was the amusement of self. The new man is a faithful worker for Christ—ever intent upon the Master's business.

4. The Privileges of the New Man in Christ Jesus.—The door into the NEW AND BETTER LIFE—made possible through Christ's atoning sacrifice—stands open for all. "Any man"—no matter how weak and helpless—no matter how sad and sinful—can gain admittance. The all-comprehensive term—"any man"—leaves out none, no matter how old or decrepit. If he steps out of sin-ruined self into Christ, he will instantly become "a new creation," for God is, through Christ, reconciling the world unto himself.

5. Suggestive References.—The new man walks in the light (John 8: 12, 32, 36). The new man seeks "the things of the Spirit" (Rom. 8: 5, 6). The transformed life (Rom. 12: 2). The change undergone by the new man (2 Cor. 3: 18). A blessed experience (2 Cor. 4: 6). "Christ liveth in me" (Gal. 2. 20). "Quickened together with Christ" (Eph. 2. 1, 5, 6, 8). Renewed after the Divine Image (Col. 3: 10) A blessed assurance (1 Peter 1: 2, 3, 22, 23). "Called . . . into his marvelous light" (1 Peter 2: 3, 9) "From death into life" (1 John 3 14) ur feet have been set in pleasant paths. We have een torn by brambles by the wayside; we have stumléd over rough stones, we have stepped aside at times nto the mire; but after all, our way is a pleasant one, ur joys outnumber and outweigh our griefs. We have ot been brought into any temptation from which there vas no way of escape. The waters have not overvhelmed us. Our daily round of life finds us a little arther advanced when we seek our rest at night; here is something still ahead for us to attain. The best ears are still to come. We thank thee that we are not s those who are without hope.

We have enough and to spare. We thank thee for hat. When we think of those others, we thank thee hat we have enough and to spare; especially that we ave enough to spare. For thy chief act is giving, thy reatest gift was thy Son, who came to wipe away all ears from human eyes. Most of all, pitying Father, ve thank thee that it is in our power to wipe away ears from human eyes, to dry the tears that are flowng in Armenia today.

And so, on this Thanksgiving Day, we remember beore thee, with gratitude that cannot be expressed in vords, the blessings that have filled our lives. Accept ur gratitude offered to thee in words today, we pray hee, but especially accept the gratitude which we shall ry to offer thee in deeds of kindness and of mercy, to hose whose tears mean more to thee than words of raise. Amen.

Meeting a Deep Felt Need

BY A. B. MILLER

The lure of the worldly life! Who of us has not felt its nateful power! I have, you have, all have. Satan is the nergizing force behind it, in a mighty effort to hinder Divine Grace in working out the Divine Purpose in the uman soul. And we are conscious that we should not ield to the influence of this blight on the spiritual life. Conscience and experience alike confirm the words of the Apostle John: "Love not the world, neither the things hat are in the world. If any man love the world, the ove of the Father is not in him" (1 John 2: 15). And et, how are we to overcome, to battle, to win? That is the question. There is one place to discover the answer—the Word of God; therefore, teach it.

Then there are the New Testament teachings accepted and practiced, in a way, by our own church, somewhat different from many other good Christian people—doctrines loved and cherished for generations; and the splendid history of our church, full of inspiration that makes our hearts swell with gratitude for the past and leap with hope for the future. How to inspire loyalty to these ideals of the church and to these doctrines which the Church of the Brethren proclaims to the world as embodying her interpretation of the Word of God, is another question. It finds its answer on the same principle —teaching.

Our methods of interpretation and of teaching have—as some would have us believe—not accomplished what was hoped for, and in many instances have been hurtful, actually hindering us in achieving the desired end. As a result of this conviction, we have done much debating in our Conferences, talked a great deal about the situation in conventions, prayed earnestly, it is to be hoped, and then, in many of our local churches—the real strategic point of attack—done nothing, so we are told. And is it not true?

A congregation in the Second District of Virginia felt that something should be done definitely and, knowing that the Annual Conference had repeatedly urged more teaching, the District was petitioned for help.

The answer of the meeting of the Second District of Virginia is given below and the suggested program is being carried out by the College Street Church of the Brethren at Bridgewater in a definite, systematic and carefully-planned way. The first two themes were discussed during the summer and the first of the remaining themes will be discussed November 16. Speakers have been assigned far in advance, no speaker handling more than two subjects, and they are giving their best thought and energy to their preparation.

The answer of the Conference of the Second District of Virginia follows:

Spirituality and worldliness are incompatible. The

can be accomplished effectively by no other method than that of patient and persistent teaching. Our people are reasonable, and purpose always to do that which is right, but they need light and guidance.

In the light of the foregoing statement, we, therefore, recommend that the official boards of our congregations utilize the teaching agencies of the church—viz., the pulpit, the Sunday-school, and the Christian Workers' Association—in carrying out the following program:

(b) Provide for instruction on the subject through the Sunday-school classes. (c) Provide class outings of the proper kind and at the proper time. Illinois' Governor Favors Bible Sunday

In urging the general observance of "Universal Bible Sunday," Nov. 30, Governor Frank O. Lowden, of Illinois, paid this tribute: "If Universal Bible Sunday were generally honored, all the troubles which now vex the world would disappear. If the spirit of the Bible were to enter and to hold the hearts of men for a single day, a divine restfulness would succeed the unrest which now menaces civilization. In the presence of the eternal verities, strife and discord disappear. Without faith in the Fatherhood of God, the brotherhood of man is an idle dream." These are words well worthy of serious consideration.

Torture and Death of Jews

It is estimated that at least 200,000 Jews have been murdered in Russia during the last twelve months, and the massacres continue unabated. What Turkey did to the Armenians, Russia is inflicting upon the Jews. Wherever there is fighting, no matter what factions are engaged, the Jews are tortured and killed. According to Dr. Isnel Called, a noted Jewish leader, the outrages daily committed against the luckless people of his race are revolting in the extreme. Neither youth, in its innocence, nor old age, with its burden of years, is exempt from the fell destroyer. Unless steps are speedily taken by the allied nations to stop further outrages by strong remonstrances, most of the Jews still surviving are doomed.

The Simple Life Urged

That there is a growing consciousness of the real value of simple life principles, is brought to mind by recent utterances of leading educators. Mrs. B. F. Langworthy, during a stirring address in Milwaukee, advised mothers to begin to dress their children simply while in the kindergarten, and thus to continue with unabated zeal. She emphatically declared: "It is in the kindergarten that the little men and women form ideals. Do away with the use of jewelry. It leads to vanity and snobbishness." These are words of truth and soberness—a warning that should be heeded by every mother in our Brotherhood. "As the twig is bent, the tree is inclined." The training of the next generation depends upon the mothers.

A Change Truly Worth While

Every now and then the advocates of the liquor traffic loudly bemoan, what they consider to be the direct outgrowth of prohibition—the depreciation of property formerly occupied by breweries and distilleries. It is a point not well taken. A certain Ohio brewery was recently "converted" into a malted milk plant. It now employs 278 men, where only 78 were previously engaged. At very little expense the change has been successfully made and the plant materially enlarged. The head of the concern is greatly pleased with his new line of business. When a visitor inspected the plant recently, and remarked: "You feed babies now, instead of starving them," the president happily replied: "There is no question on that point. The plant has really been 'converted.'"

Mr. Gompers' Mistake

Regarded as the leading authority of "Union Labor" in the United States, Mr. Gompers would be expected to make no unwarranted statements. His recent utterance concerning prohibition, however, will hardly pass muster: "By adopting prohibition we have chanced the wrecking of the social and economic fabric of the nation. We have invaded the habits of the workingman. We have upset and unsettled him. Uprooting one habit uproots others. I believe Bolshevism in Russia began in prohibition. Powerful as was vodka, in it the Russian found relief from the dull monotony of his life. Without it torment and trouble rose before him and he was seized with the desire to tear down what he could never rebuild. Is prohibition worth such a price?" In refutation of Mr. Gompers' statement, permit us to point to the fact that in Great Britain, France and Italy, with no prohibition, the unrest and discontent of the workers is even worse than here.

Conserving China's Millions

According to the most reliable statistics, four hundred million people live in China. Sixteen million of them die every year. Medical experts admit that scientific methods would reduce the number of deaths to six millions, saving ten million lives annually. Mr. Rockefeller, who has done much with his Institute in the study and defeat of disease, is greatly interested in the Chinese problem, and hopes to be of at least some assistance in the saving of ten million Chinese every year. As a matter of fact, the improvement of China's health would be a most excellent thing for the world in general. Many of our diseases start on their world-wide sweep from China and the other Oriental countries. So, whatever may be done for the Chinese part of the great world family, will undoubtedly be of great benefit for the rest of the family also. But we are thinking of another phase of the "saving" of China's millions—the redemption of immortal souls, now imperiled by the great enemy of mankind. True, a beginning has been made, here and there, but millions upon millions go down each year into Christless graves because the Gospel Message has failed to reach them. Who is responsible?

A Significant Demonstration

Chicago's House of Correction, was, under the regime of open saloons, usually crowded to its fullest capacity. Recently the south wing of the large structure had to be closed for lack of prisoners. The keepers frankly admit that prohibition has wrought a most remarkable diminution of prisoners. The records show that Nov. 12 there were but 600 inmates in the large penal institution, though the entire group of cells will readily accommodate 2,300. The authoritics, however, are still keeping all the cells in readiness, since, at present prospects, John Barleycorn is once more to enter upon his reign, for a season at least, ushering in another deplorable era of debauchery and crime. The warden and his helpers are fully aware of the close relationship between strong drink and lawlessness.

Ontario's Prohibition Victory

Our friends in Canada's northern province have just scored a remarkable victory for prohibition, with a majority of about 100,000. Some months ago, when Canadian soldiers were returning in large numbers from the various Atlantic ports, it was a common thing to see affixed, to the returning troop-trains, placards with these words: "We want to know who is responsible for making Canada dry." Ontario seems to have given an answer that can be readily understood. The victory just gained was not a war-time achievement, but wholly one of peace. The people seem to have taken due deliberation in deciding upon a saloonless province. As may readily be understood, the victory must be ascribed largely to the dwellers of the agricultural regions, who took a united stand for prohibition.

Will the Ban Be Lifted?

In the expectation that the war prohibition ban would ere long be lifted, a St. Paul brewery recently applied for saloon licenses in that city. There was a unanimous and emphatic protest by people and press, and that, too, for a good reason. They wished to avoid the drunken orgies and the decreased industrial production that are inevitable if saloons reopen. The mayor, with due consideration, heard the protests and declared that he would issue no licenses, even if the war ban were lifted. This means that St. Paul is permanently dry. Cities and towns in other States, that were "wet" before July 1, might consider the St. Paul plan to excellent advantage. After enjoying the blessings of a saloonless community, few, indeed, are the people who wish to return to the debauchery of the liquor regime.

The "Red" Peril

With the jails in fourteen cities crowded with members of the "Union of Russian Workers," and federal district attorneys preparing their cases against more than 200 radical leaders, the American people are at last awakening to the real danger that threatens the permanence of our Government. In the publishing of printed matter the "Reds" do not mince their words. They do not hesitate to say that by "social revolution they mean a complete destruction of present Governmental institutions—an armed insurrection. It must begin with the turnover of all possessions—those of individuals and those of the State—subjecting them to common control. All resources must be declared common property." It will be noticed that the proposed movement is clearly against the foundational principles of our Government, as well as against the teachings of Holy Writ, so far as duly-constituted authority is concerned. Anarchy is in no sense constructive. Always appealing to the worst that is in man, it blights and destroys all attempts at human uplift.

Watchman, What of the Night?

That mankind, at the present time, is passing through a period in which the "encircling gloom" is a decidedly prominent feature, is abundantly obvious to all. It was hoped that with the signing of the Armistice, a year ago, there might be ushered in the dawn of an era of higher ideals—an altruism that would make for "peace and goodwill to all men." That the trend of events has not fully worked out along that line, is readily shown by the perplexing situation everywhere. Much is hoped for by the eventual introduction of the League of Nations, but even that can succeed only to the extent that it is permeated by the Christ spirit. The great unrest in our own favored land of liberty is decidedly alarming. Labor unions and capitalists are at swords' points, instead of laboring, shoulder to shoulder, for the general good of each other and the country at large. Dr. Henry van Dyke, in his recent address before the World's Christian Citizenship Conference, at Pittsburgh, Pa., said: "It seems as if the pressure of human passion and impulse has become more intense, while the restraint of reason and conscience has relaxed. What else could you expect from a world which, to a deplorable extent, does not go to church, and whose chief intellectual influence is the moving picture show?" This is a severe arraignment, but none too strong. Christian churches, if they really understood their religion and were worthy of it, should long since have led the way to a loftier realm. Is it not high time that churches should set their own house in order, that they might more readily enter upon the world leadership assigned them by the Master? Lord Robert Cecil spoke truthfully indeed when he urged all Christians to get out of the war-mind into the peace-mind. Whatever the strife has been, religion to us today must mean reconciliation in righteousness, the healing of wounds, and the establishment of brotherhood among men.

How Lawlessness Is Increased

According to recent press reports a judge at Helena, Ark., sentenced to death eleven negroes, convicted of murder in the first degree during a recent outbreak. That was administering the provisions of the law according to statutes of the State—a proceeding well calculated to engender due respect for the "powers that be," which, as Paul says, "are ordained of God." At about the same time a mob at Little Rock, Ark., wrenched a negro from duly-appointed officers of the law, burning him alive. The fact that he killed a sheriff was, of course, no excuse for the lynching. By due process of law, the prescribed penalty would certainly have been meted out to him, demonstrating that all interference by mob violence is wholly uncalled for. Every case of lynching simply weakens respect for law, which is the one thing that keeps the transgressor within bounds. "Rulers are not a terror to good works but to the evil."

When the Idols Were Burned

For many years notorious "Chinatown," in New York City, has been the synonym for all that is evil and vicious. Social workers and the city authorities vainly endeavored to infuse a spirit of decency and order into the cesspool of iniquity. Of late a notable change has set in—not that there has been a wholesale acceptance of Christianity, but simply this remarkable happening, that Lee Tow, a missionary, was appointed "Mayor" of Chinatown. Possessing the vital elements of ledership, he soon brought order out of chaos, and latest advices bring most astonishing reports of the remarkable improvements that have been wrought under his regime. The clearest evidence of the fact that better knowledge now prevails, is seen in the burning of the idols that for years have stood in their house of worship. An offer of $500 for one of the idols was indignantly refused. Nothing but destruction would satisfy these persistent reformers.

The Frenzied Stock Market

For many speculators of the financial world Nov. 12 was decidedly disastrous, there being a drop of sixty-eight points—the worst slump since 1914. Newspapers record the fact that quite a number of those recently speculating, have laid violent hands upon themselves. One is made to wonder just why men should so readily resort to that fateful step, even though they happen to be losers in the desperate struggle for wealth in the stock market. Why will men endure the worst of bodily ills, disgrace of darkest hue, and almost any other trouble to which mortal man is heir, only to give up in despair when it comes to heavy financial losses? With some, there is no hesitancy whatever, in "shuffling off this mortal coil." Paul's words in 1 Tim. 6: 9 are as good a warning as any one could frame: "They that will be rich fall into temptation and a snare, and into many foolish and hurtful lusts, which drown men in destruction and perdition."

Foreign Survey Shows Gain for Christian Ideals

Early replies received to the questionnaire, sent to missionaries throughout the world by the Interchurch World Movement, show the same tendencies appearing in humanity in regions thousands of miles apart from each other. The answers show that Christianity is gaining ground faster than ever before, but at the same time there is great need for special efforts in the immediate future. First in importance, as well as in the number of times named, is the world-wide tendency of non-Christian religions to make themselves over according to Christian standards. These heathen cults realize that there is power in the Gospel Message that is wholly lacking in the best they have to offer, and we need not wonder at the pitiful attempts to infuse new vigor into the decadent religions of the Orient by the grafting in of Christian ideals, however unsuccessful such an endeavor will prove to be. According to recent reports, Hinduism is honeycombed through and through with Christian teachings. The Rajahs are approximating Christian standards by commendable reforms in their methods of government. Industrial and social conditions, which were tolerated for hundreds of years, have suddenly been recognized as intolerable. Hindu preachers are, in a wholly unwonted way, laying great emphasis on "the holiness of God"—something of which they had no conception before the coming of the missionary, and which they are now attempting to proclaim as the teaching of the ancient Vedas. Even the Moslems, through the sects of Babis and Bahais, are endeavoring to effect a compromise between Mohammedanism and Christianity.

The endowment campaign of Bridgewater College seems to be progressing in a very satisfactory manner. About $200,000 has been raised for the general fund. This, with the Bowman bequest, makes the total endowment of the college slightly above $300,000. But the drive is by no means completed and the trustees have set the goal forward to $500,000.

By direction of the General Educational Board, Bro. D. W. Kurtz's excellent address, "The Creation of Democracy" has been published as a convenient, envelope-size booklet. It is for free distribution, and we suggest that every church order copies enough for judicious distribution among its members and others. It is sure to do good. Address: General Educational Board, Elgin, Ill.

One of the Virginia churches is giving due attention to the success of the Forward Movement by an endeavor to arouse every member to its importance. At their next members' meeting the following topic is to be discussed: "To What Extent Am I Personally Responsible for the Forward Movement?" A thorough discussion of that topic should awaken every member to the highest conception of his possibilities.

The Ministerial Board of the District of Southwestern Kansas and Southeastern Colorado has prepared questionnaires, one for the churches of the District and one for the ministers, as a means of securing information which will enable the Board to make itself useful and actually perform the service enjoined upon it by the General Conference. The questionnaires are well prepared and when properly filled out will be of great value to the Board. They cover the points that any Ministerial Board which takes its work seriously would surely want to know about. We believe they might be suggestive to the Boards of some other Districts who have wondered just how to go at the work entrusted to them. Though we have not been authorized to say so, we imagine the Secretary, Bro. W. O. Beckner, McPherson, Kansas, would be very willing to supply full information to inquirers, especially if they do not forget to enclose a stamp or two.

The Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America has issued its annual announcement concerning the Week of Prayer, Jan. 4-11, 1920. The general topic for the week is "An Awakened Church." The topics for the successive days, beginning Sunday, Jan. 4, are as follows: The Church Awakened by Her New Opportunities; The Church Awakened by Self-Examination; The Church Awakened by a Vision of the World's Need; The Church Awakened by the New Call for Coöperation; The Church Awakened by a Revival of Family Religion; The Church Awakened by the Call for Workers; The Church Awakened by a Rediscovery of the Reality and Power of Prayer. The Interchurch World Movement is coöperating with the Federal Council in helping to make the week of prayer effective. For 25 cents pastors may secure a packet of pamphlets and other suggestive material by addressing the Council at 105 E. Twenty-second Street, New York.

The Eighth International Convention of the Student Volunteer Movement will be held at Des Moines, Iowa, beginning Wednesday afternoon, Dec. 31, 1919, and closing on Sunday night, Jan. 4, 1920. These conventions are held but once in each student generation—that is, once every four years—and constitute the largest and most notable gatherings of the students of North America. It is expected that the Convention will be attended by delegates from more than one thousand institutions. In addition, there will be present secretaries of foreign mission boards, foreign missionaries at home on furlough, editors of papers, representatives of student movements of other lands and other Christian leaders. Held at the most opportune time in the history of the church, bringing together so many responsible leaders of the forces of Christianity, the Des Moines Convention will give a mighty impulse to the religious life of the colleges, stir the entire church to greater zeal and sacrifice and make possible, let us hope, a truly remarkable onward movement in the world's evangelization.

Living Up to Our Hymns.—Have you ever been at a church service and seriously asked yourself whether the sentiment of the inspiring hymns is really an echo of your own life? Perhaps the thought has come to you that the high visions and lofty ideals of hymnology are somewhat unattainable in this busy age of ours. Then, upon further reflection, you have realized that the root of the whole matter may be traced to this fundamental condition: The wide distance between our living and our singing is not due to the fact that the exalted experiences, set forth in the hymns, are impossible of real-

rived for the service to begin, the old church was filled with people eager to hear once more the Word of God preached from the pulpit. The preacher was young and hopeful and he preached a powerful, Spirit-filled sermon on man's duty to God and to one another, and God's faithful, watchful care of his people. He called the people's attention to the great material wealth of the community. He told them that God is the Bountiful Giver of every blessing we enjoy, that he holds the world in the hollow of his hand. Then he pictured to them, from memory of happy Thanksgiving Days in his parents' home, ideal Thanksgiving reunions, with families reunited, grandparents, parents, brothers and sisters and children and cousins, observing the glad day together with rejoicing and thanksgiving—home circles cemented in the bonds of love; aged people made glad by the homecoming of children and loved ones; children rejoicing to be again in the old home, thankful to God that they have been permitted to visit father and mother again. Many a lonely and discouraged person, away from home and loved ones, and living among strangers, has been cheered and comforted by being invited to enjoy the feast and blessings of the day as one of the family, and great joy is felt by all when it is learned that the kind act was the means of winning the stranger for Christ and the church.

The prayer at the close of the sermon was heart-touching and when the basket was passed to receive the offering, the good deacon smiled as he took note of the liberality. Surely the Spirit was working. The men and women who had mourned because the church was closed, now saw that it was their duty to see that it was kept open and that public services were held regularly. They were sure that they could afford to maintain a preacher and keep him in good circumstances.

After the meeting was dismissed, Anne Thankful led the way to the old house, where the feast was spread. The young people flitted about, rejoicing and thankful for the blessings of the day. The feast was spread on long, rude tables, covered with snowy linen. They were loaded with the wealth of vegetables and fruit and all the bounties of the farm. The walls were decorated with late blooming flowers, fruit, ferns and other appropriate things. It was a genuine, home-like Thanksgiving Day, and all the observances were in keeping with the real spirit of the day. The hearts of all who were present were gladdened and those who had quit keeping the day, resolved that hereafter they would observe it in the good, true, old-fashioned way. It was a day of humiliation, repentance, thanksgiving and rejoicing. Late in the evening they all sang: "Count Your Blessings." Then they went home, refreshed and made better by this fitting observance of Thanksgiving Day. There was much rejoicing because the young preacher had agreed to remain and be their pastor. Daniel and Anne Thankful's prayer to God, that services in the old church might be revived, was answered on Thanksgiving Day.

Northeastern Kansas held her meeting at the Appanoose church, about seventeen miles northwest of Ottawa. For the past two or three years this District has been "going over the top," so the folks came this year, expecting something to happen. And it did. Northeastern Kansas is getting the habit. Here again Bro. Emmert's presence proved the real temper of the District and, as a result, over twenty-three hundred dollars was pledged for the work in India. When folks do something that looks big enough to them to challenge their own admiration, they go home rejoicing in the fact that the church is really doing things. Why not? Church work is not going round and round in a ring every year. If it is anything worth the name it is evangelistic. Neither is it enough to bring into the church our own children; we must go out beyond them, out to the hundreds and thousands of our neighbors who know not the joys of fellowship in Christ Jesus.

Sentiments and purposes such as these pervade the District of Northeastern Kansas. Their Home Missions program is a good one and their budget is growing each year.

The meeting for Southwestern Kansas was held at the extreme west end of the District—at Rocky Ford, Colo. In this meeting also, Bro. Emmert was present, and opened the way for some very excellent things to be done. The work of the Home Mission Board has been the leading feature at the District Meetings of this District for some years, and this year they came forward with a budget of $10,000, which was promptly authorized by the meeting. Five churches in the District are now under the care of the Board, but each is striving earnestly to grow into a self-supporting organization.

The cause of Christian education received much emphasis in each of the above-named Conferences. From everywhere the young folks have poured into our school at McPherson, until we have had to wonder where we can put the next one to come.

A very distinct movement forward in some of these Districts was started when it was decided to put into operation an institute in each congregation, for the help of our Sunday-school workers. It is recognized that the Sunday-school holds such a very vital place in our progress, that the beginning of real improvement must be made by helping the workers in the Sunday-school.

MINISTERIAL MEETING OF EASTERN PENNSYLVANIA

The Twenty-sixth Annual Ministerial Meeting of the Eastern District of Pennsylvania was held at the Mohler church, in the Springville congregation, Nov. 4-6. Bro. R. W. Schlosser preached on the evening of Nov. 4 on the subject of "Soul Winning."

The Ministerial Meeting opened at 9 A. M., Nov. 5, with the following officers: Moderator, Eld. S. W. Hertzler; Assistant Moderator, Eld. C. R. Gibble; Writing Clerk, H. H. Nye; Treasurer, Michael Kurtz. Eld. Aaron Gibble gave the Address of Welcome, and Eld. L. R. Brumbaugh responded. The first topic, "The Minister and the Church of the Future," was discussed by Eld. John Herr. He emphasized the pastoral question. The pastor will—in his opinion—have to conduct less worldly business and concentrate wholly on the Lord's work. He will be expected to make more extensive educational preparation.

Bro. W. N. Zobler, in discussing the "Constructive and Destructive Work of the Church," showed that we must all be properly employed, to be good builders for the Lord, that only through us can the power of Christ be transmitted, and that we must employ business methods in our religious work.

Bro. J. B. Brubaker, in discussing "The Simple Life," maintained that this principle applies to all phases of our life and that we fully manifest the spirit as well as the form.

Eld. I. W. Taylor, in speaking about the "Problems of the Ministerial Board," stated that since the Board is new in organization, some of its duties have not yet been entered upon. The main problem, confronting the Board, is the election and proper distribution of ministers in the needy fields of the District.

During the Missionary Meeting Eld. Geo. Weaver, in the discussion on "What Place Should the Subject of Missions Have in Our Various Meetings of the District?" showed that, since the field is the world, it should occupy a very large place in our life and thought. Upon missionary interest depends the religious development of the individual and the congregation. "Our Lord's Vision of the Field," by Eld. J. W. G. Hershey, pictured the present world as being hungry, cold and diseased. Politically, it has lost respect for authority. The church has taught the Word, but the world has not heard because the church, broken into numberless sects, has lost its power. It must truly establish itself upon the Rock, Jesus Christ.

The geographical and spiritual possibilities of the New York mission field were pictured by Brethren F. L. Baker and E. F. Nedrow, and a movement was sprung for the purchase of a house of worship in Freeville, N. Y., for the sum of $2,900. Ten brethren pledged themselves to advance this amount of money in the name of the District, but the spirit of liberality was running so high that a number desired to give then and there, and $2,935.50 was raised in a short time.

During the educational session, Bro. H. K. Ober showed the importance of the school in character-building. Since we shape character through our thoughts and actions, it is very important that the religion of Jesus Christ be closely linked with our education.

"The History of the Early Educational Activities of the Church" was carefully brought out by Bro. J. G. Meyer. Bro. A. P. Wenger pictured the wide influence of our young people who are religiously and carefully trained. Mrs. J. G. Francis pointed out many essential and indispensable lessons, which the home must give in the child's education.

During the business period of the Sunday-school session the following officers for next year were elected: Moderator, Eld. John C. Zug; Assistant Moderator, Eld. H. B. Yoder; Writing Clerk, R. W. Schlosser; Treasurer, A. M. Kuhns. In the period for discussion Bro. Diller Myer pointed out four "Advantages of a Conference of the Sunday-school Superintendents of the District": (1) Conferences of organized bodies bring about unified effort; (2) Suggestive solutions for unsolved problems; (3) Heightened enthusiasm in inactive workers; (4) An enlarged vision and deepened sense of responsibility.

Bro. A. M. Kuhns pointed out the need of greater reverence on the part of officers, teachers and church officials. Bro. Harry Ziegler, in "The Advantages of Memorizing Scripture," held that this work is important as a basis of our thought and conduct. Bro. Grover C. Bair pointed out the following "Ends to Be Accomplished in the Sunday-school": (1) Christian training, so much neglected at home; (2) Cheerful giving; (3) Self-sacrificing service.

In the general session, Mrs. Emma Hildebrand pictured the Ladies' Aid Society as a special field for woman's service for the Master. Mrs. Mary Reber, in her paper, read by Mrs. G. N. Falkenstein, made a strong plea for enlarged contributions and for an organized society in each congregation. Sister Florence Mohler recited the "Parable of the Bamboo." Bro. Nathan Kilhefner defended the "Bible in the Public Schools." Bro. S. N. Wolfe gave a very touching discussion on "Child Rescue Work."

After the Committee on Resolutions had read its report, and gratitude was expressed to the Springville congregation, the closing remarks and prayer were offered by Eld. Chas. Bonsack. All who were present seemed very enthusiastic in their praises of the fact that Eastern Pennsylvania was so active and energetic in the "Forward Movement" of the church. H. H. Nye, Clerk.

INDIA NOTES

Early in September Bro. Long and I spent six days with our Mennonite brethren at Dhamtari, India. The days were filled with interest and pleasure. They are 600 miles from us, in Central India, and it took us four days to go and come. Bro. Lang has a cousin in that mission, who was sailing for furlough, but aside from our visit with him, it was helpful to see their work and compare notes.

It is a small mission, as to numbers, but they have a very hopeful field and it is capable of expansion. Their central station is at the end of a small railway, and the other stations are farther out. They have the advantage of good roads, and have two Fords, several motorcycles, and one motor with a double car attached. These help them much in getting about to their work and to the different stations. It was a surprise to us to see how the Fords could go over muddy roads and across streams. However, when they did hang up in the mud or water, the driver "commandeered" all the passers-by till they pulled the car out. One missionary had eight men and a big rope ready when we got to a large stream near his home. They pulled us across—Ford and all!

This mission is handicapped for lack of missionaries, having at present only four couples and a woman doctor. Some, however, are on furlough. There are three bungalows not occupied and one station without a missionary.

The mission was opened up some twenty years ago, and now has over 600 communicants. But up to the present, they have not been able to do intensive evangelistic work. Now they have one missionary, at least, set apart for that work, and it is opening up beautifully. The industrial and educational phases have been emphasized. In the shop you see quite an equipment of American machinery, and here carpentry and blacksmithing are taught under Government inspection, with some aid from the Government. The mission owns at one station several hundred acres of land, the arable part of which is farmed by the Christians who are scattered about among the Hindus in the village near by, who have as good houses as they. One missionary's time is devoted to this Christian village. Then there is a Widows' Home with about thirty-five women, who come from the villages round about, and later become Christians, when they work to help to support themselves. A Boys and Girls' Orphanage and school are found here, as in almost all missions, and these are now filled to their capacities with famine children.

Famine has struck those parts hard. There we saw over two hundred, from babes to the aged,—emaciated and pitiful sights,—while many had died and others were coming in daily. The mission feeds them—most of them not being able to work. How thankful they were for the funds sent from home, to feed these starving people!

But a really gruesome sight is the Leper Asylum, with over two hundred inmates, in all stages of the disease—some about ready to die, others still able to work, but all very thankful and appreciative. We walked very carefully and held our skirts aside, lest we touch them; but the missionaries walked about quite at home among them, and laughed at our timidity, saying: "Missionaries don't often get the disease from them." Though the mission workers can not cure the lepers, still they relieve the pain and make them more comfortable, and they usually want to be baptized and so are saved, we hope. They have a little chapel for them, where the missionary fills the pulpit every Sunday. The untainted children are taken from their mothers and kept with the clean chil-

rived for the service to begin, the old church was filled with people eager to hear once more the Word of God preached from the pulpit. The preacher was young and hopeful and he preached a powerful, Spirit-filled sermon on man's duty to God and to one another, and God's faithful, watchful care of his people. He called the people's attention to the great material wealth of the community. He told them that God is the Bountiful Giver of every blessing we enjoy, that he holds the world in the hollow of his hand. Then he pictured to them, from memory of happy Thanksgiving Days in his parents' home, ideal Thanksgiving reunions, with families reunited, grandparents, parents, brothers and sisters and children and cousins, observing the glad day together with rejoicing and thanksgiving—home circles cemented in the bonds of love; aged people made glad by the homecoming of children and loved ones; children rejoicing to be again in the old home, thankful to God that they have been permitted to visit father and mother again. Many a lonely and discouraged person, away from home and loved ones, and living among strangers, has been cheered and comforted by being invited to enjoy the feast and blessings of the day as one of the family, and great joy is felt by all when it is learned that the kind act was the means of winning the stranger for Christ and the church.

The prayer at the close of the sermon was heart-touching and when the basket was passed to receive the offering, the good deacon smiled as he took note of the liberality. Surely the Spirit was working. The men and women who had mourned because the church was closed, now saw that it was their duty to see that it was kept open and that public services were held regularly. They were sure that they could afford to maintain a preacher and keep him in good circumstances.

After the meeting was dismissed, Anne Thankful led the way to the old house, where the feast was spread. The young people flitted about, rejoicing and thankful for the blessings of the day. The feast was spread on long, rude tables, covered with snowy linen. They were loaded with the wealth of vegetables and fruit and all the bounties of the farm. The walls were decorated with late blooming flowers, fruit, ferns and other appropriate things. It was a genuine, home-like Thanksgiving Day, and all the observances were in keeping with the real spirit of the day. The hearts of all who were present were gladdened and those who had quit keeping the day, resolved that hereafter they would observe it in the good, true, old-fashioned way. It was a day of humiliation, repentance, thanksgiving and rejoicing. Late in the evening they all sang: "Count Your Blessings." Then they went home, refreshed and made better by this fitting observance of Thanksgiving Day. There was much rejoicing because the young preacher had agreed to remain and be their pastor. Daniel and Anne Thankful's prayer to God, that services in the old church might be revived, was answered on Thanksgiving Day.

Northeastern Kansas held her meeting at the Appanoose church, about seventeen miles northwest of Ottawa. For the past two or three years this District has been "going over the top," so the folks came this year, expecting something to happen. And it did. Northeastern Kansas is getting the habit. Here again Bro. Emmert's presence proved the real temper of the District and, as a result, over twenty-three hundred dollars was pledged for the work in India. When folks do something that looks big enough to them to challenge their own admiration, they go home rejoicing in the fact that the church is really doing things. Why not? Church work is not going round and round in a ring every year. If it is anything worth the name it is evangelistic. Neither is it enough to bring into the church our own children; we must go out beyond them, out to the hundreds and thousands of our neighbors who know not the joys of fellowship in Christ Jesus.

Sentiments and purposes such as these pervade the District of Northeastern Kansas. Their Home Missions program is a good one and their budget is growing each year.

The meeting for Southwestern Kansas was held at the extreme west end of the District—at Rocky Ford, Colo. In this meeting also, Bro. Emmert was present, and opened the way for some very excellent things to be done. The work of the Home Mission Board has been the leading feature at the District Meetings of this District for some years, and this year they came forward with a budget of $10,000, which was promptly authorized by the meeting. Five churches in the District are now under the care of the Board, but each is striving earnestly to grow into a self-supporting organization.

The cause of Christian education received much emphasis in each of the above-named Conferences. From everywhere the young folks have poured into our school at McPherson, until we have had to wonder where we can put the next one to come.

A very distinct movement forward in some of these Districts was started when it was decided to put into operation an institute in, each congregation, for the help of our Sunday-school workers. It is recognized that the Sunday-school holds such a very vital place in our progress, that the beginning of real improvement must be made by helping the workers in the Sunday-school.

MINISTERIAL MEETING OF EASTERN PENNSYLVANIA

The Twenty-sixth Annual Ministerial Meeting of the Eastern District of Pennsylvania was held at the Mohler church, in the Springville congregation, Nov. 4-6. Bro. R. W. Schlosser preached on the evening of Nov. 4 on the subject of "Soul Winning."

The Ministerial Meeting opened at 9 A. M., Nov. 5, with the following officers: Moderator, Eld. S. W. Hertzler; Assistant Moderator, Eld. C. R. Gibble; Writing Clerk, H. H. Nye; Treasurer, Michael Kurtz. Eld. Aaron Gibble gave the Address of Welcome, and Eld. L. R. Brumbaugh responded. The first topic, "The Minister and the Church of the Future," was discussed by Eld. John Herr. He emphasized the pastoral question. The pastor will—in his opinion—have to conduct less worldly business and concentrate wholly on the Lord's work. He will be expected to make more extensive educational preparation.

Bro. W. N. Zobler, in discussing the "Constructive and Destructive Work of the Church," showed that we must all be properly employed, to be good builders for the Lord, that only through us can the power of Christ be transmitted, and that we must employ business methods in our religious work.

Bro. J. B. Brubaker, in discussing "The Simple Life," maintained that this principle applies to all phases of our life and that we fully manifest the spirit as well as the form.

Eld. I. W. Taylor, in speaking about the "Problems of the Ministerial Board," stated that since the Board is new in organization, some of its duties have not yet been entered upon. The main problem, confronting the Board, is the election and proper distribution of ministers in the needy fields of the District.

During the Missionary Meeting Eld. Geo. Weaver, in the discussion on "What Place Should the Subject of Missions Have in Our Various Meetings of the District?" showed that, since the field is the world, it should occupy a very large place in our life and thought. Upon missionary interest depends the religious development of the individual and the congregation. "Our Lord's Vision of the Field," by Eld. J. W. G. Hershey, pictured the present world as being hungry, cold and diseased. Politically, it has lost respect for authority. The church has taught the Word, but the world has not heard because the church, broken into numberless sects, has lost its power. It must truly establish itself upon the Rock, Jesus Christ.

The geographical and spiritual possibilities of the New York mission field were pictured by Brethren F. L. Baker and E. F. Nedrow, and a movement was sprung for the purchase of a house of worship in Freeville, N. Y., for the sum of $2,900. Ten brethren pledged themselves to advance this amount of money in the name of the District, but the spirit of liberality was running so high that a number desired to give then and there, and $2,935.50 was raised in a short time.

During the educational session, Bro. H. K. Ober showed the importance of the school in character-building. Since we shape character through our thoughts and actions, it is very important that the religion of Jesus Christ be closely linked with our education.

"The History of the Early Educational Activities of the Church" was carefully brought out by Bro. J. G. Meyer. Bro. A. P. Wenger pictured the wide influence of our young people who are religiously and carefully trained. Mrs. J. G. Francis pointed out many essential and indispensable lessons, which the home must give in the child's education.

During the business period of the Sunday-school session the following officers for next year were elected: Moderator, Eld. John C. Zug; Assistant Moderator, Eld. H. B. Yoder; Writing Clerk, R. W. Schlosser; Treasurer, A. M. Kuhns. In the period for discussion Bro. Diller Myer pointed out four "Advantages of a Conference of the Sunday-school Superintendents of the District": (1) Conferences of organized bodies bring about unified effort; (2) Suggestive solutions for unsolved problems; (3) Heightened enthusiasm in inactive workers; (4) An enlarged vision and deepened sense of responsibility.

Bro. A. M. Kubns pointed out the need of greater reverence on the part of officers, teachers and church officials. Bro. Harry Ziegler, in "The Advantages of Memorizing Scripture," held that this work is important as a basis of our thought and conduct. Bro. Grover C. Bair pointed out the following "Ends to Be Accomplished in the Sunday-school": (1) Christian training, so much neglected at home; (2) Cheerful giving; (3) Self-sacrificing service.

In the general session, Mrs. Emma Hildebrand pictured the Ladies' Aid Society as a special field for woman's service for the Master. Mrs. Mary Reber, in her paper, read by Mrs. G. N. Falkenstein, made a strong plea for enlarged contributions and for an organized society in each congregation. Sister Florence Mohler recited the "Parable of the Bamboo." Bro. Nathan Kilhefner defended the "Bible in the Public Schools." Bro. S. N. Wolfe gave a very touching discussion on "Child Rescue Work."

After the Committee on Resolutions had read its report, and gratitude was expressed to the Springville congregation, the closing remarks and prayer were offered by Eld. Chas. Bonsack. All who were present seemed very enthusiastic in their praises of the fact that Eastern Pennsylvania was so active and energetic in the "Forward Movement" of the church. H. H. Nye, Clerk.

NOTICE

Your Committee on Dress Reform hereby calls upon the churches for an offering on the day of our next "Special" Christian Workers' program—Sunday, Nov. 30, 1919. The prompt response of many churches last spring enabled us to develop our plans thus far. There is some money on hand, but the time of additional printing is already near.

Effort, time and means are necessary to a full understanding, by all, of the practical, constructive work now under way. Our ability to accomplish our part in this work depends on your coöperation—not only in passing resolutions, but in helping to carry out those resolutions, through your personal effort, your liberality and your prayers.

All amounts sent to the undersigned will be duly acknowledged; each receipt will be accompanied by a revised "Book-list" booklet, or as many such as you agree to distribute. Lydia E. Taylor, Secretary-Treasurer.

ANNUAL MEETING ANNOUNCEMENT

At a meeting of the Committee of Arrangements, held at Kansas City, Mo., Nov. 6, it was decided to take the 1920 Conference to Sedalia, Mo. The State Fair ground, with its many spacious buildings, was gladly turned over to our people for their use and enjoyment. The citizens are very anxious that our people share their hospitality, and extended a warm invitation.

The Committee is hoping that all personal preferences will be laid aside and our energies be directed toward making the Conference one of the best. The time for the Conference to convene is June 10-16, inclusive.

We hope that those in charge of the various church activity programs will begin to arrange their work, if they have not already done so. M. J. Misbler.

Newton, Kans.

STANLEY CHURCH, WISCONSIN

Bro. Roger D. Winger, who is working in the interest of the great "Forward Movement" in Wisconsin, held a Missionary Institute in the Stanley church Oct. 26-28, which was well attended. Bro. Winger placed great stress and emphasis on the need of a greater missionary spirit in the Church of the Brethren, and considerable enthusiasm was aroused. Our people responded quite liberally, and on the last evening gave Bro. Winger a donation of about $13, for the advancement of the cause.

Nov. 2 nine of our young people were baptized. Several others will be baptized later. Quite a few members have moved in recently, which will greatly help to strengthen the work here.

The work of the church here is moving along very nicely. Bro. W. W. Gibson, our pastor, holds two services every Sunday. Our Sunday-school and Christian Workers' Meeting continue to grow. We have a regular singing class, that meets once a week in the various homes, for the purpose of learning more of the songs in "Kingdom Songs," and also practicing those we have learned.

We do not have the necessary equipment for a love feast as yet, so it will be impossible for us to have one this fall. We are, however, making arrangements to have one later. We appreciate very much the good work that our pastor is doing here, in helping to accomplish all these things. Mrs. O. W. Henderson.

DISTRICT CONFERENCE OF SOUTHERN PENNSYLVANIA

The Southern District of Pennsylvania met in District Meeting, Oct. 28, in the evening. After listening to a very able and interesting sermon by Eld. Jas. A. Sell, of the Middle District, on the subject of "Home Missions," an offering was lifted for the use of the District Mission Board, which amounted to $967.63, with what was handed in later for that purpose. The organization then took place, so as to have all things ready for the regular business, the next morning at 8 o'clock.

At the appointed time the forty-nine delegates, besides the elders and visitors, both from our own and other Districts, filled the house, and the twenty-one congregations celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of their District in a very business-like manner.

There were read from accurately-written statements, the reports of the Treasurers of the District, the Mission Board, the Brethren's Home, the Temperance Committee, the Child Rescue Committee, and the Tabulator of the amounts given to the Armenian and Syrian Sufferers. We had also reports from the Secretaries of the Mission Board, the Brethren's Home, the Temperance Committee, the Child Rescue Committee, and the Ministerial Board. These reports gave the work that was done by the District, through her committees, and was highly appreciated.

One query only was sent to the Annual Meeting, which asked that the Annual Meeting be granted to the Southern District of Pennsylvania in 1921.

A committee was appointed to agree on a definite boundary line between the Southern and the Middle Districts of Pennsylvania. From the latter District we were separated in 1894, but we shall always feel grateful for the fostering care given us during the one hundred, or more, years of our vital union with her as a mother District.

Those elected to represent the District on the Standing Committee were Brethren H. M. Stover and Daniel Bowser, with Brethren E. S. Miller and A. S. Baugher as alternates.

The meeting closed at 4 P. M., with all recognizing the great joy that accrues in properly attending to the business part of the Lord's work, when his Holy Spirit is present to guide and direct.

Waynesboro, Pa. H. M. Stover, Writing Clerk.

DEATH OF ELDER GEORGE E. DEARDORFF

George Emmanuel Deardorff, son of Isaac and Mary Deardorff, was born at Roann, Ind., Nov. 21, 1874, and died in the Orchard Hospital, of Marion, Ohio, Oct. 26, 1919, aged forty-four years, eleven months and five days.

Eld. George E. Deardorff

Dec. 25, 1894, he married Ida Grossnickle, of North Manchester, Ind. This union was blessed with five children, two of whom died in infancy.

In the spring of 1898 he, with his family, moved to North Dakota, where they resided for several years. Then they moved to Brethren, Mich., where he engaged in mercantile business, besides being postmaster and railroad ticket and freight agent. He carried on these lines of activity in connection with his church work.

Bro. Deardorff united with the Church of the Brethren when sixteen years of age and continued faithful, standing firm on the principles of the Word and unity of faith. About twenty years ago he was called by the Lord, through the church, to the ministry of the Word, and later was ordained to the eldership. He served four congregations in Michigan as presiding elder.

When his health began to fail he gave up his work in Michigan and moved to North Manchester, Ind. Later he accepted the pastoral care of the Beaver Creek and Cart Creek congregations, giving his time and service to the advancement of the cause he so much loved. Three years ago he accepted a call as pastor of the mission at Marion, Ohio, which had a constant growth from the beginning of his pastorate to the close. During this period of service, a neat, convenient churchhouse was erected, the church fully organized and twenty were added to the church by confession of faith and baptism. He endeared himself to all who knew him best.

Throughout his ministry he held a large number of revival meetings in the States of Michigan, Indiana and Ohio, the success of which proved his efficiency in the work.

Bro. Deardorff was a sufferer for many years—at times very serious—but was patient and considerate. He was anointed on three separate occasions in the name of the Lord—the last time about four weeks ago. He had a strong desire to regain his health, in order to render more and better service to God and his fellow-men.

Funeral services were held at Marion, Ohio, on Monday afternoon; also at the West Manchester church, North Manchester, Ind., on Wednesday forenoon. Both funerals were in charge of Eld. J. L. Guthrie, Secretary of the Mission Board of the Northwestern District of Ohio. The selection of the text, and arrangements for both services were made by the deceased.

He leaves his wife, three children, an aged father, one brother, a large circle of relatives and a heart-broken congregation, with many Christian friends. The family will remain at Marion, Ohio, in active work for the time being.

The members of the Mission Board of the Northwestern District of Ohio, desire in this way to express their appreciation and highest esteem for the faithful and efficient service given the District by the deceased.

Upper Sandusky, Ohio. J. L. Guthrie, Secretary.

LOGANSPORT, INDIANA

Sunday, Nov. 9, was a day long to be remembered by the members in Logansport and vicinity. Under the direction of the District Mission Board of Middle Indiana, funds were solicited and a house built during the season, and this was dedication day.

Visitors from the city and adjoining congregations came in large numbers, and the house was filled to overflowing. A double service was arranged. While Eld. J. H. Wright preached in the audience room, on the subject, "The Open Door of Salvation," Eld. G. B. Heeter preached in the basement. The song services were led by Brethren D. W. Boyer and H. U. Fisher.

The building committee then reported that the property cost about $10,500 and that all had been raised but $800. Donations were called for and soon passed the goal by aggregating $1,153.75.

Eld. S. T. Fisher then delivered the dedicatory prayer. The members who have worshiped here for several years in a single room, all rejoice to be favored with a modern, convenient and substantial house of worship. The same evening Eld. S. T. Fisher began a series of meetings, which is to continue till Thanksgiving evening, when the love feast will be held. J. G. Stinebaugh.

MORE ABOUT STANDARDIZED SUITS

Since its last report in "Messenger" of Sept. 13, the Committee on Dress Reform has made "suit progress" as follows:

A well-equipped women's tailoring firm has been secured to handle the unfilled orders returned to customers by the former firm, following the chaotic conditions in the business and labor world beginning last June. This firm will also make to measure suits for any others, in need of such garments, and willing to pay the advance in price, made necessary by the above-named conditions. Those personally interested may write the Secretary for particulars.

For the coming spring season, however, this firm has arranged to manufacture at least three standardized suits, one of these identical with the "standard suit" which met with such general favor after the catalog distribution last spring, and one especially for misses.

A new special catalog will be issued, giving information regarding the movement, with illustrations and prices of these suits. When ready, due notice will be given through the "Messenger." You can then secure, from the Secretary of the Committee, the information which will put you in touch with this firm.

It is hoped that by that time normal conditions in the clothing world may be restored, in order that normal prices may again be furnished. Lydia E. Taylor,

Mt. Morris, Ill. Secretary-Treasurer of Committee.

CALIFORNIA

Covina.—Beginning Oct. 26 we had a very interesting week of Bible Study on the "Passion Week," conducted by Eld. E. S. Young, which was indeed inspiring. Our love feast was held Nov. 2. Bro. Young officiated, assisted by Bro. Boaz, of Long Beach.—Mrs. Tempie S. Funk, Charter Oak, Calif., Nov. 5.

Reedley.—Sunday, Oct. 19, Bro. Leroy Clark and Sister Ruth Emily, our Sunday-school and Christian Workers' delegates to the District Meeting, gave excellent talks on the subjects discussed at those meetings. Oct. 23 and 24 Sister Laura Gwin Swadley, of Modesto, Calif., favored us with helpful and interesting talks on Sunday-school work. Sunday evening, Oct. 26, our senior and intermediate Christian Workers' Societies delivered a splendid program on "The Forward Movement." Our love feast was held Nov. 1. Bro. L. E. Miller, of Empire, and Bro. J. H. Stover, of Fresno, each delivered an inspiring sermon on "The Second Coming of Christ." After dinner, which was served in the basement, an election was held for deacons. Brethren Floyd Ramsey, Leroy Clark and Raymond Armantrout were chosen. In the evening we held our communion services, with Bro. J. R. Rhoads, of Fresno, officiating. Sunday morning Bro. Rhoads had charge of the installation service. In the evening Bro. M. H. Miller, of Patterson, gave an excellent sermon on "The Overcoming Life."—Mabel Armantrout, Reedley, Calif., Nov. 6.

COLORADO

Denver church was highly privileged by having Bro. D. L. Miller and his good wife with us over our love feast on Saturday, Nov. 8. Bro. Miller officiated. He also gave us a splendid sermon on the Bible Lands. He remained until Monday evening and gave us a sermon on "The Sunny Side of Life." Bro. Miller and wife are now on the way to Southern California to spend the winter. Our church is still progressing nicely.—W. R. Cline, 1070 Gas and Electric Building, Denver, Colo., Nov. 11.

ILLINOIS

Astoria.—Bro. R. H. Nicodemus, evangelist of Chicago, was with us in a series of meetings, preaching twenty-two sermons. Sister Ethel Mummert, from Bethany Bible School, conducted the song service. The interest was good; also the attendance. We feel that all have been strengthened by these powerful sermons. Two stood for Christ. We also have the promise of Bro. Nicodemus to be with us Dec. 28-31 in our Bible Institute.—Goldie Eichenberg, Astoria, Ill., Nov. 8.

Big Creek church met in council Nov. 3. The Sunday-school was reorganized, with Sister Wm. Matthes and Bro. Henry Bowse, superintendents. Sister Oscar Ridgely was elected president of our Christian Workers' Society for the coming year. One letter of membership was granted.—Dow A. Ridgely, Parkersburg, Ill., Nov. 11.

Elgin.—There was neither light nor warmth nor prayer-meeting at the church last Wednesday night. Instead, the membership was parceled into four different parts, and enjoyed the shelter of as many hospitable cottages. Somehow, the atmosphere seemed warmer and more intimate, and the total of all the congregations was more than twice the usual attendance. Next week Sunday is the first week—at three other cottages. What are we praying for? Why, our evangelist—John R. Snyder—is coming, and will fire the first shot in the enemy's camp Sunday morning, Nov. 16. That gives us but a few days to pray for. Last Saturday evening the Elgin assembly ate supper with her Lord. Rev. Baxter Mow served the emblems. He also preached the following morning, using the good-by beckoning of the Master, "Follow Me." . . . Several new families have moved among us.—Adoline H. Beery, Elgin, Ill., Nov. 10.

La Place.—Oct. 9 we began a series of meetings, conducted by Bro. S. Z. Smith and wife, of Sidney, Ohio. The interest and attendance were good. The members were greatly strengthened and much good was done throughout the community. Fourteen were received into the church by baptism. The meetings closed Nov. 3 with a love feast, which was well attended. Bro. Smith is entering school very soon. We will miss them but are glad that they are willing to do their part in the great "Forward Movement." Our people showed a willingness to rally to greater activity in the Sunday-school, for on our Rally Day service we had a large ottendonce in spite of the unfavorable weather. A well-arranged program was given by the young people.—Lizzie Studebaker, Kent, Ill., Nov. 10.

Hickory Grove church met in council Nov. 8, with Eld. D. R. Hardman presiding, assisted by Eld. D. A. Hummer. The latter, who had been appointed to serve as evangelist, reported that arrangements had been made with Bro. W. L. Hatcher, of Bossville, Ind., to hold a series of meetings for us in the fall of 1920.—Edgar A. Hummer, Pennville, Ind., Nov. 8.

Indianopolis church closed a revival meeting Oct. 19. Seven young women came forward, six of whom have been received into the church by confession and baptism. The attendance during the meetings was quite good, although we had to contend with bad weather. Bro. Stroud preached splendid sermons and the church has been built up. Oct. 25 we held our quarterly council. Officers for church and Sunday-school for 1920 were elected. Bro. S. A. Hylton was chosen Sunday-school superintendent. Oct. 26 we had the pleasure of having with about sixty present. Bro. J. W. Rarick, of Muncie, officiated, assisted by Bro. G. W. Hahn.—J. J. Kintner, Indianopolis, Ind., Nov. 11.

Mexico.—Oct. 25 we enjoyed another love feast, with Bro. Wieand, of Chicago, officiating. Several visiting ministers were present. Bro. Wieand remained over Sunday and gave us a fine discourse, which was greatly enjoyed by all present. Our series of meetings will be conducted by Bro. Ben Long, of Andrews, Ind., beginning Dec. 1.—Effie E. Keyes, Mexico, Ind., Nov. 5.

Noblesville.—Our communion meeting was held Nov. 1. We had with us Brethren Walter Mosbaugh, E. O. Norris and G. W. Hahn, who officiated. The attendance was good—a special effort being made to have present those connected with the church in the fall. Sunday morning Bro. Norris preached for us. Oct. 19 Bro. W. Mosbaugh preached our morning sermon. We appreciate very much the presence of neighboring brethren.—Edith Bowser, Noblesville, Ind., Nov. 8.

Osceola church met in council Nov. 8. Three letters were granted. Church and Sunday-school officers were elected for one year: Bro. Hiram Rouse, elder in charge; Bro. Jacob Motts, Sunday-school superintendent; Bro. Wright, "Messenger" agent and correspondent. We also elected two trustees: Brethren Wm. Anglemyer and John Coenower. Our home ministers were appointed to secure some one to hold a revival in the near future.—Eva Pontius, Elkhart, Ind., Nov. 11.

Pine Creek.—Our series of meetings, which began Oct. 5, conducted by Bro. G. S. Strausbaugh, of Fredericktown, Ohio, closed Oct. 26. The meetings were well attended and good interest prevailed throughout. Sister Ida Horton had charge of the song service and deserves much only filled the pulpit but did much personal work. The second week of the meeting he was called away, and Eld. Daniel Wysong, of Nappanee, filled his place on Wednesday and Thursday evening, giving us a splendid sermon. Four were added to the church. Our love feast was held Oct. 18, and was well attended; about 330 communing. Eight visiting ministers were present and Bro. Strausbaugh officiated. On Sunday morning over 50 were present at the free breakfast was served in the basement to about 400. At 10 o'clock our Sunday-school was held. Eld. Daniel Hartman conducted the devotional service, and the lesson was taught by Eld. Daniel Whitmer and Daniel Wysong, who brought out many good thoughts. Then we enjoyed a splendid sermon from Bro. Straushaugh. Oct. 26 he preached his farewell sermon to a full house on the subject; "The Inner Circle." The services were closed with splendid interest.—M. S. Morris, North Liberty, Ind., Nov. 9.

Portage.—We will hold our Harvest Meeting, an all-day service, on Thanksgiving Day, Nov. 27, at the South house. Bro. Bert Pontius, of Elkhart, will conduct the morning service, and Bro. L. P. Kurtz, of Goshen, the afternoon service.—Mrs. Kate Peterson, South Bend, Ind., Nov. 10.

Spring Creek church met in council Nov. 8, with Eld. Moyne Landis presiding. Three letters were received and two were granted. Sunday-school officers were elected, with Bro. Floyd Newcomer, superintendent; Hilda Biegh, primary superintendent; Amanda Rusher, home department superintendent. We expect to have a Christmas program on Sunday evening, Dec. 21. We are planning to have a course of lectures again this winter, the time to be announced later. Our love feast was held Nov. 1, at the close of our three weeks' series of meetings, conducted by Bro. I. D. Heckman.—M. Amanda Rusher, Pierceton, Ind., Nov. 10.

Summitville.—Our series of meetings has just come to a close, conducted by our pastor, Bro. Fred Fair. He delivered sixteen very interesting and spiritual sermons. The attendance was good and the spiritual strength was increased. Outsiders seemed to be much interested and four were baptized. One had been added to the church before the meeting. Our love feast was held Oct. 19, and the service was enjoyed by the members.—Mrs. Pearl Tomlinson, Summitville, Ind., Nov. 10.

Topeka church has enjoyed a three weeks' series of meetings, conducted by Bro. Forest Hostettler, of Greentown, Ind. Bro. Riley Kendall conducted the song service very ably, which was a great inspiration to the meeting. One accepted Christ. At the close of the meetings we held our love feast, with Bro. Hostettler officiating. Fifty participated and we have had one of the most spiritual services we have ever held. Oct. 31 we held our council meeting, with Eld. I. S. Burns presiding. The deacons reported the annual visit.—Mrs. Sarah E. Yontz, Topeka, Ind., Nov. 11.

IOWA

Brooklyn.—We held our love feast Oct. 18. Bro. J. Q. Goughnour, of Ankeny, Iowa, officiated, assisted by Bro. Ivan Connell. About fifty were present. On Sunday, Oct. 19, Sister Sadie Miller, from India, gave us two inspiring messages. An offering, amounting to $40, was taken. Oct. 25 Bro. Virgil C. Flinnell came to us with a stereopticon lecture, "The Rural Church Facing Its Task." The Brooklyn church is trying to "face its task," and Bro. Flinnell's lecture and suggestions were a source of encouragement to us.—Mrs. Rose D. Fox, Brooklyn, Iowa, Nov. 5.

Council Bluffs.—Our quarterly business meeting was held Sept. 26, with Eld. W. H. Crowe presiding. Officers were elected for the new year as follows: Elder, Bro. W. D. Grove; clerk, Bro. D. P. Hutchison; Sunday-school superintendent, Sister Hutchison. Sister Della Hufline was chosen as member of the board, the other members of which are the pastor and Sunday-school superintendent. Our Rally Day program was given Sept. 28. Nov. 2 the Sunday-school rendered a temperance program, following the lesson. Most of the pupils signed the temperance pledge. Many cottage prayer meetings have been held during the past two weeks in addition to the midweek service at the church. This week there will be on every night campaign, preparatory to our coming revival services, to be conducted by Bro. C. C. Kindy, of Indiana, beginning Nov. 16. The interest is good and we are hoping for good results.—Mrs. Dora Hufline, Council Bluffs, Iowa, Nov. 7.

Dallas Center.—Oct. 26 we were favored with two sermons by Eld. Paul Mohler, of Oroville, Wash., and Nov. 2 Eld. I. W. Brubaker, of Prairie City, Iowa, delivered two addresses. The presence of these two brethren was greatly appreciated. Their messages prepare us for better service for the Master.—Anna Goughnour, Dallas Center, Iowa, Nov. 4.

Franklin County.—Owing to rainy weather our love feast was postponed from Nov. 9 to Nov. 23. It was also decided that we have a missionary Thanksgiving program at the church on Thanksgiving Day at 10:30, with basket dinner.—Harvey W. Allen, Dumont, Iowa, Nov. 10.

Indian Creek church met in business session Nov. 1, with Eld. E. D. Eikenberry presiding. Letters were received and five were granted. We deeply regret the loss of Brother and Sister J. K. Eikenberry and his parents, who have been laboring with us for three years. They expect to move Dec. 1 to Indiana. Bro. E. D. Pitzel, who has taken our field, has been ordained to the office. Eld. I. W. Brubaker, of Prairie City, has been chosen for the remainder of this year and 1920.—Mrs. P. H. Enfield, Maxwell, Iowa, Nov. 10.

Osceola church met in council Oct. 18, with Bro. Charles Colyn presiding. Our series of meetings will begin Nov. 16, with Bro. J. F. Swallow as evangelist and Bro. Paul Hoover as chorister. Our fall love feast will be held Nov. 27. No new church officers were elected. Eld. Jacob Motts was chosen as our elder for one year and has accepted. Bro. Roger Winger was with us two evenings in the interest of the "Forward Movement." Brethren Messamer and Sargent were here in the interest of our schools. Bro. Emmert Gover our latest addition, favored us with a nice little program of stories of Indian life. Sometime ago Sister Lydia Taylor gave a talk on Dezas Reloem and her subject was well bandied. A few weeks ago Bro. Wm. Myers, of Lenox, preached a good sermon. In all we have had many good things this summer and fall.—Jennie Alexander, Osceola, Iowa, Nov. 5.

KANSAS

Parsons church convened in members' meeting Nov. 6, with Eld. J. S. Clark presiding. It being impossible for Eld. H. B. Mohler to conduct our meeting, it was postponed indefinitely. The Ministerial Board was given the power to procure some one to give us a series of meetings at their discretion. A nice little program of stories of Indian life. Sometime ago Sister Lydia Taylor gave a talk on Dezas Reloem and her subject was well bandied. A few weeks ago Bro. Wm. Myers, of Lenox, preached a good sermon. In all we have had many good things this summer and fall.—Jennie Alexander, Osceola, Iowa, Nov. 5.

Redfield.—The series of meetings conducted by Bro. L. G. Templeton at the Redfield church closed with a love feast on Monday evening, Nov. 10. Regardless of the bad weather, the interest was good. Ten were born into the Kingdom. These meetings have been the means of drawing the membership of this place closer to their God and to one another, and, as a result, the spiritual life of the church was held. These services were conducted by Bro. D. P. Neher, of McCune, and Bro. L. G. Templeton, assisted by the home elder. The election resulted in the choice and installation of Bro. Jacob Rothrauff to the ministry.—Mrs. J. A. Strohm, Redfield, Kans., Nov. 12.

Sobetha church met in council Nov. 4, with Eld. Roy Kistner presiding. Sunday-school officers were elected for the coming year, with Bro. M. E. Stair, superintendent. Sisters Ethel Hollinger and Cora Derrick, members of the Mission Board, were with us at this meeting. We will have the first number of our lecture course Nov. 17, with Mr. Ebel as one speaker. He will give an illustrated talk. Bro. C. B. Shull, of Carroll, Iowa, delivered an inspiring sermon on Sunday morning, Nov. 2, on the subject, "Missing a Chance." Since the last report four members have been received into the church by baptism. We are looking for Bro. Shull again.—Bro. Geo. Sperline, who has spent almost a year in the west. Much interest is manifested by the young people of the Junior Christian Workers' Society that was organized some time ago, with Sister Mishler as president. Our Sunday-school is growing and we are doing what we can to do our part in the interest of the "Five-year Forward Movement."—Mrs. John Heikes, Sabetha, Kans., Nov. 5.

MARYLAND

Longmeadow.—We held our love feast Nov. I and 2. Owing to the constant downpour of rain, the attendance was small, but the spirit of the meeting was good. Visiting brethren were Eld. D. Rodkey and Bro. C. E. Martin were with us. Our elder, Bro. Caleb Long, preached to a full house on Sunday morning.—K. Mae Rowland, Hagerstown, Md., Nov. 11.

MICHIGAN

Sugar Ridge.—We held our love feast Nov. 1, with Bro. Nevinger, of Hart, presiding. About seventy members communed. Visiting ministers present were Brethren J. E. Ulery, W. R. Miller, G. Nevinger and Bro. Wm. Hoffman. Sunday-school officers were elected and advanced to the eldership. Bro. R. T. Heckman and wife were installed into the deacon's office. Bro. W. R. Miller preached a very able sermon for us on Sunday morning.—Mrs. Curtis, Mich., Nov. 5.

Woodland.—Bro. John A. Robinson, of Pleasant Hill, Ohio, began a series of meetings at this place Oct. 5, continuing for three weeks. A deep interest was manifested from the beginning, and Bro. Robinson's strong, doctrinal sermons drew large crowds. Six were received into the church by baptism, and the church and community were inspired with new energy. Sister Robinson was with us during the last week of the meetings. Her talk to the children, on Sunday morning, was especially enjoyed by the large following we held our communion service, with Bro. Robinson officiating.—Mrs. Nora Christian, Woodland, Mich., Nov. 4.

MISSOURI

Farrenburg church met in council Nov. 2, with our pastor presiding. Eld. B. E. Kesler comes to our place once a month, on the Saturday, and on Sunday he gives us a splendid sermon each time. At the council we reelected our officers, and decided to have a short series of meetings, commencing the fifth Sunday and continuing until after our regular meeting day, closing with a love feast. Bro. J. W. Rosa and Sister Hannah Forrenberg were elected delegates to District Meeting. Our band is small, numbering only twelve, but we trust it will grow larger. We expect help in our meetings, which will begin Dec. 6.—Nora Meadows, Marcus, Mo., Nov. 10.

Shelby County church enjoyed a feast of good things when Bro. Blair Hoover, of Plattsburg, Mo., came into our midst Nov. 2 and remained over Sunday. He delivered two splendid sermons and talked, as it is Bro. Hoover's desire to locate here among us, for he sees we have a good country in which to live; also that we are in great need of workers for the unoccupied territory that must be neglected unless help in the ministry is secured. The church is unanimous in desiring to put forth every effort to make it possible for Bro. Hoover to move among us. There is still a good opening here at Leonard, three miles from the village, for a mechanic who can do blacksmithing, wagon repairing and garage work, with a large territory to serve. One is also needed at Cherry Box, just one and one-half miles to church, with a good road all the way. Here is an opportunity to do garage work on a State road, where he could work up a lucrative business and be a blessing to the church here. Let me hear from any one interested.—J. A. Stonder, Cherry Box, Mo., Nov. 6.

Wakenda.—We held our communion services Oct. 18, with fifty members present. Bro. M. E. Stair, of Alvo, Nebr., officiated and preached two splendid sermons for us on Sunday. Capt. Owen O. Wiaed was with us Oct. 26 to Nov. 1, and gave ten lectures which were enjoyed very much by those who attended. We have made arrangements for his return next year, to give us another week of lectures. We held our quarterly council meeting Nov. 7, with Bro. Van Pelt in charge. Our letter was granted and one received. Since our last meeting the election of Sunday-school officers has taken place and Bro. Luther Van Pelt is our superintendent.—Mary Bowman, Hardin, Mo., Nov. 9.

MONTANA

Kalispell church met in council Oct. 13, with Eld. Jas. Harp presiding. It was decided to have a love feast, but the date was not set. Eight were received by letter Nov. 2. In that number is one elder and one minister. As a result we are in number we are anxious that more loyal members locate with us, to help build up the cause in this city. The writer was chosen correspondent for the north part.—Mary E. Horp, Kalispell, Mont., Nov. 5.

OHIO

Black Swamp church held her love feast Oct. 25, an all-day meeting. Brethren were present from seven churches, about eighty communing. Visiting ministers present were Brethren L. L. Moss, who officiated, Uriah Garner, C. W. Stutsman, Geo. Throne, Clyde St. Jeor. On the following Sunday Bro. L. L. Moss began a series of meetings, preaching eighteen splendid sermons.—Mrs. Asanath Baker, Lemoyne, Ohio, Nov. 10.

County Line.—Our love feast was held Oct. 4, with Bro. Samuel Driver officiating. Oct. 5 Bro. J. L. Guthrie, of Upper Sandusky, Ohio, began our series of meetings and continued until Oct. 26. Eleven were baptized. Bro. Guthrie preached both morning and evening Nov. 2.—Bessie L. Guthrie, La Fayette, Ohio, Nov. 4.

Spring Creek church met in council Nov. 1, preparatory to our love feast. The business of the December council was also transacted at this meeting. Bro. Elmer Eikey, of Oakland, led the devotionals, with Eld. Chas. Flory presiding. One letter was granted and the visiting brethren gave a splendi talk on tithing. The following officers were elected: Sunday-school superintendent, Bro. Roy Waggoner; church clerk, Bro. Henry Ballinger; "Messenger" agent, Sister Martha Ballinger; the writer, correspondent. Nov. 8 we enjoyed a very spiritual love feast, with Bro. M. J. Brougher, of Greensburg, Pa., officiating.—Mrs. H. R. Hoover, Bradford, Ohio, Nov. 13.

Lower Stillwater church held communion services Oct. 25, with a good attendance present. Bro. Jacob Sawyer officiated. Sunday morning Sister Anna Eby gave a much appreciated talk to the children, telling of the life of a little Indian boy. This was followed by an impressive sermon by Bro. Hugh Cloppert.—Mande E. Crook, Trotwood, Ohio, Nov. 8.

Marion church has suffered a heavy loss by the death of her beloved pastor, Bro. Geo. E. Deardorff. We feel that we owe much of the success of the Marion church to him, as he was untiring in his zeal for the work, although his health has been failing during most of the three years he has been with us. Bro. Driver, of Lima, Ohio, filled the pulpit both morning and evening Nov. 2; Bro. Raymond, also of Lima, preached for us the morning service Nov. 9. Bro. Isaac Deardorff delivered the message at the evening service. Each address was much appreciated.—Rachel Bowman, Morion, Ohio, Nov. 11.

Palestine.—Bro. Chas. Cripe held a three weeks' series of revival meetings for us, closing Nov. 2. They were well attended and good interest was manifested throughout. All feel well repaid for attending. Bro. Friend Couser was with us as chorister. Great interest was taken in singing as he all the other services. Our Sunday-school scholars confessed Christ. Our love feast, held Oct. 25, was also well attended. We appreciate very much tha help which our neighboring churches gave us.—Mae Hollinger, Greenville, Ohio, Nov. 10.

Prices Creek church held her love least Nov. I. Although the weather was very rainy we had a large attendance and o very spiritual meeting. Several visiting brethren were present. Bro. I. J. Rosenberger officiated. On Sunday morning Sister Kate Flory gave a talk to the children about "Angels" which was very much appreciated.—Alma Miller, Eldorado, Ohio, Nov. 7.

Spring Creek church met in council Nov. 8, with Eld. J. W. Keiser presiding. Bro. Chas. Hendricks was chosen trustee to serve for three years. Bro. J. W. Keiser was chosen elder for two years. We expect the Sunday-school Normal to be held at the Hickory Grove house in December. Bro. Wm. Shroyer is to hold a series of meetings some time in February.—Mrs. Ottie Fisher, Pioneer, Ohio, Nov. 11.

Woodworth.—The series of meetings, conducted by Bro. Jesse J. Anglemyer, of Williamstown, W. Va., have been a great blessing to our community. Seven confessed Christ, six of whom were baptized. Besides this immediate good, the plain truth of his teaching brought to us a new spirit and more zeal to go forward in the work of Christ. The singing, which was conducted by J. H. Badger, of Canfield, Ohio, was also very inspiring. We had communion services Oct. 26, with Eld. J. F. Kahler, of Canton, in charge. Our Tuesday night Prayer-meeting Class will continue throughout the winter.—Ruth Garver, Poland, Ohio, Nov. 8.

OREGON

Albany.—The writer recently spent several days with the members of the Albany congregation, holding a few services and making arrangements for regular services. They have been without a pastor minister for several months, but now have Bro. E. W. Pratt, formerly of Santee, Calif., with them. Members from other States, wishing to locate in Oregon, will do well to correspond with Albany and Bro. Pratt as suitable homes can be had as reasonable there as elsewhere. One can enjoy a church home and at the same time have an opportunity to do effective church work. Those desiring may correspond with Bro. E. W. Pratt, 611 E. Eighth Street, Albany, Oregon, or with the writer.—H. H. Ritter, Mabel, Oregon, Nov. 8.

Newberg church is looking forward to the coming of Bro. S. F. Sanger, who is to hold a series of meetings for us soon. At our last council it was decided to hold our love feast at the close of the meetings, and the date will be given later. Brn. Reed, of this church, is now giving us evening sermons each Sunday, for which we are very thankful.—Eliza J. Newberg, Newberg, Oregon, Nov. 5.

Williams.—Our love feast was held Oct. 12, with twenty-eight members communing. The day before, one sister was baptized by Bro. M. C. Lininger, our elder. Bro. Lininger drives by auto ninety-eight miles round trip, once a month, to preach the Word to a few scattered members. The time is here to open a mission in Grants Pass, where there are seven members living. Bro. Ray Pence, of Williams, was elected to the office of deacon. Bro. Hiram Royer, of Ashland, is now conducting a series of meetings at Williams. If any of our ministers desire to change locations they will please inform the writer.—Mrs. Alice S. Christlieb, Grants Pass, Oregon.

PENNSYLVANIA

Codorus congregation held a love feast at the Codorus house Oct. 19. The following ministers were present and assisted: Eld. David Kilhelner, who officiated and preached a fine sermon on Saturday evening. Brethren Levi S. Mohler, E. S. Miller, Welty G. Smith and Israel Emerick. The services were well attended. Since our last report one was baptized. The following brethren represented us at the District Meeting: S. B. Myers, S. C. Godfrey, R. S. Kront, H. Fitz and C. E. Desa. A Children's Meeting was held in the Codorus house Nov. 2. The speaker for this occasion was Bro. J. J. Baugher, of Linchoro, Md. These services were interesting and enjoyed by all present. In the forenoon we had with us Bro. A. S. Bangher, who preached on the subject of "Christ and Christ." A collection of $29.28 was token for Child Rescue work. A Mission Study Class has been organized with fifteen members and more to be added later.—E. H. Lehman, Seven Valley, Pa., Nov. 6.

Conestoga.—Sunday, Oct. 12, Bro. John L. Myer, from Stevana, preached a missionary sermon at the Monterey house. An offering of $36 was lifted. We started a series of meetings at the Earlville house Oct. 18, continuing for two weeks, with Eld. Hiram E. Kaylor, of Elizabethtown, in charge. He gave us some very interesting and dren, and so many are saved from the disease. They are now trying out a "leprosy cure," financed by the Government, but they do not yet know what the results will be. This institution is supported hy the Government and cared for by the missionaries.

I must not forget the English High School. It is quite an adjunct to their work, and requires one missionary's time. Only fifteen of the one hundred and forty students are Christians, brought up in the mission, but all have a Bible lesson daily, and many of them attend the Sunday-school, although this latter is not compulsory.

Then the medical work is not neglected either. Besides the woman doctor there is a native Christian hoy, who has had four years of medical training under Dr. Wanless, of Miraj, and two native trained nurses.

We were pleased with their work as we saw it, and it is full of promise, but our hearts were made sad for the lack of missionaries and native helpers. May the Lord send forth helpers!

As we chatted over our teacups, or sang and prayed together around the family altar, we got inspiration for our work. We love these devoted workers as our own brethren. And now we pray God's blessing upon the Mennonite Mission and hid her Godspeed!

PORTLAND, OREGON

Oct. 19 I reached Weston, Oregon, where I spent two weeks in a series of meetings, closing with a love feast Nov. 2.

Inclement weather, snow, rain and muddy roads, all militated somewhat against the attendance, but the members were faithful in attending the meetings. Few not members were in the services, except occasionally.

I came to Portland from Weston, and aim to commence meetings here on the evening of Nov. 4, expecting to remain here about two weeks. These two meeting places are about two hundred miles apart.

All the territory east of the Cascade Mountains, consisting of fourteen counties, has but one congregation, at Weston. This is a large field, some of which is not occupied by any denomination. Any one, aspiring to serve in the good work with plenty of room, can be accommodated in Eastern Oregon. In some places they are anxious for meetings. Such conditions make some of us older preachers wish they were young again.

By the request of the District Mission Board I have arranged to visit about all the congregations of the District and to spend approximately two weeks in each. My labors will be largely along the line of fundamentals, with some part in evangelistic work. I find many "isms," and much indifference in this Coast Country. Amusements, money-getting and health-seeking practically take up the time of so many people out here. Little attention, therefore, is given to the needs of the inner man. Faithful men and more funds are needed in this field. Such as are looking for "easy" places need not apply. Jesus selected busy, industrious, faithful men for his work. He is still needing workers of the same kind, filled with the Holy Spirit and love for souls.

NORTHERN MISSOURI

The District Meetings of Northern Missouri were held in the Smith Fork congregation Oct. 22-24. To say they were the most uplifting and spiritual we ever held, is simply expressing the verdict of all present. Eld. J. B. Emmert, missionary to India, at home on furlough, M. E. Stair, of Nehraska, W. O. Beckner, of McPherson College, and Bro. J. W. Deeter, of the McPherson College faculty, were with us, and their timely assistance was much appreciated.

The first day was devoted to Christian Workers and the Sunday-school programs. The discussions were so pointed and the great needs of the District so apparent that the meetings resolved to put some of the suggestions to work and set on foot a plan to hold a Sunday-school Institute in each congregation in the District. This action met the approval of the District Meeting, and was so ordered. We believe this will mean much to us.

The evening services were conducted by the mothers and daughters. Sister Mary Polk Ellenberger addressed us on the subject, "Standardization of Dress." She portrayed, in her usual vigorous style, the beauty and attraction of the simple life, and showed that the trend of the times is toward less ostentation. She was followed by Bro. Emmert, who gave an illustrated lecture on India and her needs.

The second day was Ministerial Day and the program throughout was spiced with pointed sayings. The subjects of Loyalty, Coöperation and Consecration seemed to receive the most enthusiasm. Calls were made for consecration of men and means. Parents pledged themselves to dedicate their children. Ten young people, eight of them of the Smith Fork congregation, announced their intention to prepare for decided, specific work for the Master. Offerings were lifted, amounting to almost $1,200—about $100 for District work and almost $1,100 for India. This is the beginning of greater things—an effort to reach the Forward Movement goal.

In the evening the Educational Meeting was held, presided over by our trustee to McPherson College, Eld. E. G. Rodabaugh. Addresses were delivered by Brethren Beckner, Deeter and others.

Friday was the District Meeting proper. Eld. H. M. Brubaker was chosen Moderator, Eld. E. G. Rodabaugh, Reading Clerk, and Eld. J. S. Kline, Writing Clerk. No papers were sent to Annual Meeting. Eld. J. S. Kline was chosen on the Mission Board for a term of three years. Elders G. W. Ellenberger and E. G. Rodabaugh were elected as advisory board to the Mission Board, with full powers as other members. Eld. H. M. Brubaker was chosen member of the 1920 Standing Committee, with Eld. G. W. Ellenberger, alternate.

The next meeting will be held in the Pleasant View congregation on the fourth Friday of October, 1920.

PRAIRIE CITY, IOWA

On the evenings of Oct. 21 and 22 Sister Sadie Miller, of India, gave us splendid talks on her experiences in her chosen field of labor. The next two evenings, Bro. Virgil C. Finnell gave us two most helpful illustrated lectures, one on "The Forward Movement," the other on "A Survey of the Rural Churches." The latter was very instructive to us as a rural people.

Sunday we observed the second anniversary of our new church. Bro. M. W. Eikenberry, of Dallas Center, preached a sermon in the morning following the Sunday-school. Then all partook of a bountiful meal in the dining room, and enjoyed a social hour. In the afternoon we listened to a fine address by Bro. Eikenberry on "Anniversaries and Home-Comings," pointing us to the great home-coming in the other world. In the evening a special program was rendered on the subject of Child Rescue work, followed by another sermon by Bro. Eikenberry, thus closing a very busy day, which, we feel, was very profitable. We had a good crowd and we feel thankful to God for the many blessings enjoyed since we moved into our new church.

NORTHWESTERN KANSAS AND NORTHEASTERN COLORADO

From Oct. 31 to Nov. 3 we enjoyed one of the most spiritual and successful meetings ever held in this District. The meetings were held in the Quinter church, Quinter, Kansas. Oct. 30 there was a very spiritual love feast. On the following day the elders met with a good representation. In the evening of the same day there was a Temperance Meeting. A splendid program was rendered, after which Eld. J. E. Small preached a good sermon.

Saturday was a very busy day. All of the forenoon and part of the afternoon was taken up by the Ministerial Meeting, which was very helpful all the way through. Bro. Hoff, of Chicago, added much to the interest of the meeting, taking a very active part in the discussion of the various topics. Part of the afternoon was taken up with a Child Rescue program, which was very interesting and instructive. The offering amounted to something like $350. In the evening there was an Educational Meeting. This was a very inspiring service, as we talked of the power of religious education. Bro. Hoff gave the address.

Sunday, Nov. 2, was a bright, beautiful day. The first thing was the Christian Workers' Meeting, which convened at 9 o'clock. A good program was rendered, with many helpful suggestions offered. The closing number of the program was an item of business in which the Christian Workers' Meetings of our District propose to support at least one missionary on the foreign field. It was fully decided upon, and they will enter at once on the task of raising the money.

The afternoon was taken up with the Sunday-school Meeting, in which Bro. Hoff had a very active part. It was a live-wire meeting from the start. There were many good addresses, and some splendid papers were read. The outlook for the Sunday-school work of the District is fine, as reported by our Sunday-school Secretary. We are supporting Bro. Howard Alley on the field in India, but found that we are raising much more money than we need, having on hand at this time over $1,000. Accordingly we decided to take the support of another missionary on the foreign field. It is our desire to support all the young people from our District who offer their service for the foreign field. The Sunday-school Meeting was a great success.

Sunday came to a close with one of the greatest meetings of the Conference. It was the Missionary Meeting, and Bro. Hoff gave the address. At the close an offering of over $1,500 was lifted, for District Mission work. The Mission Board was very much encouraged and thinks the o tlook is good for the coming year.

Monday, Nov. 3, was the District Me ting proper. The great work of the day included the plans for the mission work, both of the home and foreign field. There were no papers for Annual Meeting. Bro. H. F. Crist was chosen delegate on Standing Committee, with Bro. J. W. Jarboe, alternate. In the evening Bro. Hoff gave one of his helpful Bible lessons, after which Cept. Wiard gave an illustrated lecture.

Special Notice

THE COST OF MATERIALS AND LABOR HAS INCREASED AND IS continuing to increase to such an extent that we have no choice but to advance our prices on Sunday School Supplies. We must keep up the standard of quality. We do not want to go backward. The small advance in price has been decided upon after a careful analysis of the costs. Please notice the prices in the order blank, and when sending in your order be governed accordingly.

Here Is Your Order Blank for Sunday-School Supplies

SUGGESTIONS

When ordering supplies, particularly quarterlies and papers, be sure to notice that our publications are prepared for special age groups. The Primary Quarterly is for children from 5 to 8 years old; the Junior Quarterly for pupils 9 to 12 years old; the Intermediate Quarterly for pupils 13 to 16 years old.

We publish three Sunday-school papers. Children at Work is for Primary Scholars, Our Boys and Girls for Juniors, and Our Young People, as its name implies, for Intermediates and all other young folks in your school.

The best results come from the use of the appropriate quarterly or paper.

helpful sermons. One young man was baptized. We held our love feast in the Barrville house Nov. 3 and 4. Ministers present were Elders S. H. Hertzler, S. R. Zug, Amos Hottenstein, Hiram E. Koyler, Thos. Patrick, S. N. Wolf and John C. Zug, who officiated.—Mabel A. Myer, New Oxford, Pa., Nov. 8.

Falling Spring.—The fifth local Sunday-school Convention was held in the Browns Mill church Oct. 19, at which time some very interesting topics were discussed. The male chorus from Waynesboro sang a few selections. At the close of the program diplomas were given to seven of the teacher-training class, which was composed of scholars from three schools—Browns Mill, Shanks and Shady Grove. The next local quarterly convention will be held in the Shanks meetinghouse. We held our fall love feast at the Blade meetinghouse Nov. 1 and 2. Ministering brethren present, besides those of the home congregation, were Brethren C. R. Oellig and John S. Weybright, who officiated. The latter remained with us and preached a very interesting sermon on Sunday morning to a large and attentive audience.—H. N. M. Gearhart, Shady Grove, Pa., Nov. 5.

Holsinger church of the Dunnings Creek congregation has just closed a two weeks' series of meetings, held by Bro. Chas. W. Rogers, of Juniata, Pa. The attendance and interest were good. Sister Elma Rogers led the singing, which was excellent. We feel greatly encouraged. Six were baptized.—Carrie Smith, Spring Hope, Pa., Nov. 6.

Lititz.—Since our last report two members have been received by letter and two by baptism. Nov. 9 we enjoyed another love feast. The following ministers were with us and assisted in the services: Harvey Frantz, Cyrus Gibbel, Israel Graybill, W. G. Group, Amos Hottenstein, David Killheffer, Miller Myer, H. K. Ober, Jacob Trimmer and S. R. Zug. Bro. Zug, who is eighty-eight years of age, addressed the Sunday-school in such a fatherly way that the hearts of young and old were touched. Bro. Ober, who officiated at the love feast, preached a very helpful sermon at the evening service on the text, "Whom seek ye?" Afterward the church met in council and granted letters to Bro. John R. Gibbel and family who will locate in California. We expect to organize a Sunday-school, Nov. 16, will be conducted by Bro. S. G. Meyer, of Jonestown, Pa.—Florence B. Gibbel, Lititz, Pa., Nov. 10.

Maple Grove.—An interesting and very helpful series of meetings was held at the Maple Grove house of the Johnstown church by Bro. E. M. Detwiler, of Roaring Spring. The weather was very raioy and the roads became almost impassable in places, but the preacher was always ready with an impressive, encouraging message. Although the attendance was not large, the seed was sown, and as it is known by the last that nine were received into the church by baptism Nov. 3. Both the minister and the small group of faithful ones in the community are to be congratulated upon this success.—Irvin C. Van Dyke, Salix, Pa., Nov. 10.

Marsherock.—We held our communion meeting Nov. 1. Eld. Chas. Baker and Bro. S. S. Miller were with us, the former officiating. We took a collection of $56 for home missions. Monday evening, Nov. 3, eleven members gathered at the home of Brother and Sister Moses Benner and held a love feast. Brother and Sister Benner are old and feeble and desired to have the communion once more. These are members who live in the mountains and are shut in during a part of the year. We have decided to begin a series of meetings at the Marsherock house, beginning Dec. 18, with Bro. Nye, of Elizabethtown College, as evangelist.—Ida M. Lightner, Gettysburg, Pa., Nov. 6.

Philadelphia (First Church).—We held our quarterly church council, Oct. 27. In the absence of Eld. C. F. McKee, our pastor, Bro. C. C. Ellis, presided. Three letters were received and two were granted. Nov. 2 we held our preparatory service for the love feast, to be held the following Sunday. Our assembly room was filled and Bro. Ellis gave us a very practical and impressive talk. In the evening our pastor gave us a very forceful and uplifting message. At the close of the service two were baptized.—Mrs. Wm. H. B. Sahnell, Philadelphia, Pa., Nov. 7.

Rockton.—Oct. 26 saw the close of the meetings held in the Greenville house by Bro. John R. Snyder, evangelist. Fifteen united with the church by baptism and some are yet to be baptized. Elders D. B. Eversole and Evan Engle were in attendance. Sister Snyder assisted in the election of four deacons, and took the voice of the church for more ministers. Four brethren were called to the deacon's office: David Dailey, Austin Bolinger, Wm. Stover and Bro. B. Gay. Bro. Bloom, with his wife, and Bro. Kirk, were installed by the visiting elders. There was no election of ministers. The day closed with a well-attended and spiritual love feast, with Eld. Oran Eyer officiating. The Rockton congregation has passed the "Forward Movement" goal in several of the points, but is short on some others, which we are making an effort to gain. In addition to baptism the congregation has increased by letter since the membership for the year.—J. B. Hollopeter, Rockton, Pa., Nov. 6.

Shippensburg church held her annual Rally Day services Oct. 12. At this meeting Bro. H. D. Emmert, our newly-elected pastor, was installed. Bro. B. D. Murphy, a former pastor, conducted the service. We feel that we are highly blessed in securing the services of Bro. Emmert. A liberal offering was taken at this meeting and pledges were given for the purchase of a parsonage. Harvest Home exercises were held on Sunday, Oct. 19, with a special sermon for the old folks in the morning and one for the young folks in the evening. The decorations were appropriate for the occasion. We plan to hold our fall love feast on Friday evening, Nov. 28.—Mrs. Katie Railing, Shippensburg, Pa., Nov. 10.

Snake Spring.—Nov. 2 we held our love feast at the Cherry Lane house. Eld. John Bennett, of Artemas, officiated. Our elder, Bro. Wm. B. Stitcher, preached the ordination sermon in the morning.—Emanuel G. Koones, Clearville, Pa., Nov. 5.

Woodbury.—Eld. H. C. Early, of Penn Laird, Va., came into the Woodbury congregation Oct. 18 and began a series of meetings on the following day, continuing until Nov. 2, when we held our love feast. The continued rain was very much against the attendance, but as it was, large crowds gathered. Four were baptized and one reclaimed. About 300 were present at the love feast, at which Eld. Early officiated. He labored faithfully while among us, and our association with him was pleasant.—J. C. Stayer, Woodbury, Pa., Nov. 11.

VIRGINIA

Bridgewater congregation met in council Nov. 8, with Eld. H. G. Miller as moderator. One was received by baptism. We are closing up the year's work and getting ready to reorganize the various departments. Bro. A. B. Miller, our pastor, closed a two weeks' evangelistic service Nov. 2, with thirty-one conversions, twenty-four of whom have been received by baptism, and one reclaimed. We had an excellent meeting. We had our love feast Oct. 18 and the house was well filled.—M. A. Good, Bridgewater, Va., Nov. 10.

Cloverdale.—Oct. 12 Eld. C. D. Hylton, of Troutville, Va., began a series of meetings at the Bethel house, closing Oct. 26. Ten were baptized. We are now in the midst of a series of meetings at the Bethesda house, conducted by Bro. Levi Garst, of Salem, Va. We held our love feast Nov. 1, with Eld. J. A. Dove officiating. Bro. J. S. Crumpacker and wife were recently ordained to the eldership.—Mrs. E. L. Showalter, Roanoke, Va., Nov. 6.

Daleville.—The work at this place has kept well during the summer months. Under the splendid leadership of Bro. B. R. Ikenberry, the Sunday-school is gaining steadily. Sept. 28 the school celebrated Children's Day. Special music and readings were features of the program, which was enjoyed by a large audience. Sept. 13 we held our quarterly council, at which time the report of the church visit was given and steps taken toward securing a pastor.—Eld. C. S. Ikenberry, who served us so well, is now attending Boston University. The finance committee will work out a plan whereby we may raise funds for the full support of a pastor. Oct. 25 we held our love feast, at which a large number were present.—Oct. 31, Nov. 1 the Botetourt County Sunday-school Association held its annual convention at our church—an all-day meeting. The attendance was good and the addresses splendid. Nov. 9 Prof. E. E. Spessard addressed us on "The Selfishness of Sin."—D. V. Shaver, Daleville, Va., Nov. 11.

Flat Rock church met in council Nov. 7. Bro. Frank Good was moderator of the forenoon session. The topic, "The Forward Movement, Its Importance and Benefits," was duly discussed. Eld. D. F. Wine presided at the afternoon session. Bro. D. S. Neff was reappointed on the Mission Board, and Bro. J. D. Shaver on the Sunday-school Board. Bro. N. C. Wampler and the writer were appointed church correspondents. The penny collectors were all reappointed. Two letters were granted. Bro. Joe Myers was chosen superintendent of the Sunday-school for the coming year, and Bro. S. C. Wine as primary superintendent. The topic for the Saturday night council is "To What Extent Am I Personally Responsible for the Forward Movement?" The speakers assigned are Brethren Fred Neff, B. F. Good and Benny Wakeman.—Annie Wine, Forestville, Va., Nov. 10.

Green Hill.—Bro. Emery Crumpacker began a series of meetings Oct. 26, closing Nov. 9. The attendance and interest were good and Bro. Crumpacker gave very helpful discourses. Fourteen stood for Christ; six were baptized and four reclaimed. We held our love feast Nov. 8. Bro. Crumpacker officiated, assisted by the home ministers, Brethren A. B. Miller, E. Eller, Garst and Deaton. We were glad to have Miss Marjorie Morgan, of Daleville College, with us.—W. B. Poff, Glenvar, Va., Nov. 11.

Maurertown.—Bro. I. N. H. Beahm, of Nokesville, Va., came to our congregation the first of October and went to the mountain into what is known as the Cedar Creek Valley. Bro. Beahm preached a very interesting and able sermon in the new church, which was built by the Bible Union people and others. Sunday morning by the time the Bible Institute had he preached the dedicatory sermon, which was appreciated by all. This churchhouse was deeded to the Bible Union, to the Church of the Brethren, to the Lutherans, the Methodists and the Christians, or Disciples. The trustees of the Bible Union we procured the services of Bro. Beahm and we were very grateful to him for his work. The same evening, Bro. P. I. Garber, of Harrisonburg, Va., commenced a two weeks' series of meetings in a church house in Maurertown, Bro. Garber also visited in many homes. Many good impressions were made and two were reclaimed.—M. H. Copp, Maurertown, Va., Nov. 3.

Nokesville church met in council Nov. 1, with Eld. E. E. Blough presiding. Letters were granted to four members who have moved away. Officers for the coming year were elected, with Sister Dessie Holling, Sunday-school superintendent; Sister Marjorie Graybill, president of the Christian Workers' Society; Sister Mary E. Beahm, church correspondent, and Bro. P. I. Byer, "Messenger" agent.—F. J. Byer, Nokesville, Va., Nov. 11.

Oak Grove.—Bro. D. M. Glick, of Trevilian, began a series of meetings Oct. 21, closing Oct. 31. He preached very inspiring sermons, his aim being to help the members to live up to their profession. We trust that every one was made to think and study God's Word more.—Mrs. P. B. May, Catlett, Va., Nov. 6.

Peters Creek church met in council at the Oak Grove house Oct. 25, with Eld. C. F. Webster as moderator. Bro. J. S. Showalter made some very excellent remarks on "How to Make Our Council Meetings More Interesting." Two letters were granted. We decided to invite the wives of the officials to the council meetings. We are expecting to have a missionary worker at Peters Creek, Roanoke. Our next council meeting will be at Peters Creek, Dec. 20, when we will elect officers for the coming year.—Mildred Naff, Roanoke, Va., Nov. 5.

Pleasant Hill church met in council Nov. 8, with Eld. A. N. Hylton presiding. Brethren E. E. Hylton, J. B. Bowers and Peyton Marshall were appointed as our Ministerial Committee. On Sunday Mooney, Bro. Hylton preached an able sermon to an attentive audience.—Pernie L. Dickerson, Willis, Va., Nov. 10.

Troutville congregation met in council Nov. 8, with Eld. Jonas Cargill presiding. Request of this meeting was for the election of a minister and deacon. Bro. Rex Spigel was elected to the ministry and Bro. A. M. Scaggs was chosen deacon. Bro. Clayborne Layman and wife were installed into the deacon's office, the installation service being conducted by Eld. P. S. Miller, of Roanoke. We were also glad to have present Bro. B. B. Garber, pastor of the Roanoke church. Our Thanksgiving service will be held at the Trinity church. A series of meetings, to begin at Trinity sometime during November, will be conducted by our pastor, Bro. W. M. Kahle. The Troutville church would like to secure some one to conduct a singing class sometime during the winter. Any one who desires to take up this work will please correspond with Bro. C. W. Layman, Troutville, Va.—Frankie Showalter, Troutville, Va., Nov. 11.

Valley Bethel.—Bro. Jacob D. Zigler, of the Elk Run congregation, came to us Sept. 21, and remained until Oct. 6, preaching fifteen inspiring sermons. Seven were baptized and two await the rite. We met in church council Oct. 2, with a good attendance. A minister and three deacons were elected to office. The deacons chosen were Brethren Clay Waggy, Marcellus C. Carpenter and Eutis W. Buesard. The latter was elected to the ministry. Our love feast was held Oct. 4, with a large number present.—Raymond E. Bussard, Bolar, Va., Nov. 11.

Evangelism and Revivals

The winter months have long been those in which our churches, especially those in the country, have had their revival services. Of course, in this the first year of the Forward Movement, your church is planning some special efforts along this line. Unless each church makes extra efforts we fear that the evangelistic goal of 15,000 will not be reached. The first need toward that end is a spirit of prayer. We list here some books very helpful on that line.

MEANING OF PRAYER, THE, ... 75c
Harry Emerson Fosdick.
A vigorous and impressive treatment of prayer as communion with God, as petition for the things we need and as the expression of dominant desire. The discussion of obstacles to effective prayer is also very enlightening. Art leather.

MINISTRY OF INTERCESSION, ... $1.00
Rev. Andrew Murray.
A companion volume to "With Christ in the School of Prayer." This series of studies puts especial emphasis on the need of more prayer. A well-written, deeply spiritual and wonderfully helpful book.

PRACTICE OF PRAYER, THE, ... 75c
Rev. G. Campbell Morgan.
The aim of this book is purely practical. "Teach us to pray" is taken to mean not teach us how, but teach us the habit of prayer. This work is an effort to revive the family prayer circle. 126 pages. Cloth.

DYNAMIC OF ALL PRAYER, ... $1.00
G. Granger Fleming.
A new and vital statement of the importance of prayer indicating its true place and power in the great redemptive plan of God. Heartily commended by Rev. Andrew Murray, author of the "With Christ" series.

GETTING THINGS FROM GOD, ... Paper, 35c; Cloth, $1.00
Charles A. Blanchard, D. D.
A very thoughtful and practical book for the individual or for the study of larger Christian group. A simple and interesting treatment of the vital subject of prayer.

PERSONAL EVANGELISM

H. Clay Trumbull, former editor of the Sunday School Times, expressed the opinion that many more people were won to Christ through the personal interview than through the power of the pulpit. The following books will assist the beginner in this line and strengthen those who have done this in the past.

SPIRIT'S SWORD, THE, ... Cloth, 25c; Keratol Morocco, 35c
Evangelist J. R. Beveridge.
A practical little book giving you in convenient shape all of the texts most suitable to use in different phases of personal work. The texts are so arranged that they answer the excuses commonly given by the unconverted as well as meeting the special difficulties of those desiring to find the Christ.

HOW TO BRING MEN TO CHRIST, ... 75c
R. A. Torrey, D. D.
A clear and forceful exposition of the methods of soul-winning by a minister who has been singularly successful as an evangelist, preacher and teacher. Should be in the hands of every one interested in saving men.

BOOK OF POINTS FOR CHRISTIANS AND PERSONAL WORKERS, ... Cloth, 25c; Keratol Morocco, 35c
Geo. W. Noble.
This little book answers the objections usually offered by the unconverted, simplifies Bible doctrine, outlines Scripture readings and teachings and gives a large collection of personal experience testimonies for use on all occasions. It is text-pocket size, contains 128 pages, with a full index to the contents. It is just the kind of help a busy Christian Worker needs.

HUMAN ELEMENT IN THE MAKING OF A CHRISTIAN, ... $1.25
Bertha Conde.
A series of studies in all forms of personal work aiming at the development of the personal element in service. It is adapted for use in study classes, prayer meetings and for the private study of all interested in personal evangelism.

EVERY CHURCH ITS OWN EVANGELIST, ... 50c
Loren M. Edwards.
A good many pastors, together with their churches, would be saved the annual and sometimes frantic "S. O. S." calls for an evangelist if they would read this book. The history recent books. It contains a record of the experience of a pastor who proceeded in his work upon the hypothesis that every church is its own evangelist. All the forces of the church were properly coordinated and the pastor was himself leader and evangelist. Experience under the most varied conditions, —with rural, suburban and city churches,—proved that the hypothesis was in reality a law. Every church may and ought to be its own evangelist. Get the book that will tell you how it is done.

TAKING MEN ALIVE, ... 60c
Charles G. Trumbull.
The principles underlying personal work illustrated by incidents from the life of his father. Cloth.

THE MINISTER'S PART

Many of the books listed above will be of interest to ministers in the general direction of their work. The following bear more particularly on the pulpit work.

ONE HUNDRED REVIVAL SERMONS AND OUTLINES, $2.00
Frederick Barton.
The compiler's purpose is to place in the hands of ministers a series of great examples from the early fathers down to the greatest living evangelist of our own day. The strain of a season of revival services makes a large drain on a minister's resources. This book is intended to lessen that strain and enable the minister to be fresh, interesting and commanding on each occasion. 455 pages. Cloth.

EVANGELISTIC SERMONS IN OUTLINE, ... $1.00
C. Perron.

REVIVAL LECTURES, ... $1.00

LECTURES TO PROFESSING CHRISTIANS, ... 1.00

GOSPEL THEMES, ... 1.00
Tho three above are by Charles G. Finney, the noted evangelist of the last century.

THE PERSONAL TOUCH, ... $1.00

PRESENT DAY EVANGELISM, ... 1.00
J. Wilbur Chapman is author of the two above.

SONG BOOKS

Be sure to have enough books so every one may share in the singing.

Revival Songs and Best Hymns is 64 pages from Kingdom Songs No. 2. It contains 137 songs and hymns, numbered to correspond with K. S. No. 2 so that they may be used to supplement your supply of these books. Durably bound in paper with reinforced back. Prices: Each, 15c; 30 for $3.75, postpaid; per hundred, $10.00, carriage extra.

Look Through the Open Door

THE church at Philadelphia still had "a little power" when the Seer of Patmos wrote about the open door which was set before her. Was that why he made mention of the door? Did he want the church to see it and pass through it?

She did not have much power but she had some, enough to walk through the door at least and take a look at what was on the other side. Perhaps the seer knew how the church could get more power and thought that a peep through that door might help her to want some more.

Paul had a great deal of experience with open doors. He always looked through them and usually went through them. Once at Troas his heart was so burdened that he could not go through the door, but the difficulty soon passed away. At Ephesus "a great door and effectual" was opened to him and while there were "many adversaries" that fact did not keep him from entering the door.

Had you noticed how wide a door is standing open before the church just now? "The world is fluid. The church looks into such vistas of service and victory as she has not seen since the morning stars sang together. Countless millions of hands—empty, wounded, bleeding hands—are stretched out to her for help. Millions of voices cry to her from up and down the shores of earth: 'We have lost our way, and the night is dark! We hunger! We thirst! We are naked and cold! O, what is truth? Take us back to our Father! Give us God!'"

Had you seen that open door? Hadn't you better take a peep through it? Or are you afraid you might want to go on through?

A Picture of a Happy People

IT is in the last four verses of the one hundred and forty-fourth psalm. It is an old picture, but isn't it fine? Look at it again.

Note the elements of it: Vigorous sons and winsome daughters, well-filled garners and fields, and freedom from molestation by enemies. A healthy family life, plenty and peace—those are the features. A nation of happy and prosperous homes—what a beautiful picture!

America could have a worse ideal than that. Why shouldn't we adopt it, settle down and be content?

Eating the Flesh and Drinking the Blood of Christ

"Thy words were found, and I did eat them; and thy word was unto me the joy and rejoicing of mine heart; for I am called by thy name, O Lord God of hosts" (Jer. 15: 16).

"I am the living bread which came down from heaven: if any man eat of this bread, he shall live forever: and the bread that I will give is my flesh, which I will give for the life of the world. . . . . Then Jesus said unto them, Verily, verily, I say unto you, Except ye eat the flesh of the Son of man, and drink his blood, ye have no life in you" (John 6: 51, 53).

"And the Word was made flesh, and dwelt among us, (and we beheld his glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father,) full of grace and truth" (John 1: 14).

JEREMIAH, the great prophet of God, not only found the words of Jehovah, but he ate them. He not only ate them, but digested and assimilated them, and made them a part of his life, and the greater part at that. The words of the Lord became his spiritual bone and muscle, and also the joy and rejoicing of his heart, and entitled him to be called "by the name of Jehovah." They made him a strong and a great prophet of the Lord God of hosts. If we would bear the name of Christ and have spiritual life in us, we must eat the flesh and drink the blood of Jesus Christ.

When Jesus said: "Except ye eat my flesh and drink my blood, ye have no life in you," he had in mind the Word of God, made flesh and blood in his person. This flesh and blood contains all the elements of the spiritual life of every true follower of Christ. One may read the Word and yet not eat and digest the Bread of Life and make it a part of the inner and outer spiritual life. One may read the Word made flesh, and not drink the blood of Christ, and make it manifest in the spiritual life. We must eat, drink, digest and assimilate, and thus make the Word the very bone and muscle of our spiritual life. The Word will thus become the joy and rejoicing of our hearts.

If you go into a restaurant to get a good meal, and the waiter hands you a bill of fare on which are named the articles of food, you may order, eat and satisfy your hunger. Will the reading of the menu satisfy your appetite? No! Not until you have ordered the food, and have eaten, digested and made it a part of your body, do you gain the needed strength. So you may read the Word of God made flesh, but unless you eat it and make it a part of your inner and outer life, you will not gain spiritual strength, and be able to live the Christ-life. You can not quench your thirst by looking at a fountain of pure, life-giving water. You must get down and drink, if you would get the needed benefit. If you would have eternal life, you must drink of Christ's fountain—drink and drink! Then you will never thirst again. So, if you would enjoy spiritual life, you must eat the flesh and drink the blood of Christ. If you do this, you will grow into spiritual manhood in Christ Jesus. You will have spiritual strength and the great joy of being called by the name of Christ.

When one eats the flesh and drinks the blood of Christ, he will be a man of Christ, inside and out, through and through, and will obey from the heart that form of doctrine to which he has been delivered, and he will make that form manifest in all his life. In action, in speech, in every business relation, in his personal appearance and in every possible way he will show that he is a Christ-man and not a man of the world. The body will not be adorned with gold or costly or immodest apparel, but he will appear, in every way, as one who professes and is, a real follower of Christ.

Once we read of a foreigner who did not have a time-piece in his possession. The seller of clocks induced him to buy one and assured him it would give him the correct time of day. The clock was purchased, and given a prominent place in the house of the buyer. After several months he discovered that his clock was an hour slower than that of his neighbor. The hands did not point out the correct time. The man took the hands off the face of the clock and carried them to the clockman and said: "These hands do not point out the right time. I want you to fix them." What, think you, the clockmaker said to his customer? "You bring the clock to me and I will get at the inside, regulate it and then the hands will tell the correct time." Eat the flesh and drink the blood of Christ, and take them into your heart and life, and the outside will indicate what you have in your heart.

The Christian must be right, inside and out. His outer life will indicate that he has been with Christ and learned of him. To have the form of Christianity only, on the outside, is the merest hypocrisy. Get the heart right and the outside will also get right. The one who eats, drinks and digests the flesh and blood of Christ, and takes it into his soul-life, will be known as a man of God—a man who becomes the light of the world.

In his excellent book, "God's Means of Grace," the gifted writer says: "In dress the Christian should conform to the spirit of Christ within, rather than to the fashions of the world without. Paris makes the fashions, and Christian women of the world bow down with the rest and say: 'We must be in style. It is better to be out of the world than out of style,' and the Lord's money is poured out at the feet of the goddess of fashion. It is all wrong. It is silly as well as sinful. If Christians would renounce the world, as they profess to do, they could set the style instead of following it, and would be all the more beautiful because clothed in garments that betoken modesty and humility, and consecration to the Lord Jesus."

The author of the foregoing quotation is a brother of the Progressive Church and served for some time as Editor of their church paper. The writer most heartily commends his words as scriptural, and in line with the Christian life.

Let each one of us, who profess to follow Christ, eat and drink his blessed Word of Truth, make it, in the fullest and deepest sense, the form of doctrine to which we have been delivered, and obey it from the heart.

Isn't It Worth a Worthy Walk?

"To the end that" denotes purpose. Paul had been reminding the Thessalonians of his labor among them when he brought the Gospel to them, how gentle and fatherly he had been, how unselfishly he had worked night and day. Then he told them what it was all for: "To the end that ye should walk worthily of God, who calleth you into his own kingdom and glory."

You will look at those words and think and pray about them a good while before the full import of them dawns upon you. To "walk worthily of God"! Who can comprehend the meaning of that? What is it to walk worthily of God? What kind of walk can that be?

Of such a God! A God "who calleth you into his own kingdom and glory"! Makes you live in the sort of world he lives in! Makes you belong to him! One of his very own! To share his glory!

Oh, do you get it, reader? Will you not try a little harder to "walk worthily"?

The Mystery

We know not where the journey ends,
Nor what our mission here on earth;
The fates provide our foes and friends,
The days are filled with grief or mirth,
Wise men have sought to solve the plan
Which holds and keeps us all in bound
And shapes the destiny of man,
But none the key has found.

No gray philosopher or sage
Can truly tell what waits in store
Or guess the purpose of the age;
They only know what's gone before.
Fools follow fathers wise, and then
Great souls are nurtured in the slums
And none can say what gift for men
With every little baby comes.

We choose the tasks we'd like to do,
And shape our lives around a whim;
We train the boy, as if we knew
Just what God had in mind for him,
And joy or misery depend
On this blind choice in every case,
But none can know until the end
That he is in his proper place.

How many men have gone astray?
How many men have missed the mark
And blindly groped along the way,
Living completely in the dark
Because they never found the toil
Which God had sent them here to do?
Good seed flung on a barren soil,
Wasted because it never grew.

Who knows but what the failure, sad,
In different circumstances here
Or changed a trifle would have had
His course to fame and victory clear?
And since no man can truly say
What makes or mars our little lives
We should rejoice from day to day
That so much that is good survives.

Doctrinal Preaching in the South

BY J. H. MOORE

THE churches of the South are far from being slack in the teaching of their respective doctrines. They not only encourage writing in support of their fundamentals, but they enjoy preaching on these different subjects of interest. We do not hear of any of the members telling their ministers to touch lightly on doctrine, for fear of offending some of their good neighbors. They would be glad to have their good neighbors believe as they do, and if a few well-delivered doctrinal discourses will bring about the desired results, so much the better, they think.

A talk against dogma by some one who is loose on doctrine, does not disturb them in the least. They know that dogma is "an established principle, tenet, or doctrine" of a church or "a doctrine stated in a formal manner, and received by the church as authority." They know that all churches have their dogmas, and that as a rule all working members stand up for the respective tenets of the church to which they belong. The play on a theological name of an act cuts no figure with them. They believe in a certain act, call it what you may—tenet, doctrine, principle, or dogma. It is all the same with them. It is the doctrine of their church, and what is worth believing is worth preaching and defending.

The leading denominations of the South are the Baptists and the Methodists. The latter being still slightly divided,—the Methodist Episcopal Church North, and Methodist Episcopal Church South,—places them at some disadvantage. What they may lack in numbers is fully made up in organization and energy. The Catholics probably come next in influence, wealth and numbers. We also have the Disciples, Lutherans, Presbyterians, and so on, to the end of the list. The assortment for Florida is quite complete. The Salvation Army, Christian Science, Pentecost people, the Holiness people, and the rest of them, are all here—be their numbers large or small. This genial winter clime is very attractive for some of the eccentric preachers, and would-be preachers, who go to the South to escape the cold months of the North. As for the colored people, probably nine-tenths of those making a religious profession, belong to the Baptists or the Methodists. Like the whites, they are sticklers for the doctrines of their respective churches, and some of them are not so slow in defending the faith they have accepted.

While the different denominations are courteous, and often affiliate, still there is no disposition to compromise on doctrine. They have their fixed tenets and see to it that they are maintained. This paves the way for considerable doctrinal preaching, the purpose being to keep their members fully indoctrinated.

While in Lake County a few years ago, we listened to a forceful address by the presiding elder of the Methodist church, in which he set forth the doctrine of his church regarding household baptism, and especially the importance of parents having their children baptized. The fact that there was, in his audience, a preacher who did not believe in infant baptism, cut no figure with him. He preached his sermon and reserved the usual courtesy until after the benediction.

In Tampa, the leading city for this part of the State, the Baptists and Methodists are strong and can afford pastors of ability and influence. Recently the Baptist minister delivered several strong doctrinal sermons, which appeared in the morning daily. In these discourses he set forth the origin, claim and doctrine of the Baptist church on this continent. These sermons were well prepared and at times instructive.

After the appearance of the sermons on believers' baptism, in opposition to infant baptism, and immersion as the only New Testament mode of baptism, the Methodist pastor came forward with his plea regarding infant baptism and the mode of baptism. His discourses showed considerable research and preparation. He quoted quite freely from books dealing with the questions in hand, and, considering the general weakness of his cause, he put up a very creditable defense. Like the Baptist minister, he proposed to keep his people informed regarding the well-understood doctrine of the Methodist Episcopal church.

This policy may be considered practically true of all the churches in the South. They let the people know what they believe, and keep their members informed on doctrine. Even the smaller denominations let it be known what they believe, and are quite industrious in distributing literature that sets forth their belief. Their papers manifest a zeal for doctrine fully worthy of the best for which they stand. Respecting their doctrine, the papers give no uncertain sound. You never find Baptist doctrine in a Methodist paper, nor do you see Methodist principles set forth and defended in a Baptist paper. Here is a policy certainly commendable in church journalism.

Furthermore, the churches that are keeping their doctrine to the front, are the ones that are increasing in membership and influence. A Christianity that cuts any figure in the religious world stands for some clearly-defined principles, and the keeping of these principles to the front, and well clothed in the garb of true righteousness, has an influence that can be reached in no other way. The religious bodies that propose to keep their respective doctrines in the background, will soon be found fighting a losing game.

Take it the United States over, and the churches that are keeping their members well indoctrinated are, by all odds, the growing churches. They have a well-defined faith and practice, and know for what they are working. They have an aim, and keep themselves steady by earnestly contending for the principles for which they stand. Considering their age, the Disciples are said to have multiplied faster than any church on the continent, and they do more doctrinal preaching than half of all the rest put together. Their papers, books and tracts fairly bristle with doctrine.

The pastor of a congregation, who refuses to preach doctrine, or to have doctrinal sermons preached to his people, saying that doctrinal preaching is going out of date, is committing church suicide. While he remains silent on the doctrines of his church, others, like the Mormons, Adventists, Russellites, Christian Scientists, and some of the larger denominations, are preaching their respective doctrines all around him. They are filling the minds of his own people with other doctrines, and leading away those that should be members of his own flock.

The Church of the Brethren can adopt no more effectual way of putting herself wholly out of commission than by eliminating the doctrine held by the Brethren from her pulpits, her papers, tracts and Sunday-school literature. We have never had too much doctrinal preaching and writing. Possibly most of those who have made a specialty of doctrinal subjects have not shown the ability and skill that should have characterized such efforts. There has often been bluntness and even weakness, where there should have been polish and strength. But now, with our schools, we ought to be able to produce a body of preachers noted for their skill in setting forth our doctrine in the most convincing manner. Over the religious world there is coming a wave of conviction—men holding to settled views—and our ministers, every one of them, ought to be prepared to face the masses with claims as well defined as the cardinal points of the compass, and as well founded as the Rock of Ages.

The Real Value of Dreams

BY J. M. BLOUGH

THERE are dreams and dreams—pleasant dreams and unpleasant dreams; dreams by the old and dreams by the young. Most people dream sometimes; many dream every night. Most dreams are forgotten with the morning; a few dreams are remembered—some even for years. Is there any meaning to all these present-day dreams, and what is their value?

There are some people who claim a prophetic value for certain of their dreams. Now we know that in olden times God chose to speak to men in dreams, and we would not say that he does not now, in rare instances. But we must beware of interpreting dreams prophetically, for there is danger of error, and we may be deceived. Then we have also heard of dreams in which certain things have been made known, or forgotten things again brought into memory and consciousness. However, this kind of dreams is limited, and we do not hear of much value coming from such dreams.

Then there is another class of dreams—the exceptional kind, which you find published in papers. These dreams are definite and make an impression which is lasting. Their value lies in the teaching or warning which the dreamers get from them. Some have been led from careless, indifferent lives to consecrated Christian lives, and some have been converted through them. Praise the Lord for these helpful dreams! But such dreams are comparatively few.

Now, how about all the rest of our dreams? Do they simply come to be forgotten without concern? To my mind they all have a distinct value along one particular line if we but take a few moments in the morning to analyze them. Listen! Dreams are a mirror, in which the dreamer may see himself as he is. Dreams are the product of the dreamer. They come from within, though occasioned by outside things. They spring from the inner consciousness, the inner life. That is, the dream represents the dreamer and has a definite connection with, and relation to, his real self, even as his words and thoughts and deeds.

Do you wish to know if you are proud or humble? Look at yourself as you appear in your dreams. Watch the role which you play as chief actor in your dreams. What are the weak places in your life? Watch for them in your dreams. What is your real attitude to your friends and neighbors and fellow-workers? Note your feelings, as they appear in your dreams. See how you treat them. Are you kind to them? Do you really love them? Have you ambitions and strong desires? They will show themselves in your dreams, and if they are improper you will know what to do. Are your dreams bad? Then watch your eyes, imaginations and associates, for the mind is being filled with evil. Is there any religion in your dreams? Notice your feeling toward sacred things. Do your dreams make you appear as a hypocrite? Then take warning. In short, before you forget your dreams study your own words and deeds and thoughts and feelings, and learn to know yourself; then make the necessary adjustments in your life.

But some one may object that dreams are too fantastic, too unreal and unreasonable to be of value. True, the mind is not under restraint, and so runs to impossible lengths in our dreams; nevertheless, dreams show our tendencies, for they have their source in ourselves and not in somebody else. Are we not glad that people do not know our dreams? We would be ashamed of them sometimes. Well, does this not prove that we realize that, somehow or other, we are responsible for our dreams? The very fact that they are OUR dreams, proves it. Then, since they are ours, let us study them for our own benefit and improve our lives day by day.

The Simple Solution

BY JOHN W. WAYLAND

NEVER, in our history, have more big problems been pressing for solution than at the present day; and never has the solution for each great problem been simpler than it is right now. The difficulty is not in the problem, it is not in the solution; it is in the ignorance and short-sightedness of human nature. It is in the unwillingness of the people most concerned to do the thing that is most necessary. The solution is so simple that it is overlooked in the mad fancy that seeks afar, as this or that strange voice shouts: "Lo here!" "Lo there!"

It is the old story, told by a wise man centuries ago: "Wisdom is before him that hath understanding, but the eyes of a fool are in the ends of the earth."

What is the solution of the high cost of living problem?

It may be stated in two words: Economy and work. Beyond a doubt what is so much complained of, nowadays, as the high cost of living is rather the cost of high living. Extravagance is the proper term to apply to it. For example, it is said that a considerable number of the dissatisfied strikers are riding to their meeting places of idleness in high-priced automobiles. Mechanics and other wage-earners, who used to receive two or three dollars a day and get along very well in cotton shirts, costing a dollar or two each, must now, since they receive six or eight dollars a day, be clothed in silk shirts that cost from seven to ten dollars each. In short, since wages have gone up and they are earning more money than they ever saw before, their heads have been turned, and they are wasting their substance in riotous living.

It was to just such people that Isaiah was sent over two thousand years ago, crying: "Wherefore do ye spend money for that which is not bread? and your labor for that which satisfieth not?"

We thought that if there was one lesson from the war plainer than another it was the lesson of thrift; but it seems that we are in danger of forgetting it.

So much for economy. What about work?

Work meaos not merely sticking to a job and earning one's wages. It means also working to some profit —doing something that ought to be done. At present too many people are in the towns and cities, where they are not needed, and too few are in the country, where they are needed. In other words, the consumers are getting too numerous, in proportion to the producers. If, by some miracle, we could shift the balance over night, the cost of living would drop tomorrow. That is to say, if we could, by any means, considerably increase the number of farmers, stock-raisers, and fruit-growers, and, at the same time, considerably decrease the number of people who live on things sold (and delivered) by groceries, but who produce none of those things, no trust and no government on earth could keep prices from falling. And, furthermore, until we do increase production very considerably; no power on earth can keep prices down.

It is true that land is not as plentiful or as cheap as it was years ago, but it still is true that almost any one who wishes to do so can own land, or at least work on land. The result, as to price of food, will be the same. As production increases, living for all will be easier.

One of the great reasons, years ago, for leaving Europe and coming to America was the fact that here any man might become a landlord. The people of that generation were, many of them, wiser than the people of today. Many of them had to start here as day laborers on farms; but many of them ended as owners of farms. The same thing is possible today; but it is so simple and commonplace that hardly anybody is willing to do it. The notion of General Naaman is too prevalent—some great, some spectacular thing is sought for; and the simple, sane, sure way is neglected.

But we shall have to come to it, sooner or later. Nothing is surer than that. The sooner the better, the longer the worse.

What is the solution of all the troubles between capital and labor?

The Golden Rule. This will solve the problems; nothing else will.

If we like other terms better we may say, a square deal.

But a square deal is square on both sides. A block of wood may be square on one side and otherwise on the other; but a deal can not be square at all, unless it is square on both sides. As long as capital is selfish and cheats labor, the problem can not be solved. As long as labor is selfish and cheats capital, both sides will suffer loss. It is not anarchy or socialism or the single tax or government ownership that we need. It is a generous spirit on both sides and efficient coöperation. The employer should pay a fair wage and share excessive profits. The worker should be willing to do a fair day's work and to promote the interests of the business.

The best worker is a loyal worker. There is one thing that comes ahead of a fair wage—it is a fair day's work. If labor succeeds in killing capital, it will simply find that it has killed the goose that lays the golden egg. The chances are that the laborers, in the long run, will find that the capitalist is a better friend than the professional agitator. Capital must learn that the laborer is not a machine, but a human being. Both will see, if they try it together, that the Golden Rule will make them friends and raise profits all around to a maximum.

The initiative, in adopting the Golden Rule, may best be taken by the capitalists. They are in a position to give it character and to secure a prompt acceptance of it. One of the most encouraging facts, in our recent industrial history, is that a number of employers have actually adopted the Golden Rule in dealing with their employés, and it has worked. It is bound to work if both sides are willing to let it work. And it has proved itself to be not only good ethics, but also good business.

And this is, after all, the simple lesson of it all: Good business must follow good ethics. Right and justice present the simple, sufficient solution. Nothing else will do.

What is the solution of the great international problems?

This same Golden Rule. Whenever each nation—that is to say, each senator, each prime minister, each delegate to a general or a particular conference—is willing to give as well as get a square deal, and is willing to trust other men when they declare the same willingness, then, and not till then, can the world have peace.

Yes, peace, founded on justice and right, is possible a little sooner, else it were not possible at all. We can never expect every man, in a position of power, to be willing to accept the Golden Rule. That is not necessary. When a majority are willing to do it, the great boon sought is possible. No law, however good, however just, is ever approved by every individual. It does not have to be—on earth. If a majority (the larger the majority the better) approve it and adopt it and enforce it, the rest then must accept it. And they too will profit by it.

Are not these simple solutions? For the high cost of living, economy and work—thrift and productive labor; for industrial war, a more generous attitude on both sides—coöperation and a square deal; for international rivalries and antagonisms, the same Golden Rule—a willingness to do right as well as to get rights: this in the biggest possible majority; and then a strong arm of the law for law-breakers.

A few law-breakers may always be counted on, just as the great majority of people may be counted on to do right if they have a fair chance.

Better Christians

Studies of the Bible by Rev. K. Lewis Jonsson
Translated by Bro. J. F. Graybill

FOURTH INSTALLMENT

3. The Third Condition to Holiness, Naturally Is Application of the Means of Grace.

The glorified Savior desires to come into close communion with his saints, and this can only be done by the means of grace. Therefore it is of great importance that the Christian make every effort to get into close communion with the Lord by these means. The Christian who has severed this blessed connection is like the soldier in the battle-line, who has been cut off from his regimental division. He is doomed to defeat.

Acts 2: 42 tells us about the first Christians at Jerusalem: "And they continued stedfastly in the apostles' teaching and fellowship, and in breaking of bread, and in prayers." This was the source of their strength. Let us consider some of the different means of grace and their blessed influence upon those who exercise in them.

How do you use your Bible? You have, undoubtedly, your daily quiet hour—an hour when you enter into your secret closet, to be alone with your God and your Bible. This is the very essence of the Christian life. "Wherewith shall a young man cleanse his way?" is a question asked by the Psalmist in Psa. 119: 9. He answers the question in verse 11: "Thy word have I laid up in my heart, that I might not sin against thee." The Word of God is like a seed—so long as it remains in the farmer's bin it will not produce anything. But when it is placed in the earth, it springs up and bears fruit.

It was the most glorious of all my experiences, during my travels in Germany, to see how extensively the Bible was read by the soldiers, and how its message was a reality in the heart and on the lips of these men. I accompanied a minister, as he made his rounds, visiting the wounded in Berlin. He exchanged a few words about the Bible with nearly every one of them. He asked a young soldier: "Have you learned something about God while in battle? Have you learned Psa. 103: 'Bless the Lord, O my soul'?" Lying on his bed, the young man replied by finishing the quotation: "And forget not all his benefits."

Stopping by the bedside of a young man who had lost both eyes, the minister asked: "Do you see any rays of light in your condition?" The blind man answered reverently, and with a smile on his countenance: "When I sit in darkness, the Lord shall be a light unto me." This is a little message found in Micah 7: 8.

It is said that the Bible is the Book of books which follows the soldiers to the front. Since the time of Luther and the Reformation, the Bible has not found so large a place in the hands and hearts of mankind as during the great European War. And the more we become Bible Christians, the better Christians we shall be.

What use do you make of prayer? The Word of God and prayer go hand in hand. Certainly, you should have your daily hour of prayer. But do you seek the grace of God's Spirit, in order constantly to look unto the Lord for guidance in all your daily experiences?

How do you apply the holy communion? It is utterly surprising to notice how many claim to be followers of the Blessed Lord Jesus, without availing themselves of that blessed means of grace—the communion. Many, perhaps, are ignorant of the special blessing and importance of the communion. By it we become partakers of Christ's divine nature. His body and blood form the connecting link.

When one partakes of the holy communion, he should open wide the door of his soul. This can only be done by a thorough examination of one's own life and an honest confession of our sins. Do you want to be free from all your sins? Do you want to consecrate your all to him? If you do, Christ is ready to cleanse you, and to purify all with his love. Have you not, time and again, felt a sweet peace in your soul after participating in the communion? And should we not, then, anxiously desire this blessing?

Mutual fellowship with the saints of God. In Acts 2: 42 this is mentioned as a characteristic of the early Christian church. It is of importance in the development of holiness. "For where two or three are gathered together in my name, there am I in the midst of them" (Matt. 18: 20).

Let us freely exercise in the means of grace above referred to. Do not allow the adversary of souls to ensnare you by robbing you of these blessed means of contact between you and your God.

There are many lean, sickly and dying Christians, who suffer because they fail to lay hold upon these means of development in the Christian life, but there are also those who, while frequently participating in these means, do not assimilate what they receive thereby. They do not work out their part in this great work by an active service of love, where the Lord has placed them in life. There is grave danger of spiritual starvation, because of neglect to exercise in these means of grace, but there is danger also if we do not properly apply the help we receive thereby.

4. As the Fourth Condition to Holiness We Mention Trust in God's Holy Spirit, That He May Make Better Christians of Us.

Paul writes in Philpp. 1: 6: "Being confident of this very thing, that he who began a good work in you will perfect it until the day of Jesus Christ." This is especially encouraging. Let us never cease to believe this great truth, that the Spirit of God can make better Christians of us. Let us fervently unite our voices with the apostle in saying: "I count not myself yet to have laid hold; but one thing I do, forgetting the things which are bebind, and stretching forward to the things which are before, I press on toward the goal unto the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus" (Philpp. 3: 13, 14).

We find a number of characters in the Bible, through whose biography we learn what the Spirit of God can accomplish in the one who commits himself unto the Spirit's leading.

Moses was, by nature, a quick-tempered man. You remember the occasion when, in his youth, he saw an Egyptian mistreat one of his brethren. He quickly slew the Egyptian and buried him in the sand. But later on there was a change, as we notice in Num. 12: 3: "Now the man Moses was very meek, above all the men that were upon the face of the earth." Moses surely made progress. How was it possible? Here is the secret: He entered into the spirit of meekness, and this was his salvation. His wilderness experiences were to him a school of great value. In this the Spirit of God was the Teacher, and this solved the problem.

By nature the Apostle Paul was conscious of his own importance. See him on his way to Damascus to persecute the Christians there! His heart was as a flint. Could the Lord use this kind of a man? Well, he became so humble that we hardly recognize him as the same man later on in life.

When Paul had served his Lord and Master for about twenty years, he testified of himself in the following: "I am the least of the apostles, that am not meet to be called an apostle" (1 Cor. 15: 5). In his own estimation he takes the least and most insignificant place in the apostolic succession. Five years later he proclaims himself as the chief of sinners (1 Tim. 1: 15). Paul was so humble that he could well speak about his humility, and that in a way not to be offensive. This is more than most Christians can do.

He touches upon this, in connection with his farewell address to the Ephesian elders: "Ye yourselves know, from the first day that I set my foot in Asia, after what manner I was with you all the time, serving the Lord with all lowliness of mind, and with tears, and with trials which befell me by the plots of the Jews" (Acts 20: 18, 19). Notice that no one dared to interrupt him and say: "Now you are praising yourself, Paul." No, it caused tears to flow. No wonder his brethren embraced him and kissed him. They knew that he spoke the simple truth, concerning his humility, to the honor and glory of God.

What the Spirit of God could accomplish in this man, he also can accomplish in you and all who will commit themselves unto God as Paul did. He was one of the same flesh and blood that we are. Rest assured that the Spirit of God can make better Christians of us.

Should you fail, do not become discouraged. At once, go to the Savior, who knows all about your imperfection and weakness, confess your sin, and repent thoroughly. Ask him to cleanse you in his own precious blood. Put your confidence in him, that he who has begun a good work in you, will be able to accomplish it. The difference between a pig and a lamb is, that when both fall into a ditch, the pig wallows in it, while the lamb bleats until some one rescues it. A Christian can not remain in any sin—he must depart therefrom. After he is washed in the blood of the Lamb, the Spirit of God continues his work of consecration and holiness.

What degree of holiness is a Christian able to attain to in this life? Allow me to give two Biblical answers to this question: (1) A Christian can never attain to so high a degree of holiness, that he is past the fifth petition of the Lord's Prayer: "Forgive us our trespasses." (2) A Christian can always advance farther than he has yet gone in holiness. He can constantly go forward, ever pressing on toward the heavenly prize of victory through Christ Jesus our Lord.

There once stood, on the shore of a lake, a birch tree that put forth every effort to grow tall, to get nearer the clouds. But every time it saw its shadow in the water, it considered itself as dwindling. It felt sad over its disappointment. So one day a bird, away up in the top of the tree, revealed by its song, this secret: "The tree, seeing its shadow in the water, was constantly going down still deeper, when, as a matter of fact, there was sufficient evidence that its top was drawing nearer its goal—the clouds."

To the humble God giveth grace. The empty vessel he can fill. "Be ye filled with the Spirit." Then you will never work to glorify the creature, but the Creator and Son of God, for he is in us, and through us, may be manifested to all.

The Night

BY D. O. THOMAS

THE wind had veered from the east to the southeast—an indication of abundant rain. Sleet had begun to fall and there seemed a storm brewing. We did not see the sun go down. The darkness gathered slowly and silently. The fowls fixed themselves upon their perches, and everything assumed a solemnity in keeping with the closing of the day.

What a solemn thing it is to see the darkness gather! What questions of security arise! Might not this old earth roll off into some other part of the heavens, in which we would never get a glimpse of the great orb of day? Or might the sun, that has been illuminating this earth these millions of years, suddenly flicker and die out? Or, in case this mundane sphere would stop its movements, would we always be on the dark side? So the questions might go on and on—one knows not how long.

There are questions not only of the material world, but also of our own being. What if, when in slumber, we should never wake up? This atmosphere might possibly cease to support life. This earth might lose its power to draw bodies to it, and we might go floating into the air. Our houses, our cattle, our gold and every loose thing would then be whirled about in the air.

One wonders if it was not near the close of the day when the prodigal "came to himself." When the daylight is here, so many things attract that one does not think much of really vital things, but when the night comes, then, face to face with one's self, one is made to think how the wise conduct of life might influence others.

Night is not the best time for one to wander about. That is in the normal sense. Even animals that prowl around have a bad reputation. The goods of the merchant are in danger of theft during the night. Sober men walk in the day when the light shines. The drunken revelers abound during the night. The tears of the orphan and the wail of the widow are so often noticed in the night. Many evil deeds are done during the night, for these men love the dark.

Night is the symbol of death, as the day is the symbol of life. When the breezes come up from the sea, and the sun dips its disk in the west, there steals over one great solemnity. The deepening evening shades remind us that our life, too, is going out. Weary from the labors of the day we seek our places of rest—the attitude of death. And our rest is not complete by simply lying down—slumber must come, the twin brother of death.

The quiet of evening is the time for prayer. To go through the valley of oblivion one needs a companion. On the dark ways one needs more help than when the light is shining.

Into childhood, man steps out of oblivion. The first years are very dim indeed. Anxious trials enable the child to walk and talk, until, finally, full power is imparted. Truly, God's hand has led, and how tenderly! Though human affection may fail, the Lord is ever near.

The welcome of children at the door of the home, in the evening, is one of the most beautiful pictures of life. When burdened with care and the weight of labor, it is refreshing to hear the cheering voices of those we love, when entering the portals of the place we call home. It makes life worth living. Love lightens our cares! No true father can look upon a lovely scene like this and not thank heaven. How can he pass by the privilege of giving them the knowledge of the same great God? As the light of day disappears, gather the children around the home altar and spend a season in sincere devotion. It is the dying day; it is the time for prayer.

The Loving Father nurtures those who are born of the Spirit. He quietly helps when he can, taking no honor unto himself. He watches over us, guiding and directing. He helps us over the rough places of life, if we are but willing. In the evening, when the sun is rapidly going down, he brings peace—a peace beyond comprehension. Right then we are made conscious of the glory of heaven above the brightness of the sun. It is the gleam of a new morning, better than earth knows.

During the calm of night, seemingly all the world has gone to sleep. There is profound silence on plain and hillside. Nature moves with her most silent tread. How significantly it portrays to us the silence of death!

Taking all the year around, there is half day and half night. Some day, however, we will, if faithful, enter the happy abode where, the glory of God being the light, all darkness and sorrow will be forever banished.

Trying to Bridge the Chasm

The Church Wrestling with the Problem of a Christian Social Order

THE fact has long been recognized and deplored that the church of today is not in general touch with the masses. More than two-thirds of the people of the United States, for example, are not connected with any church; and yet the United States is recognized as the most Christian country in the world. Not only is there indifference to the church on the part of the masses, but to a considerable degree there is antagonism. Among the industrial classes particularly, there is a widespread feeling that the church has nothing in common with them—that it is an institution for the well-to-do, concerned chiefly with those from whom it draws its support.

However erroneous this view, it is widely effective in creating a chasm which the multitudes show little or no disposition to cross. The church, to be sure, is constantly making some sort of effort to bridge the gulf—extending a universal invitation indeed, and here and there a hand of helpfulness. It must be admitted, however, that its efforts to help are usually in the nature of charity, more or less undisguised. At stated intervals we take collections for the poor; we send Christmas baskets to the hungry once a year. We conduct social settlements with night schools and clubs and other helpful institutions for those to be aided thereby. We open day nurseries for the children of mothers who must toil for their daily bread. And we have made some superficial progress by this process in alleviating certain symptoms of a diseased social order. But our helpfulness has been too much of the handed-down sort, to win very widely the friendship of the masses. It has sometimes been so much of the nature of charity as to result in greater pauperization of those whom we were seeking to help.

But, with all these altruistic efforts, the church so far has done little more than treat symptoms. It has never yet made a serious effort to diagnose the diseases behind the symptoms, much less to treat them. Assuming, for example, that poverty is and must be the natural condition of a vast proportion of the human race, it has never thought seriously of doing more than assisting one here and there to climb to a higher plane in the social scale, and handing out an occasional meal and a bundle of old clothes to the vast multitudes who remain below the level of decent livelihood.

It is gratifying to observe, however, that during the last few years a new note is being sounded in the churches. Religious leaders are looking beneath the surface; they are studying diseases rather than symptoms; and they are earnestly seeking such an application of the principles of Christ as will not only alleviate the symptoms, but, as far as possible, eradicate the disease.

The Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America seems to have been the pioneer in this effort, with its Social Creed adopted in 1908, beginning with the demand " for equal rights and complete justice for all men in all stations of life " and ending with the declaration that the church must stand " for a new emphasis upon the application of Christian principles to the acquisition and use of property and for the most equitable division of the products of industry that can ultimately be devised."

At the Saratoga Conference in 1916 the Methodist Episcopal Church went on record as favoring the " demand for industrial demoeracy," concluding at last with these remarkable words: " Christianity moves up to higher ground. It requires the supremacy of the principle of coöperation in the industrial world. The church must, therefore, clearly teach the principle of the fullest possible coöperation, control, and ownership of industry and of the natural resources upon which industry depends. . . . Then will industry become a religious experience, developing mutual service and sacrifice, the interpretation in economic terms of the brotherhood of man and the Fatherhood of God."

Now comes the most striking pronouncement of all —the social program adopted a few days ago by the General Conference of Canadian Methodism. Studying the war's deeper meanings to society and looking forward to the new world order of which we have heard so much, this great religious body said: " The triumph of democracy, the demand of the educated workers for human conditions of life, the deep condemnation this war has passed on the competitive struggle, the revelation of the superior efficiency of national organization and coöperation, combine with the unfulfilled, though often forgotten, but undying ethics of Jesus to demand nothing less than a transference of the whole economic life from a basis of competition and profits to one of coöperation and service.

" The present economic system stands revealed as one of the roots of the war. The insane pride of Germany, her passion for world domination, found an occasion in the demand of colonies as markets and sources of raw materials—the imperative need of competing groups of industries carried on for profits.

" The war has made more clearly manifest the moral perils inherent in the system of production for profits. Condemnation of special individuals seems often unjust and always futile. The system rather than the individual calls for change."

There is little ground to doubt that the Canadian Methodists are clearly right in condemning the chief foundations of the present social order—competition and profits—as distinctly antisocial and unchristian and at the bottom of a large part of the ills that afflict society today. All reforms of the social order, which leave these inethical foundations intact, will prove futile in large degree. When the religious leaders of our land recognize that fact and boldly demand the substitution of an order that is brotherly and Christian—an order of coöperation and service—they may expect from the vast hosts of depressed and exploited humanity such gratitude and loyalty as no religious leader ever received, save Christ himself.

Revolution is to bc feared only as a result of the unreasoning opposition of blind conservatism or sordid self-interest. The irresistible forces of social evolution may be so long repressed that they break through at last with explosive violence, as was the case in Russia; but it need not be so in enlightened and free America. Only let the church take into its hands this great fight for elemental justice and human rights, and it will be won speedily, bloodlessly, and to the glory of God.—The Missionary Voice.

Temperance Reform in India

BY A. T. HOFFERT

Anklesvar.—" Temperance movements were again very little in evidence in the year under review. With the exception of Bombay, where temperance was preached on a more or less organized scale, signs of temperance propaganda were visible only in a few districts. . . . In Ahmedabad a temperance conference was held and lectures delivered by various speakers. In the Broach District an American missionary, who has considerable influence over the Bhils of Anklesvar and Hansot, inaugurated a temperance movement at the request of some of the Bhils, who wished to give up excessive drinking. He accordingly held meetings in various villages and his proposals met with wide approval among the Bhils—Christian as well as non-Christian. About a thousand became abstainers, but in course of time the great majority relapsed."

The above is quoted from the Bombay Presidency Excise Report for the financial year of 1916-1917 and shows that the temperance efforts of Bro. W. B. Stover have been recognized by Government officials. When the Stover family moved to Anklesvar, twelve years ago, there were twenty-two shops in that county. Now there are thirteen, one of which, I understand, has been closed, and at a recent meeting of the Broach Excise Committee, of which Bro. Stover is a member, it was recommended that two more be closed. Other recommendations were that one shop be closed in Broach, that all liquor-shops in large towns close at 6 P. M., in place of two hours later, and also to remain closed on Sundays, and that the two shops of Anklesvar be removed from the business part of the town to the outskirts, where men, coming to Anklesvar for business, will be less tempted to drink. As this Committee is appointed by Government, and the leading officials of the District are on it, their recommendations will likely receive the approval of Government.

Temperance meetings were held at most of our stations and in some of the villages, during the past few months. The one at Anklesvar was held after Sunday-school, July 6. The boarding-school girls sang a temperance song and recited Bible verses on temperance. Sister Eliza B. Miller gave a good description of prohibition reform in America. Bro. Stover gave three demonstrations, to show the destructive effects of alcohol on the tissues of the body. About 170 were present, all of whom arose at the close of the meeting, pledging themselves never to use intoxicating liquor. An offering for the temperance cause was lifted, amounting to Rs. 18. The chief official of Anklesvar Taluka was present and expressed himself as being well pleased with the program and in sympathy with the prohibition reform. Four villages reported programs and a total offering of Rs. 4. Over two hundred promised to give up liquor.

Vali.—At the Sunday-school hour of July 6 a good temperance program was given to an audience of 216. The offering, given to the District Temperance Committee, was Rs. 17, and forty-five are reported to have signed the pledge at that time. There are 130 country liquor (distilled) shops in Raj Pipla State, which sold last year a total of 278,967 gallons, netting the State a total income of Rs. 638,386. This makes a shop for every 1,253 units of the population, 1.72 gallons consumed per capita, at a cost of nearly Rs. 4 each. Besides this, there is one shop where foreign liquors are sold, and thousands of toddy trees that are tapped, the annual license fee ranging from five to thirty-five cents for each tree, which brought the State Rs. 4,315 ($1,436). Toddy is a less harmful drink than country liquor. Opium and intoxicating drugs are sold in the State, from which a revenue of Rs. 3,364 was secured. It is a conservative estimate to say that the total cost to the people, of all liquors and drugs, is at least Rs. 6 ($2) per capita, or Rs. 30 per family every year. As the income of a family of the poor classes is not more than Rs. 15 per month, it means that two months of their income, each year, goes for liquor. Drink, indeed, has become a curse to the people, adding burdens which they can hardly afford to bear!

Jalalpor.—An enthusiastic temperance program was given July 6. It rained hard, but the people came—sixty-eight of them! The children sang a touching temperance song. The main speaker for the occasion was Bro. V. V. Selolki, B. A., of Bulsar, who gave " one of the most practical and helpful temperance addresses I ever heard," so reports Sister Shumaker. " It was a splendid message! Oh! how we all enjoyed it—and especially the men! Those children, too, sat almost spell-bound." There were eighty pledge-signers and the offering amounted to Rs. 21/11/10. A temperance program was also held at Bhat, a fisherman village on the sea-coast. In that village there are two shops—one sells country liquor, or daru, and the other is a toddy shop. The teacher there reports that 1,200 of the 1,500 people in the village drink. There were ninety-seven present at the temperance meeting and Rs. 1/6/9 was given for the cause. There are forty-seven liquor shops in Jalalpor Taluka, twenty-nine of which sell only toddy. Besides this, 1,117 families have their own toddy trees, with license to use toddy from them for domestic purposes, and there are 105 tree-foot booths, from which toddy is sold. The money spent for country spirits including the license, duty, and cost price for last year, was Rs. 139,000, which is Rs. 1/13 per capita, or less than half the rate in Raj Pipla State. However, in this county the per capita consumption of toddy is perhaps greater than in the State.

Vyara.—Bro. Long reports as follows concerning programs: " At a recent meeting, with an anti-liquor program, fifty-five boys and thirty-one girls, as I recall, stood, signifying that under no circumstances will they henceforth drink toddy or liquor. At Pankri, a village, we had a meeting with the same program, at which thirteen boys of the school and ten men of the district vowed never to drink again. May God give all these grace to live up to their vow!"

There was an offering of over Rs. 3. In Vyara Taluka there are 153 liquor shops, of which seventy-eight sell toddy. Besides this, there are five three-foot booths and 1,200 families own toddy-trees and use the same freely. In 1918 there were consumed 118,593 gallons of distilled liquor, at a cost of Rs. 294,393. The Government revenue on toddy is about Rs. 44,000 and the people spent Rs. 73,000. In Jalalpor Taluka there is a liquor shop to every 1,601 of the population, but in Vyara there is a shop to every 310 of the people. The amount of stronger liquor consumed, per capita, is two gallons, which exceeds that of Raj Pipla State. The cost to the people, Rs. 367,393, amounts to Rs. 6/4 per capita—a higher rate than in Raj Pipla.

Vada.—The temperance meeting here was held on Sunday afternoon of Aug. 31. The Government doctor, the main speaker for the occasion, had for his subject, " Alcohol and Its Effect on the Body." Ten of the eighty-five persons present signed the pledge not to use liquor. The offering was Rs. 2/1/6. The Sunday-school of Vada, which has an enrollment of sixty, has pledged itself to do all it can against the drink evil. There are nine liquor shops in the county, one of which sells toddy, and there are 1,900 toddy trees. The people used 9,676 gallons of the stronger liquor last year, which amounts to only 16 gallons per capita. The Government receives a total revenue, from toddy and daru, to the amount of Rs. 65,851, which amounts to a little over fifty cents per capita. This county is in British territory and from these figures one would gather that only about a third as much liquor is used per capita as at Vyara, and in the Raj Pipla State, where native kings govern the people. Jalalpor is under British rule and has a higher rate of consumption than Vada, but less than the States mentioned above. Of the 2,200 illegal distilleries raided in three years, in Vada County, 1,700 were found guilty and 500 acquitted. No doubt such liquor is made and used illegally in India every year.

There are twelve liquor-shops in the Dangs. Drink is a great detriment to the people and the Christians are often tempted to drink. Bro. Adam Ebey is reported to have preached a strong temperance address, impressing on the men the fact that Daniel waxed strong because he refused to drink wine. From the Wankel boarding-school two rupees and eight annas were received for temperance work. About Rs. 75 ($25) has so far been received for the work of the District Temperance Committee.

From Vyara the report comes that teachers and workers are planning for vigorous temperance activity in their district this winter. In keeping with the world movement against alcohol we can expect increased activity for temperance at all our stations. Each month a page or more of our Christian monthly, the " Prakash Patra," is devoted to the temperance cause. A lively disecussion of prohibition in America, and other phases of the temperance question, has taken place in the " Times of India," the leading daily of Western India, during the past two months. Both in number of writers and material, the temperance cause was strongly presented and the advocates of the liquor traffic were silenced. The discussion was started by an editorial which misrepresented prohibition sentiment in the United States, to which several missionaries replied. In all fully twenty articles have appeared to date, which certainly have given the temperance cause a good boost. A similar disecussion was carried on in the " Madras Mail," the leading daily of the Madras Presidency.

At the recent meeting of the " Bombay Representative Council of Missions " a Temperance Committee was appointed, with Eld. W. B. Stover as chairman. The Coun-

THE ROUND TABLE

Truly Perplexing

BY REBECCA C. FOUTZ

In telling of the war record of ex-convicts, the warden of an eastern penitentiary relates this:

"One of my men came back some time ago all shot up. He had fifteen wounds, his right kidney was shot away and he walked on crutches. He also wore a bunch of medals, the Croix de Guerre and a few other trinkets, which were awarded to him for bravery on the battle-field.

"He said to me: 'Life's a funny thing, after all, isn't it, warden? Here I go and get fifteen years in jail for shoving a man on a railroad track and then I get all these medals and decorations for killing two dozen men!'"

Do we wonder that he could not understand why the great difference is made between using the same method of avenging a personal wrong and a nation's wrong? If there is a better way to settle the former, there certainly must be for the latter, too. May we earnestly teach that better way!

Unconscious Teaching

BY WM. J. TINKLE

While we send our children to school five days in the week and to Sunday-school on Sunday, this is not the only teaching which they receive. This is the teaching of which we are conscious, but we also teach them in an unconscious way by the things which we say and do in their presence. The latter teaching may mould their ideals quite as much if not more than the former.

Just now I am thinking of the distinctive doctrines of our church. These are taught to the applicant for baptism by the minister, and the young Christian hears them mentioned occasionally in sermons and in the Sunday-school class. But if the unconscious teaching of the members contradicts this conscious teaching, it may be of no avail.

Stopping at the home of a good brother and sister, I noticed the pictures on the walls. In conspicuous places were the enlarged photographs of this brother and sister, dressed in the height of fashion—the pictures having been taken before they were members of the church. What wonder that the church could not persuade one of the daughters of this home to dress in a simple manner!

During the war we sometimes heard brethren express their minds in strong terms as to what the Allies should do to the Germans. This is teaching, whether we realize it or not, and it counteracts our teaching in favor of peace.

In like manner, if you should say, in the presence of our young members, that a certain man should be sued at law by another, you would be instructing against the teaching of the church. Moreover, we can not expect our children to stay away from the vaudeville if we listen with pleasure to the report of what was seen there.

I have mentioned our distinctive doctrines, not because they are of more importance than the general doctrines of Christianity, but because it takes more effort to teach them. The tendency of those about us is in the other direction. As long as we feel that our distinctive doctrines are taught by the Bible, we intend to uphold them. This must be done through our unconscious as well as our conscious teaching.

What Are We Here For?

BY JULIA GRAYDON

"No man is born into the world, whose work is not born with him."

I read these lines the other day and pondered them. Has each one of us a work to do and has God planned it from the beginning?

Sometimes we wonder what our work is and some of us say: "I have no talent; there's nothing I can do." But let us stop and say: "Each one of us has a part in the great world, and we'll find it sooner or later."

It was thought out for us before we ourselves entered the world, and all we have to do is to accept it, take up the task which sometimes lies nearest, put our shoulders to its accomplishing, and follow the great procession of workers.

"Ring it, ye bells from the kirk,
The Lord of love came down from above
To live with the men who work."

Our Father's Springs

BY G. W. TUTTLE

Shallow waters soon fail unless fed by living springs or by deep, dark pools. Today they are bubbling, and singing, and dancing merrily along, rippling over the stones and making music by the way; but tomorrow their music is stilled, their merry life has vanished, their bed is parched and dry, and even the frogs hop croakingly away.

So it is with the shallow life. Today it froths, and bubbles, and ripples merrily along, as if life were a holiday. Tomorrow the shallows have dried up and mirth is replaced by sadness. The sources have dried up, the waters have vanished.

How luminous, how comforting, how full of assurance and power are these words of the Psalmist: "All my springs are in thee"! The springs, the sources, all in God! An unfailing fountain! An unlimited supply! Now the deep, quiet pools of our God will furnish the never-failing waters; now the power of God will be back of human weakness; now the waters will not fail or be cut off. Joy will be abiding, faith will be progressive, service will be sure.

Those who draw from the heavenly springs, bear sorrow well. They have hope as a sure anchor of the soul; they have eyes of faith with which to look into heaven, while their feet still abide in the highways of earth.

Those whose springs are in God, bear misfortune and losses well. What if one financial loss follow hard upon another? Think of the springs—the silver and the gold and the cattle upon a thousand hills! Are they not his, my Father's? Will he not care for me? Will not the waters of his love and care flow about me, keeping me from the shallow thinking which says: "Loss!" when the angels are saying with gladness and thanksgiving: "Gain! Gain!"

And those whose springs are in God are not dismayed by difficulties. Difficulties in the way should prove but a trifle when God says: "Go!" Lions in the way? He who created can fast-chain the lions! Mountains across our pathway? They are but molehills to our God! Great obstacles? "In the Lord Jehovah is everlasting strength."

We can cut off the water of God's springs by selfish, self-centered lives; we can choke the channel that leads into our lives by worldliness. Do not miss the connection! Keep the channels open! Make way, make way for the Living Water! The Master is still the Water of Life.

Clothes and the Woman

At the International Conference of Woman Physicians in New York, Beatrice Forbes-Robertson Hale and Dr. Edith Hale Swift did not mince their words in denunciation of present-day feminine fashions. Mrs. Hale says that men with their fortunes to make by the multiplicity of dress goods are forever dinning the slogan "style!" into the ears of women until they think they must buy everything they see. Doctor Swift asserts that women dress wholly with a view to the pursuit and capture of a man.

These theses were developed with feeling and eloquence, but they are not novel. They are older than the acrid Roman satirists; older than the sun-baked bricks of Babylon; and the first fall fashions were those of the fall of man.

A woman is badly dressed as soon as her personality becomes of secondary interest and what she wears or omits to wear is of paramount importance. Whistler, engaged to paint a portrait of a woman with a dead soul, painted the dress only, because, he said, it was all he saw. When such a female of the species impoverishes the rainbow or the sunset, as well as her husband, with her color schemes, the natural suspicion is that she realizes how few and weak are the weapons in her intellectual armory. While the predatory male may be dazzled by such a display for a time, only the veriest saphead is content to gaze at the plumage and to pay the bills for a lifetime.

Costume must fit the occasion as well as the wearer. There is no sense, but mere extravagance, in going to work in a ball-dress. Any day one may daily see in the street habiliments that belong in the boudoir. She who would prove herself a lady, does not carry conviction by spending more than she can afford on showy, shoddy clothes.

What a delight it is to find a woman who is so perceptively versed in the difficult fine art of dress that she makes it subtly enhance the flavor of her personality and express her nature! She knows the effects that are becoming without being spectacular. She does not dress with the low motive of making other women envious by the display of so much property upon one person. She is not trying to carry a fortune, as the snail carries its house, upon her back. She has the innate abhorrence that refined people feel for vulgar display of any sort. Moreover, she is determined not to play into the hands of some devious and wily arbiter of the modes who is trying to foist upon her what she does not need by making her feel lonesome among women who must have the last word in fashions as in conversation.—Public Ledger, Philadelphia, Pa.

What It Means to Believe in Jesus Christ

BY EZRA FLORY

To believe in Jesus Christ is more than an assent to certain doctrines or church creeds. Every one is often led by deep-seated, often subconscious, motives which are not to be discovered except by an introspection that should be commonly avoided. There are some things which we can not help knowing—the most important in life. These are what should be stressed—the most important in life, as we think of religion.

There is a real difference, a change from the old to the new, a substitution of one set of thoughts and feelings in regard to life for others. It is the same that Jesus meant when he said: "Repent"; when he said: "Except a man be born again"; when he said: "Your sins are forgiven"; or when he said: "This day shalt thou be with me in Paradise"; or what Matthew felt when he left the receipt of customs; what the woman felt when she anointed the feet of Jesus; what Nathanael felt when he said: "Rabbi, thou art the Son of God"; what Zacchæus felt when he ran ahead to make ready to receive him. It is what Paul meant when he wrote: "Put off the old man, . . . put on the new man." It is what Paul meant when he said: "For me to live is Christ," or again: "I am crucified with Christ, nevertheless I live, yet not I, Christ liveth in me."

Things that once seemed important have lost prominence, and things unappreciated have become vastly important. This change will come when one sees that his belief in the teachings of Jesus, and all his effort to refine and build his character, is insufficient, and that he may be far from being a true follower of Jesus Christ. "The devils believe" with an assentive faith and "fear and tremble." There comes the feeling that one must go a step further to be one of those for whom Jesus died. He will be led to appreciate in deep love, the sacrifice of Jesus and to express this in some tangible way—the way he himself provided.

By expressing this passion for him, a new communion, which continues, is experienced. All this requires a modification of religious beliefs, some of which may not be wholly made later in life. This is not purely an intellectual nor an emotional process. It would not be accomplished by a strictly rational process, for "the natural (psychical) man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God: for they are foolishness unto him; and he can not know them, because they are spiritually examined (judged or apprehended)." Reason alone does not supply the power of the will that carries one into great decisions and through a great crisis. Unless there is something more, one will remain inert.

Christ becomes real—as real as one's place in nature becomes that he may live. This, in either case, may be more difficult to explain than to be experienced. There will be a change of opinion and in the processes of reasoning, but Jesus will be the same dominant spiritual Power of the world, to whom we go in prayer for guidance, help and teaching on any occasion that may arise. Such personal experience sends one back to the Bible with a new vision, finding it a new record of undoubted truth. By continued study of the Book, it increases in due measure, till it comprehends all the truth one is able to appreciate.

All this personal interest will lead one to desire to mingle with others, especially with those of like mind. All forms of evangelistic service will appeal strongly.

Thus belief in Jesus Christ lies at the heart of Christian nurture and is fundamentally the source of Christian conduct and duty. It sets new ideals and a lofty goal for life, and gives a new dynamic in reaching these ainis. Belief in Jesus Christ is far more than a mere assent to certain standards adopted by a denomination or other organization. It means life emanating from him through us.

Forward

BY PAUL MOHLER

One of our Okanogan Valley brethren lives on the hillside. Having an automobile that would not climb the hill, he put a more powerful motor in it. Just the thing to do, wasn't it? He thought so, and so did I until he tried it. What a fine thing it is to be able to turn on more power and still more, as the grade grows steeper. But one thing we both forgot—proportion. The motor was so heavy and powerful that when he turned on the power, especially in the sand, the rear end of the car was too light to hold the road. Of course, it skidded, and our brother never knew whether he was to go up the road or into the ditch.

I have seen churches make the same mistake. A congregation may have a rather weak local ministry. It wishes to grow, so it engages the most powerful evangelist it can secure, to increase its membership. The evangelist, being a one-idea man (very few good evangelists are either good elders or good advisers on practical church problems), exerts all his great power to bring members into the church. The local ministers, knowing themselves to be men of only ordinary ability, and being overawed by the great impression made by the evangelist, dare not interfere with any arrangements, methods, or actions of the evangelist, or of the church under his control. Is it any wonder that the church leaves the road and heads for the ditch, sometimes?

Right here, I have a word of warning to offer: Too many brethren take their local church problems to the evangelist, when he has won their confidence. This may be all right when the evangelist is an all-around man, with a record of success as the elder of a church, but if he is a real evangelist, the likelihood is that his advice will be foolish or even very dangerous. It often occurs that the most successful elders are poor preachers. Remember that God "gave some to be apostles, and some, prophets; and some, evangelists; and some, pastors and teachers; for the perfecting of the saints, unto the work of ministering, unto the building up of the body of Christ." Take counsel of the men whom God has given for counsel. Not all men have that gift.

Again, another thing sometimes occurs. The evangelist is all right, and his work is carefully done, just as good as it can be; but he is out of proportion to the church he is serving. When he leaves, the local church has so many new members that it doesn't know what to do with them. They need teaching, training, organizing, and directing, but the local church is too weak to do so much, so the new members either drift away or take possession and ruin the church to suit themselves. In either case, the church suffers, even if it does not go into the ditch. When you employ an evangelist, get one of the right size for your church.

Am I proposing that we weaken our evangelistic force? By no means. I am saying that the strong evangelist should go where his work can be followed up properly. Good evangelists are scarce, and it is an injustice to them to place them where the good work they do will go for naught, when there are other places where they are needed, and where their labors will be more profitable. It seems to me, sometimes, that churches that have run down just because the local ministry is weak, make the greatest effort to get the evangelist with the greatest record for large ingatherings, in order to make up, by one great meeting, for years of neglect. This is just as wise as to neglect a horse until he is just about dead from starvation, then stuff him with all the nutritious food he can hold in one tremendous feed. Churches can be foundered as well as horses. Let the church that is ready for the strong evangelist, have his services until such a time as you get ready for him. While you are weak, get a pastor-evangelist, whose work will indeed strengthen you by correcting your internal weaknesses, while adding members.

And here is another word of warning. Often the congregation that has been increased by a large ingathering, persuades the evangelist to move in as pastor, to take care of the church. If he is a real evangelist, the church is making a mistake. To build up a church, there must be, indeed, some evangelistic work done all the time, but there must also be a great deal of teaching and counseling, with infinitely patient love. Choose a man with the gift of the local church leadership as your pastor. It is likely that the best man you can find is right in the home congregation, often a man of limited education, who needs only to be set free from farm work and enabled to devote his time to the work of the church. "Let down your bucket where you are."

Move forward, indeed, but be sure it is forward and not into the ditch.

CORRESPONDENCE

"Write what thou seest, and send it unto the churches"

MINISTERIAL MEETING OF EASTERN PENNSYLVANIA

It was the writer's privilege to attend the recent District Ministerial Meeting, held near Ephrata, Pa. It was the twenty-sixth annual session. This has grown to be of great importance to the District, not only from the standpoint of the minister, but also for the Sunday-school and missionary worker. In fact, missions seem to be the center around which the entire program was planned. The different sessions began and closed on time. The Moderator had needed ability, and no time was lost by the speakers in offering excuses.

It would be difficult to say just what part of the program was best—all was so good—but certain it is that there were those in attendance who were ready to give a practical answer to prayers, for when the topic, "Possibilities of the New York Field," had been presented by brethren from that part of the District, something followed, the like of which had no precedent, perhaps, in the history of the church. It was this: The speakers had held up before the meeting the unusual opportunities afforded in their new field. Concrete instances were cited, showing that from both the material and the spiritual view-point, the field is inviting. Photographs of the Lyceum Hall, at Freeville, N. Y., were shown. A committee of the Mission Board, who had been at Freeville, told what they had seen, and stated that the hall was for sale at a bargain price. The Brethren residing at Freeville were already holding regular services in the building, but with the present activity in real estate, owing to so many Western people coming there and buying farms and other property, it was considered rather doubtful if the present chance would remain open till the time of our next District Conference, next April. Then a brother, known to all "Messenger" readers, sprang to his feet and said that he would like to be one of ten brethren who would furnish the Board the necessary funds to close the deal at once. He did not have time to seat himself till his motion was seconded, and then, faster than the Secretary could write them, the names came in. Many seemed to be disappointed that it was over so soon, but it was time to adjourn the session. During the intermission, and in and after the following session, it was plainly evident that many others were determined to have a hand in making it possible to convert Lyceum Hall into a churchhouse for the Brethren residing at Freeville.

The next day, a short time before dinner, the matter was again taken up by the meeting. Some felt that, since it had been satisfactorily adjusted the day before, it now was a closed affair, but it was not. It was suggested that, in view of the fact that the pledges of the day before were simply in the form of a loan, and final disposition must be made at the District Meeting in the spring, it might be better simply to raise the money then and there and have it done with. Some doubt was expressed as to the possibility of such a change, since the psychological moment, to have done that, was the day before. Again we were mistaken. The amount was oversubscribed—in a very short time, too. One brother, who wanted to give the last third of the amount on the annuity plan, was not allowed to do so, for the individual gifts, the Sunday-school and Christian Workers' and Sisters' Aid pledges were coming in as fast as they could be recorded. The good brother's thousand dollars, however, was put to good use, for, since he was not allowed to contribute so largely to the work at Freeville, he gladly added it to the $500,000 Endowment Fund of Elizabethtown College.

Just before the final adjournment, opportunity was giv-

What Happens When God "Shines into the Heart"?

2 Cor. 4: 6

For Week Beginning December 7, 1919

1. Introductory.—When the blessed sunshine breaks out from behind the thick clouds of darkness, there is no mistaking the fact that a great change has taken place. Just such a change is to be seen in the benighted soul of man when THE LIGHT OF THE KNOWLEDGE OF GOD breaks through the darkness.

2. The Source of This Shining.—"God hath shined." This light is not of man's devices. Out of the darkness within ourselves no such light could ever be produced. Only God, who could "command the light to shine out of darkness," could cause such a light to shine in the sin-darkened hearts of men. The light of the knowledge of God is THE LIGHT OF GOD HIMSELF. It is a definite and direct act of the infinite mercy and goodness of God upon the individual soul—"God hath shined." God, who is Light, and in whom is no darkness at all, is still shining through his Son Jesus Christ, by his Word.

3. The Place of This Shining.—"In our hearts." The brightest radiance of heaven illumines the darkest place on earth. This "God-shine" in the heart brings with it a double revelation. It shows, by way of contrast, how dark the heart by nature is, and how hopeless it would be, were it to attempt to create such a soul-satisfying light in and of itself. It is also a revelation of the character and presence of God in the heart. It is not merely a light created by God, but it is the supernal light of the PRESENCE of God in the heart. Into every dark crevice of the soul this shining has come. All are well aware that it is the nature of light to cast its influence over everything that is anywhere within its reach. In shining into the HEART, this light enters into every act of the life—into every thought and feeling and motive of the soul's activities. "GOD hath shined his light into our hearts." Then wisdom comes to take the place of our darkness and ignorance. The god of this world had BLINDED the mind, but graciously the God of heaven "hath shined into our hearts to give the light of the knowledge of God."

4. The Purpose of This Shining.—"To give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God, in the face of Jesus Christ." This shining of God, in his glorious grace, upon and in the heart, gives us at least some knowledge of the glory that was revealed to all the world in and through Jesus Christ. God has shined into our hearts by virtue of the atoning sacrifice of his Son, Jesus Christ. This shining assures us of much more than the EXISTENCE of God. It is the manifestation of his glory—the glory of his saving grace—in the face, or character, of Jesus Christ. KNOWLEDGE IS LIGHT, but the knowledge of the glory of God, which is radiant on the face of Jesus Christ, is the brightest and most effectual light that ever pierced the darkness of a human heart. It is a light that transforms the whole inner man, and that adorns man with the beauty of the Lord. It is the dawning of that great, eternal day upon the soul, which will never be followed by the darkness of night, but which will brighten more and more as time goes on.

5. Suggestive References.—"A great light" (Isa. 9: 2). "Now are ye light in the Lord" (Eph. 5: 8). "God's marvelous light" (1 Peter 2: 9). The Source of light (1 John 1: 5-7). "Children of light" (1 Thess. 5: 4, 5). "The true light now shineth" (1 John 2: 8-11). "The Lord is my light" (Psa. 27: 1). "Shine as lights" (Philpp. 2: 15). "A light that shineth in a dark place" (2 Peter 1: 19). God's Word enlightens (Psa. 119: 105, 130).

AROUND THE WORLD

A Stern Arraignment

At the National Training Conference of the Interchurch World Movement of North America, held recently at Atlantic City, N. J., present-day styles of clothes, worn by church women, were severely censured, because of their wrongful influence. Rev. J. R. Crowther, of Seattle, Wash., pertinently said: "The indecent dress of some women in our churches makes it tremendously hard for a young man to keep his thoughts clean and pure. Scriptural modesty of apparel has, to a large extent, been lost sight of. For that reason it is almost impossible, these days, to tell the difference between a street woman and a church woman."

Airships as Sanitariums

British scientists have been experimenting with the airship as a place of treatment for sufferers from consumption and similar troubles. The ordinary sanitarium does not afford facilities for a plentiful supply of absolutely fresh air, while the airship is sure to bring new vitality to vitiated lungs, if the patient is taken to an altitude that insures the best results in his case. Several recent trials of the new method have yielded gratifying results, and give promise of still better effects as greater knowledge is gained. The spiritual realm, also, can gain a lesson that is most valuable. It is on the higher plane of the Christian life that we gain the greatest degree of soul vitality—relief from sin's destructive malady.

It is strange indeed that, under the all-inclusive title of "moving picture shows," almost any act of immorality is allowed to be acted out or, at least, broadly hinted at. Entertainment being the chief aim of these shows, every means is employed to cater to the desires of those in attendance. Judges of criminal courts have time after time been confronted by unmistakable evidences of the corruptive effects of picture shows upon the impressionable minds of youthful delinquents. Is it reasonable to expect aught but harm when night after night scenes of gilded vice, in its most attractive guise, are thrown upon the screen? In the words of a noted sociologist, "The average picture show is a veritable cesspool of iniquity."

Japan's Huge War Program

To the lover of "peace and good will to all men," Japan's astounding preparations for military efficiency of the highest grade, are greatly disquieting. One is made to wonder what has become of the roseate dreams of humanity, according to which the great cataclysm, recently brought to a close, would be followed by an era of international amity and mutual regard. Foremost in Japan's extensive war program is the building of a huge fleet, for which $324,000,000 is to be expended during the next five years. To the tax-burdened people of Japan it will mean an increased draft upon their slender resources—a load beneath which they will be almost crushed. And all this when humanity was hoping for general disarmament!

Saner Reasoning Is Gaining Ground

Mention was recently made, in these columns, of the strike of the printers in the large publishing houses of New York. Though not all the workers were in favor of the action, the strike order caused the temporary suspension of leading monthly and weekly magazines in that city. With the return of the workers comes also the hopeful announcement of the pressmen, representing twenty of the larger cities of the United States, that, at their forthcoming meeting in St. Louis, a definite plan is to be adopted, avoiding all strikes and settling disputed points by arbitration. It is a good move. Strikes may well be regarded as a relic of the "stone age" of industry—a time when the man won who could hit the hardest, and thus gain his point. The strike is a club—had for the worker, bad for the employer, and worst for the general public.

The Bible Way of Settlement

In a recent issue of the "Commoner" William Jennings Bryan makes a fervent appeal to the churches of the land to devote their religious and social power and influence to the establishing of a better understanding between capital and labor, at this critical time of industrial unrest. He says: "Capital and labor must be brought together. Is there any other basis than the spirit of brotherhood on which to restore harmony? Is not the 'Golden Rule' the only means that can be applied with success? Can the churches neglect this great opportunity—aye, this great duty? Please reread your commission (Matt. 28: 18-20). You are ambassadors of One who has all power; you are sent to all people; you are to teach all he has commanded; he will be with you always. Can you ask for more and higher authority?" As a practical measure in the working out of Christ's method, Mr. Bryan urges first more preaching of brotherly love from the pulpit, more talking of it in heart-to-heart conversation, more practice of it in the daily living of Christians. After that he proposes that a general movement of Christian citizenship be set on foot, to induce Congress to pass a law creating "a machinery for peace in industry," making arbitration a ready means of settlement.

Reform Measures Better Than Jails

Accurate investigations have shown that in New York City it costs $219.63 to send a man to jail for a year, but that only $21.94 is required to place him on probation, with every possibility of thorough reform. Even the best-informed penologists admit the inadequacy of jails and other penal institutions, as mediums of reform. Far better it is, to give transgressors a chance to make good—in all cases, at least, where there is reasonable hope of reform. Probation officers in many of our large cities have achieved most excellent results in the reclamation of transgressors, and especially in the case of those who have not yet become wholly hardened. Building up a strong moral character is the best insurance against criminal tendencies.

Tobacco Perils Great Britain

"The nation that smokes, eventually perishes," declares R. P. Moncrieff, honorary statistician to the British "Anti-Tobacco League." The British people, in 1917, smoked 152,215,700 pounds of tobacco, costing the smokers approximately $497,690,000. Pipes and other appliances came to $22,684,000, making a total, for the year, of more than $520,000,000. The following year the total reached $692,075,000. Mr. Moncrieff pertinently asks: "If the women of the nation become habitual smokers—as they are rapidly doing—what effect will it have on the future generation?" The question has been answered by the leading lights of the medical profession, to the effect that a physically inferior race of men and women would ensue. In this matter we are not dealing with theories, but with actual facts.

A "Wet" Regime by Dec. 10?

Such is the forecast of the liquor men, who claim that the first act of the next Congress, when it meets Dec. 1, will be the passage of a joint resolution, proclaiming the war at an end. Already special orders have been sent from Washington to the various internal revenue officers, and a new supply of revenue stamps and other paraphernalia, necessary for the resumption of the liquor business—for the time being, at least—have been received at the Federal Buildings of the various cities. While the statements, cited above, may give great assurance to the liquor element, there is still a slight chance that, through some favoring technicality, the "war-time prohibition" may be extended until the national prohibition act becomes effective Jan. 16, next. Such, at least, is the hope of every promoter of temperance.

Japan Pledges Reform Measures

Mr. Tokonami, imperial minister of home affairs, recently assured a group of influential mission workers that better Governmental policies would prevail hereafter, in Japan, not only towards missionary enterprises in general, but towards the Koreans in particular. Honestly acknowledging previous shortcomings in administrative affairs, Mr. Tokonami gave explicit assurances of permanent reforms. While regretting the recent repressive acts by Japanese officials in Korea, he suggested that in the end all would result for the best of those concerned. Japan would thereby be compelled to elevate its methods and measures, in that distracted land, to accord better with the ideal intentions it has professed. "I assure you," the official said, "there will be a remarkable change in the administration of Korean affairs." It is to be hoped that the promises will be honorably redeemed.

When Danger Threatens

Because he and members of his party were mistaken for Armenians, Major General James G. Harbord, head of the American Mission to Armenia, narrowly escaped death at the hands of a band of marauding bandits a few miles from Mt. Ararat, recently. The mission, of which Gen. Harbord is the head, was returning to Constantinople from Erivan, where the Near East Relief has a hospital and central pharmacy. Wholly unexpectedly, the relief workers were attacked by Kurds, Tartars and Turks, who fired upon the American motor cars. Several members of the party were held prisoner for some hours. After the bandit chiefs had been assured that the men were Americans and not Armenians, they cheerfully released them, returned their automobiles and restored most of the property which had been stolen from them. The chiefs told the Americans that thousands would die of starvation this winter, owing to the unsettled conditions in Armenia, and because practically no grain was raised during the last season. Happenings of the sort above described, are an almost daily occurrence in the section referred to, where raiding bands are constantly destroying prosperous Armenian and Turkish towns and villages. About ten days before the occurrence alluded to, a Moslem band bore down upon the same village, wrecked the buildings, drove out and killed the men, and held the women captive. In fact, so common are occurrences of that kind, that practically every party of Near East relief workers has had to contend with attacks of these bands of savage bandits, and has many times narrowly escaped death. One thing is sure—the task of the relief worker is not a "sailing to heaven on flowery beds of ease." Dr. G. Bayard Young, a member of the Sunday School Commission, narrowly escaped decapitation, while endeavoring to return from Marash to Aintab—a wire having been strung across the road in such a way as to injure the unwary occupant of an automobile.

Christian Effort Transforms Hostile Press

Latest reports indicate that the daily press in Hangchow, China, formerly anti-Christian, has been converted, by the Christian forces of that city, into a strong asset in moulding public opinion for missions. This is a gain of considerable value. In addition to this important concession, these newspapers are also printing other matter which has been instrumental in changing Chinese hostility toward foreigners, into an attitude of cordiality and respect. Still other articles speak approvingly of the application of Christian principles to questions of moral and social reform. So strongly have the advantages of Gospel teachings been set forth, that hundreds have been favorably impressed thereby.

Chaotic Conditions in Europe

Judging by the reports that are given in the daily press, concerning the situation of things in Europe, one is made to exclaim: "What will be the end of all these things?" Monetary standards have been lowered so disastrously that, in the case of Germany, the "mark" is worth but a few cents, while in Italy, France and Great Britain the sbrinkage in value is also creating great alarm. Seemingly the financial situation is wholly out of balance, and has not yet had time to readjust itself to present-day conditions. Remedial measures of various sorts have been suggested, but the one that seems to be most promising is the old reliable one: "Increase the industrial and agricultural resources to the utmost point of productivity, and encourage thrift."

The Peace Treaty Rejected

Three attempts were made by the Senate Nov. 19, to pass the Peace Treaty, but in each case the necessary two-thirds majority could not be secured. That the Treaty possessed many commendable features, is generally admitted, though, on the other hand, it can not be denied that some phases were, beyond all question, at variance with the highest American ideals. "The Manchester Gurdian," a leading British journal, frankly says: "It is essential for Europe to understand that American opposition is mainly the outcome not of narrow nationalism or political maneuverings. It is rooted in the faults of the Treaty itself. The covenant was born in an atmosphere of passion. Many of its articles are ambiguous and inequitable." It is to be regretted that the Treaty, with reservations on some of its most objectionable phases, could not have been ratified. Its stabilizing influence might have helped to stay the world's unrest.

Mutual Regard Insures Good Relations

While housewives and others everywhere are struggling with the problem of obtaining the right sort of workers, and keeping them, it may be of interest to note the experience of a Chicago lady, Mrs. Atkinson, and her devoted helper, Mary Newman. Now past sixty years of age, Mary has been in the same household for thirty-five years. To those who wonder at her long term of service, Mary is ready to confess that she would not have been the ideal servant if Mrs. Atkinson had not been the ideal mistress. But Mary touches upon another essential in the following: "Girls must have religion to be good at anything, and I never saw a good servant who didn't go to church. The reason why so many city girls do not make good maids, is due to the fact that their mothers let them run the streets and they fail to learn what a clean, orderly and attractive home ought to be—much less do they know how to keep one that way. I came to Mrs. Atkinson's home, to work for her father and mother, thirty-five years ago, from Janesville, Wis. When I came, they said: 'Mary, make yourself at home.' I did, and it has been my home ever since. When Mr. and Mrs. Key died, they remembered me with a legacy from which I have an annual income. I am satisfied with the home I have, and will remain for the rest of my life." And here is the view-point of her mistress, Mrs. Atkinson: "As to wages, we have always done what is right by Mary, but we do not stop with that. When she is ill, I always care for her as if she were one of the family. When she looks tired, I tell her to rest, and I help her with the work. Now, since she is getting older, I see to it that she does not overdo herself. The whole secret of securing perfect service is simply love. A servant whom you love, and who loves you, is going to take an interest in your home, in what you eat, and how comfortable you live. It is the little things that make life happy or miserable for all of us, and if we remember that fact, we will have solved the servant problem." There is a world of wisdom in the words quoted. "With what measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you again."

HOME AND FAMILY

Peace Divine

Selected by Ada M. Oldham, Brooklyn, N. Y.

I do not ask, O Lord, that life may be a pleasant road,
I do not ask that thou wouldst take from me aught of its load;
I do not ask that flow'rs should always spring beneath my feet,
I know too well the poison and the sting of things too sweet.

For one thing only, Lord, I plead, lead me aright,
Though strength should falter and though heart should bleed, through peace to light.
I do not ask, O Lord, that thou shouldst shed full radiance here,
Give but a ray of peace, that I may tread without a fear.

I do not ask my cross to nnderstand, my way to see,
Better in darkness just to feel thy hand and follow thee!
Joy is like restless day, but peace divine like quiet night,
Lead me, O Lord, till perfect day shall shine, through peace to light.

The Empty Nest

BY ELIZABETH ROSENBERGER BLOUGH

THE wind was blowing hard as Mary Ellan leaned close to the window, looking listlessly into the yard. The dead leaves blew together in small heaps, and then a bit of a whirlwind set them swirling around in another direction. As the empty tree-tops whipped in the wind, one could see nests that the birds had left behind them when they started southward. The wind sbook a branch up and down, the nest hung by a hair, swung backwards and forwards; then it was thrown against the window.

"Poor little nest!" With this foolish exclamation Mary Ellan ran out in the wind, picked it up and brought it into her room. It was a yellowbird's nest. Some of the feathers, woven into it, sbowed that the birds had done their best to make it deep and soft for the birdlings. Soft fibres and hairs lined it. Some of Mary Ellan's own white hairs were woven in and out. She remembered the pair that had been busy with that particular nest. Where were they now? And, oh, the big brood of wide-throated little birds, for whose sustenance the two had sought food tirelessly—were they all gone?

Mary Ellan sighed as she held the nest for a moment. Then she placed it beside the goldfish bowl on her table, and took up her tatting. Swiftly the shuttle flew. Her thin fingers caught it and threw it skilfully. The delicate pattern grew in beauty, but all the while her eyes were on the empty nest.

How lonely it had been after father left them! She had gone often to bis grave. She had lingered there until her duty to the children claimed her. She found that she must think more of them and less of her own loss. A woman can love a man for his big way of looking at things, for his being her fellow-worker, but if, with this, she loves him because he is the man who knows about life, and is capable of sharing all of life with her, and is tender about it—then, if she loses him, her grieving is going to be something that can not be told. Father had shared with Mary Ellan all sides of living. Perhaps it was a mercy that she had to do for the children just then.

Now the children were away. Allan was out west, and he was a good lawyer. Each month a check came to Mary Ellan—a check large enough to cover all her expenses. Then Esther was grown, and had married a rich man. She lived in the city. Several papers on the table were marked with heavy penciled lines around some society event in which Esther had a prominent part. Esther was so occupied with duties and responsibilities in her new home that she had little time to think of her old home, where her mother patiently read the society column over and over, wondering a little why Esther found delight in meeting strangers. She could not understand the restless craving for change and excitement which possessed some people. Her home, her garden and, above all, her children, satisfied her craving for any special interest.

"It's dreadful to feel so helpless and useless," she murmured, as she dropped her tatting and took up the empty nest, tenderly. Her last sick spell had left her feeling weak. She did not gain strength as she should. No, she had not told the children of her illness; they would come if they could, especially her youngest, her Frank. He was in Mexico. She had hired Crishy Boggs to stay with her. She was in the kitchen now.

Yes, that was Crishy, coming through the hall. She carried in a small tray for Mary Ellan, saying pityingly: "I know you like apples with cream, an' that's fresh sponge-cake. When you beat 'em half an hour, they're bound to be light as a feather."

The ready tears filled Mary Ellan's eyes. "How good you are, Crishy. I need your sponge-cakes, but I need you more. Crishy, I can't stand it to stay alone." She took Crishy's hand in hers. The two women understood each other.

"When I came to this-house first, I used to wonder how I could ever be good enough, how, in my little way, could I ever be forgetful enough of self, devoted enough to him, and useful enough to others to show him how I blessed and honored him. Then he left me with the children. Now the nest is empty. Crishy, will you stay?"

"I'd ruther stay here than go anywheres else," answered Crishy.

Crishy took the tray with her and most of the sponge cake, when she went back to her kitchen. Mary Ellan sat alone, the empty nest in her lap. Through some of the fiery windows, beautiful from without and set at this sunset hour in a glorious house of gold, the evening light poured in—rich, lavish, overflowing—lighting up the bird's nest and the goldfish swimming in the bowl. Even now the floor was dusky, and shadows, slowly mounting the wall, fell upon the picture of the husband, long since dead. The wind had died down, light mists arose and the dew fell. The moon glimmered here and there in horizontal lines through the bare branches of the trees. Mary Ellan had long since put aside the empty nest and was now reading the Book which has never failed to comfort and help the lonely ones of earth.

"I will lead them in paths that they have not known: I will make darkness light before them, and crooked things straight. These things will I do unto them and not forsake them." "Thou shalt not be forgotten of me. I have graven thee upon the palms of my hands; thy walls are continually before me." She had often read these promises, but tonight her Book remained open at this place. She wanted to keep in mind that the Lord was very close to her.

We live in a world of change. Of all the varied objects that twine themselves around our hearts in youth, how few cling to its maturer years! How few of our precious hopes are not wrecked and borne away on the resistless waves of change, but when those we have cherished, as our heart's core, are gone from us, it is like no other pain. There are aged parents in many homes, wisbing for the children who find no time to come. Only too soon they learn that death has claimed the lonely one. This is the cry of the lonely heart:

"Remember this! Through long years I shall miss you,
When lie our paths as they must lie apart:
I shall grope weary through the dark to kiss you
And listen to the beating of your heart.

"But if, some day, you only shall remember
One beautiful and crowned supernal day:
Then shall my lonely life's unloved December
Beam like a perfect and immortal May."

Miss Susie's Confession

BY BESS BATES

IN the tiny village of Komo, Miss Susie Baily had a little shop in which one could buy almost anything that was a little old, or worn, or faded. To look into that shop, it seemed as if nothing ever could have been quite new. The edges of the ribbons were slightly soiled, the ends of the skeins of yarn a little faded, and the crochet thread had a habit of breaking unexpectedly. On the shelves a few bolts of dry-goods reposed, and as they were never quite the pattern wanted, they continued to repose there. All in all, it was a very unsatisfactory little shop.

Miss Susie matched the shop in an anxious sort of way. She was so willing, so anxious to please and so thankful for a customer, and, at the same time, she was so timid that she could not ask as much as her poor things were worth. There had been a time, years before, when Miss Susie's shop had been prosperous, but that was when Mrs. Baily had run it. Now Mrs. Baily lay in a stuffy room behind the shop, unable to move, unable even to speak, but her dauntless old eyes still commanded the timid Susie, just as much as her brisk tongue had done years before.

Every night, Miss Susie gave a detailed report of all the sales of the day, and every night, those reports became shorter, and the old eyes which gleamed out from the pillows looked a little fiercer, until Miss Susie was almost frantic. Miss Susie was very much afraid of those eyes. Then prices began to go up, and it seemed as if every time when Miss Susie bought some groceries, she had to pay more for them, and the time came when the sales from the little shop could not cover the cost of their simple meals, and the eyes looked more reproachful and angry every night.

Across the way from Miss Susie's little shop was Deacon Potter's General Store. When Deacon Potter had put in a line of notions, Miss Susie's trade had almost disappeared. Miss Susie was not the kind of person who could hold trade. But when prices began going up with leaps and bounds, Miss Susie did not raise her prices on old goods. One day Sister Gushing came into her shop. Sister Gushing was very well-to-do, but she had a way of nosing about, to find a particularly good bargain. As a rule she never bought from Miss Susie on account of the dinginess of the goods. She came in this day to see Mrs. Baily. Every so often, Sister Gushing made what she considered "duty calls" and went to see the sick members of the congregation. After she had told Mrs. Baily all the news, and watched those old eyes gleam and glow, until it "fairly made her nervous," she came out into the shop and picked over the thread to discover that it was several cents cheaper than Deacon Potter's. So she bought several balls, and that night, when Miss Susie made her report, the old eyes looking up from the pillow were not quite so fierce. Sister Gushing spread the news that Miss Susie's notions had not gone up and so the little shop became busier and busier. All of the notions were rapidly selling out and Miss Susie was really going to have an order for the next drummer who came along.

Miss Susie put the bolts of dry-goods which had never sold out on the counter, hoping now that they surely would go, but no one wanted those odd shades of calico and cretonne even at the cheaper price. And every night the old eyes demanded of Miss Susie whether those goods had been sold and she had to admit that they had not. They were getting to be a regular elephant on her hands.

One day, Sister Gushing came in to buy yarn for the Komo Aid Society. The Society was going to make a lot of comforts that winter. In her thoughtless, cordial way, she said: "Come, join the Aid, Miss Susie. You never do get out."

"There's mother and the store," feebly protested Miss Susie.

"You ought to do some church work," insisted Sister Gushing.

"I know, I know," admitted Miss Susie, "but it just seems like I can't get out." And her hands trembled in her agitation, as she wrapped up the yarn.

After Sister Gushing had gone out of the store, Miss Susie leaned on the pile of calicoes which never would sell, and stared gloomily out of the window. She would like to join the Aid, but no one knew better than she how impossible that was. Then she had an inspiration. She would join the Aid. She could get Betty Sharp to tend the store and care for her mother on those afternoons. If she joined that Aid, they would buy her cretonnes and calicoes for the comforts they were making. The goods would be cheaper and as long as it was for poor people, no one would care if they were not so nice. And Miss Susie had a further inspiration. She would raise the price on those goods until it would be a little cheaper than Deacon Potter charged for his new things and would also give her a much greater profit. Only Miss Susie knew how desperate was the need of money, for she had had to use the money from the sales of the notions for food, and now unless she could sell these goods, she would have nothing with which to lay in more stock. Miss Susie had not told her mother of this trouble. She was too afraid of those fierce old eyes, which seemed to accuse her so unjustly.

So Miss Susie got Betty Sharp to tend the shop and she joined the Aid Society for the sole purpose of selling her goods. And she began an immediate campaign to that end. Now, Sister Potter had always bought materials for the Aid and when she heard that Miss Susie was trying to get that trade, she was very hurt and told several of her most particular friends about it. They all agreed that Miss Susie's goods were not fit for the poor, and even if they were cheaper, the Aid certainly ought to buy at Deacon Potter's store where it always had bought. These particular friends told yet others, and finally, the Aid was divided into two rival camps, the Potterites and the Susieites. Now, Aunt Nancy Lovelock was president of the Aid and she was greatly worried over the trouble. Both sides came to her with their stories, which had grown, and tried to get her sympathy and influence. But she held her peace.

Finally, the day came when the Aid was to decide about buying materials. Every member came who possibly could. At first the meeting was very stiff and silent. No one wanted to speak. It is often true that women will say lots of things behind each other's backs that they would not say right out in meeting. Finally Sister Brown got up and said she had a little matter to present to the Aid. She said that she had found a place where they could buy "real good materials" at a greatly reduced price, and she thought the Aid "ought to take advantage of that opportunity regardless of what some members might think, because the Aid is spending for the Lord and we ought to take due care of the Lord's money."

Then Sister Potter got up and explained how the Deacon had always tried to do the right thing by the Aid and what good materials he had and how they ought to stay by him. She sat down wiping her eyes, for it had cost her a good deal to speak out her opinion in public. Then one after another said their say, now on the side of saving money for the Lord and supporting Miss Susie, and now on the side of standing by the Deacon, who had always treated them right.

Aunt Nancy sat and listened and she certainly longed for the wisdom of Solomon to help her save the Aid from hopeless dissension. Finally, when all had had their say, she got up and began to talk to them in her kind, thoughtful way. She talked about team work and how necessary it was for the individual members to submit their wishes to the general good of the Aid. She talked about love, and the danger of personal rivalry. She racked her brain to think of words that would bring the dissenting factions together.

As she talked, Miss Susie sat in her corner, only half listening, for she was seeing the fierce old eyes of her mother, commanding her to get rid of those goods. Miss Susie had sort of a one-track mind and when she got an idea firmly fixed in it, it was hard for her to give up. And she dared not give up this time, for that meant ruin to her. She would never dare look into her mother's eyes again. So she sat with head bowed, trying not to hear Aunt Nancy, determined that she would not be the one to give in. But presently, she could not keep her head down. She looked up and saw Aunt Nancy looking right at her. And Aunt Nancy's eyes were kind; love was shining out of them and a great concern for the good of the Aid. Those kind, loving eyes fascinated Miss Susie, and as she gazed into them, gradually she lost the fear of her mother's dark hard ones that had led her so far astray, and suddenly she felt that she could not sit still any longer. Right in the middle of Aunt Nancy's talk, she got up, trembling, it is true, but penitent and ready to confess.

"I am wrong," she said. "You ladies can't imagine how wrong I have been. I—I joined the Aid just to get you to buy my goods. I didn't join to help. And I raised the price so I could make more money. I know the goods isn't worth much, but I just had to sell it. Times have been so hard. I have caused all this trouble. I am sorry and I want you to forgive me. I'm going back to the shop and I won't bother you any more."

Miss Susie sank down, frightened at what she had said, but with peace stealing over her. Aunt Nancy was beside her instantly with arms around her, and Miss Susie's tired head found such a resting-place as it had never had before. Sister Potter was on the other side patting her shoulder and all the rest crowded about, in one mind, and that was to comfort Miss Susie, and all dissension was forgotten.

"I won't sell the goods. I'll give them to you if you want them," sobbed Miss Susie. "They aren't worth much."

"Never mind, never mind. We are going to help you out," cooed Aunt Nancy.

And it is needless to add that the little shop became more prosperous. Miss Susie lost the fear of the fierce, old eyes of her mother, which gradually grew less fierce: and the Aid worked in harmony that year.

en that many might testify as to how the meeting had impressed them. It was generally conceded as being "the best ever." Some one referred to the meeting as "The Freeville Meeting."

And now, since our "Macedonian cry" from Freeville has been so well heeded, we feel like thanking our Heavenly Father that the way is being provided for work in the New York field.

The recent purchasers of farms in our immediate part of the New York field, have come from seventeen States. There have not been as many Brethren as should be. Now, since our needs of a churchhouse have been so fully met, we anticipate that many of our members will soon cast their lot with us and help us to win this fair land to a saving knowledge of the Gospel of our Blessed Redeemer. At present we number three families. Ten of these are members. There are three ministers. Another family is coming in the spring from Maryland, they having already bought their farm.

We anxiously await the coming of Eld. J. L. Mahon, of Indiana, who begins evangelistic services in our new church Nov. 16. At the morning service that day we expect to dedicate the house to the worship of God. Bless his holy name! F. L. Baker.

Freeville, N. Y.

STERLING, ILLINOIS

Sterling church held her first Rally Day Nov. 9. Growth in every department is noticed with encouragement. Bro. J. E. Miller gave the children a splendid talk and in the evening his well-selected views of Armenia were intensive in description, and listened to by a large audience. An offering of $27.23 was taken to be used for expenses of the day—the balance to go to Armenian Relief. Everybody was well pleased, and prospects for a larger Sunday-school enrollment are promising.

Nov. 3, at our regular business meeting, Sunday-school officers for the coming year were elected, with Bro. Frank Slater as superintendent. Owing to a lack of time, adjournment followed, and the balance of the business was finished on the evening of Nov. 10, when one was reinstated.

Our love feast will be held Sunday evening, Nov. 30, at 6 o'clock, at which time several deacons are to be elected. The church decided on the continued effort of our pastor and wife for another year. We adopted the church offering single envelope system of giving.

Evidences of unity, growth and progress prevail, and the Sterling church is reaching upward in the Forward Movement in education and missions. Our juniors are eager in the reading of the Mission Study Course books. The adult Mission Study Class is planning big things as soon as the books arrive. A committee was appointed to look for a singing-class teacher, as several of our good singers and others want better training.

Mrs. Harry DeArmie.

JALALPOR NOTES, INDIA

The enrollment in our day-school and boarding-school has increased, and the attendance at the Sunday services has been steadily climbing upward. We feel that praise is due the Father for this added interest shown by many of the people.

During the last few weeks the enemy has been making unusual efforts to injure the work. One Sunday morning, a few weeks ago, one of our Christian teachers from Machad came to church and brought word that plans had been made to break up our school in that village. One man in the village, who is wealthy, had provided a house for a school, and had already hired a teacher. Arrangements were completed to begin school the following morning. Though the people who had been sending their children to our school, did not wish to take them out, yet this man had succeeded in threatening them until they promised to do so.

When the word reached us, one of the Christians here, who had taught in that village for five years, went at once to see what could be done to quiet the enemy. Another also went to Bulsar at once, to inform Bro. Eby of the situation, and to try to get in touch with the educational inspector. The Lord wonderfully helped in this matter, and the leader in the opposition promised to desist from his purpose.

Bro. Eby made a special trip, to see the educational inspector, who promised that the school will be registered under the Government before the close of the year. This will safeguard us from any similar attacks in the future. If this school is registered, then the Government will recognize no other school that might be started in the village, so it would not be very easy for an enemy to carry on another school.

The educational inspector is a Christian, so he will do all that he can for our work.

From this same village the women have asked repeatedly for visits from us, and arrangements have been made to go to this village the coming Sunday and hold a service. Though the adversaries attempt to overthrow the work, there are open doors.

Our number here has recently been increased by the coming of eighteen of our Christians who are preparing to take the vernacular final examination. The passing of this examination admits the student to the Government Training College.

A number from this class have entered the Government school here, and this has aroused to greater activity some of the opposers to Christianity. A few, who are against our work, learned of the intention of our Christians to enter the school, and they at once began to protest. They said that if our Christians entered the school, they would take their children out of school.

This opposition began about ten years ago. A Christian teacher from a neighboring mission was teaching in the Government school at this place. He had a boy with him as a servant. One day, when this boy was asked regarding his caste he said, jokingly: "I am a Dherd" (this is a class of the outcastes or untouchables). Some of the village women overheard this and at once the bitterest enmity was aroused, for, of course, the Christians were at once put down as "untouchables." Protest was made and the Government heard it, and dismissed the teacher. This gives the enemy hope that they may again gain the victory over the Christians.

A number of our students entered the Government school several days ago. Immediately several children were taken out of school. Eight men of the village banded themselves together to go to the headmaster to enter a protest, but so far we have not heard that they have visited him. The teachers and the educational inspector promise to stand by us. We dare not retreat and take these students out of the school, or the people will regard the Christians as being "untouchables" and lasting injury to the work will result. (These untouchable classes are not allowed to sit in the same room with the other children in the Government schools.)

All are awaiting the outcome of events with interest. We are earnestly praying that God may be glorified through it all and that, even though it may, at the present, mean much trouble and opposition, in the end the cause of the Kingdom may be advanced.

Our buildings are overflowing and our people are living in very crowded quarters. We can scarely accommodate the crowd at our Sunday services, and more room is needed for this too. A temporary shelter has been provided for the students who recently came. Building will likely begin here in a few weeks to provide living quarters for some of our teachers. This will still leave us without a suitable room for our church services, but we hope that later on we may be able to build more.

Sister Shumaker has been trying to arrange that the girls in the boarding-school be taught to do the common household tasks that will need to be done when they care for their own homes. One of these duties is the grinding of the grain. Mills were provided, and one night, soon after, Sister Shumaker was wakened from her sleep about two o'clock in the morning by the sound of the mills. The girls had gotten up and were having great fun grinding grain. Can you exceed that for industry? We only wish they were always so industrious as that in the daytime. In a few minutes the housemaster's voice was heard, and the fun abruptly came to an end. He also disliked to have his slumbers disturbed at such an untimely hour. Since then the girls are repressing their enthusiasm in grinding sufficiently to restrict their labor to the waking hours.

Later Developments

Bro. Long came to help in the situation that is existing regarding the Government school. After visiting the school and talking with some of those who know

OUR FIRST MEETING WITH THE MISSION BOARD

We enjoyed a very pleasant and profitable meeting with the Mission Board of the great District of North Dakota, Eastern Montana and Western Canada. On Tuesday evening, Nov. 11, Eld. George Strycker, of Vidora, Canada, President of the Board, and Eld. O. A. Myer, of Williston, N. Dak., arrived at my house. The next morning Bro. George C. Deardorff, of Rock Lake, N. Dak., arrived. Owing to the cold, stormy weather, Bro. S. W. Burkhart, of Zion, N. Dak., did not arrive until Wednesday evening. Bro. Burkhart is a charter member of the first congregation of the Church of the Brethren, organized in North Dakota.

On Wednesday evening our members had planned to give Bro. Ellis Wagoner (a minister who moved into our midst last September, and who has been under the hand of affliction for some time) a pleasant surprise. About twenty-five of us, including the members of the Mission Board, met in Bro. Wagoner's home and presented him with some of the necessaries of life. After a social conversation and some spiritual singing, Bro. Strycker gave some reminiscenees of his first experience in church work in North Dakota, which were very interesting.

On Thursday the Board held its meeting in our home. It was a husy day for them. They had a large volume of business to transact.

Thursday evening our members met at the church for counell meeting. The members of the Board assisted. The business of the meeting was transaeted very pleasantly. Bro. Strycker remained over Sunday, and preached for us, giving us some strong spiritual food.

Minot is a mission, supported by the Board. I took charge of the work here Oct. 1. The future for Minot looks good to me. Bro. D. M. Shorb, the District Evangelist, has come in for the winter, and is assisting us in the work. Bro. Wagoner, who has been afflicted for some time, is recovering nieely.

Bro. G. I. Michael, of Kenmare, N. Dak., the manager of the Child Rescue work of our Distriet, has made us a short hut very pleasant call since we located here. Any members or ministers passing this way, are cordially invited to stop off and visit us. I am located at 512 Ninth Avenue, N. E., and the latchstring of my door is always hanging on the outside. My home will he yours while you are in Minot.

Our church bas adopted a plan of systematic giving, and will try to do her part in the "Five-Year Forward Movement." Brethren, pray for the work and the workers at Minot! Leander Smith.

Box 632, Minot, North Dakota.

THE TRAINING SCHOOL

The training school for religious leaders, to he conducted at Bridgewater from Nov. 24 to Dec. 20, has elicited numerous inquiries. Some of these have been answered, but as the interest seems to be general, a brief explanation of the plan through the "Messenger" may not be amiss.

This work was started last year as a sort of experiment. A two weeks' session was held in February, and the work met with such favor that there has been a decided demand for more work this year. For the present session the scope of the work has been broadened. It is taken over from the Sunday School Board of the District by the College, at the former's recommendation, and the territory adjacent to the College, in Virginia and West Virginia, is heing solicited in its interests.

The work has grown out of an ohvious need. It is evident that one of the greatest hindrances to our best progress in religious education is seen in the want of qualified teachers in the Sunday-schools. This is not a local condition, hut is general. It is not confined to the Church of the Brethren, hut the same condition obtains in all the churches. A recognition of this urgent need has suggested this plan of helping to meet it.

Intensive study of just those practical things, that give instruction and inspiration of the most helpful sort, is provided. Most of the teachers in our various Sunday-schools recognize their limitations as teachers and yet, for obvious reasons, the great majority of them are not able to go away from home for any extended course of study. Many of them, however, are so situated that they can arrange to get away for a few weeks, and make use of such opportunity as the training-school provides.

The course of study, as outlined, contemplates a four weeks' session, running through three successive years. The work is graded and is intended to cover those things most vitally important to religious workers. Nearly one-third of all the work required is in direct Bible study, hut elementary psychology and pedagogy, missions, history of the Church of the Brethren, Sunday-school administration, and so on, are also given their proper share. Four full weeks, of six days in the week, with classes running sixty-minute periods, will enahle a student to take twenty-four hours of recitation in a suhject each session. Carrying a schedule of five classes, will enable him to complete one hundred and twenty hours of work in four weeks. Three such sessions will give a total of three hundred and sixty hours. The one completing this work will be awarded an appropriate certificate, showing the work done.

It is also provided that some work will be given by members of the college faculty in the home churches, where this is desired—this work being accredited on the course. Brief institutes may be arranged in accordance with this plan, where certain phases of the work may thus he taken hy people at their homes. It is our desire to make it as practically helpful and to reach as large a number of persons as possihle. Of course, only a limited part of the course can he taken in this way.

It is further arranged that under certain conditions the work of the regular Sunday-school classes may he counted on the course. This will he counted aecording to the time given to the work, followed by an examination such as is given in all cases. Necessarily, definite requirements for the teaching facilities have been prescrihed. Further stipulations regarding the course are specified in the circular announcing the plans.

Another factor of interest and evident helpfulness will he the department of model teaching. Each week of the training-school the teachers of the different departments will be arranged in classes, and a model lesson will he taught hy an experienced teacher. So, in addition to acquiring information that may be helpful in teaching a class, an actual demonstration of how to do the work is provided.

The plan of the work is to make the training-school self-supporting hut no more. A small tuition fee is charged, along with the cost for room and hoard. All expenses will be kept at a minimum, in order to induce as many as possihle to avail themselves of the work. A factor of special interest will be a course of evening lectures—ahout two each week. These are free to the school and the puhlic, and will represent some of the best talent of the church and of the Sunday-school field.

While the present plans have been worked out with considerahle care, and with the idea of making the work permanent, it is possihle that certain phases of it may be changed in the light of further experience. The one aim, kept constantly in mind, is the promotion of the religious work of the church, and the preparation of the greatest number of workers to hecome leaders in this important field of service. Temperance Reform in India cil recommended that in case it was found feasible, the Temperance Committee prepare a definite textbook on temperance and prohihition, to be used in schools. The Council passed a resolution, urging the Government to place added restrictions on the sale of liquor, looking forward to the complete prohibition of the traffic in this country. Since the resolution originated at our Vyara District Conference, it was supported by a strong speech from Bro. Stover, and received the unanimous vote of the Counell.

The amount of toddy, country liquor and foreign liquors consumed in Bombay Presidency, last year, was 16,441,290 gallons, which is 1.02 gallons per capita. Thirtcen distilleries, thirty-eight warehouses and 3,116 liquor shops are reported. There is a great variation in different districts, of amount consumed and number of shops. In Broach District there are forty-eight shops in all, or one to 6,390 people. In Surat District there are 386 shops or one to 1,695 people. In Thana District there are 382 shops, or one to 2,310 people. In the Presidency there is onc shop to 5,171 units of the population. In Broach District 170,605 gallons of the three kinds of liquor, mentioned above, were used, or .59 gallons per capita. In Surat District 6,342,001 gallons were used, or 5.57 gallons per capita. In Thana District the amount consumed was 2,593,281 gallons, or 2.94 gallons per capita. In the last two districts named, fully three-fourths of the amount was toddy. As the area in which our mission is doing work has a population of 1,185,027, living in part or wholly in five native states, not counted in Bombay Presidency, and also in certain sections of the above-named districts, the following figures, as to the number of liquor-shops of all kinds in the different areas of our stations, with the exception of Vada and Umalla, are in part or wholly approximated from that of adjoining territory, or the District of which it is a part, since actual figures were secured for only about half the area under consideration: Umalla liquor shops number 131; Anklesvar, 21; Jalalpor, 167; Vyara, 306; Ahwa, 19; Bulsar, 178; Dahanu, 89; Palghar, 40; Vada, 9. This makes a total of 960, or one shop to 1,234 people. The Native States contain two-fifths (494,589) of the population, and two-thirds (638) of the liquor shops in our territory, which makes 775 people to one shop, while in British territory there are 2,144 people to every shop.

The increase in the sale of country liquor, throughout the Presidency, last year was 5.5 per cent over the previous year. The increase in toddy sales was 4.9 per cent, that of foreign liquors, beer, wine, etc., was 12.3 per cent. The number of shops given does not include the tree-foot booths, nor toddy trees, to say nothing of the intoxicating drugs largely opium, of which 57,025 pounds, an increase of 17.1 per cent over previous year, was sold in the Presidency.

Temperance activity, outside of Bombay City, has placed practically no checks on intemperance among the masses. Such is the statement of the Excise Report for last year, stating further: "There is no doubt, however, that if temperance societies, composed of influential persons, were organized in all the principal towns, and if temperance propaganda were actively carried on, and counter attractions provided in the way of tea-shops, the drink evil would, to a great extent, he mitigated among the adult population, and avoided among the rising generation."

While the above statement, to my mind, fails to justify Government in its present excise policy, yet it should he an encouragement to constructive temperance reform, in educating the people to abstain from drink. Whether prohihition comes early or late, a great amount of temperance education is essential—of which there is great need and for which an opportunity is just as great! Remember there are nine liquor-shops in our territory to every one of our 106 mission shools.

Leadership is the great need in this country and the help that American missionaries may give to this reform, will be of the greatest importance.

For several months the Anti-Saloon League has been sending the "American Issue" to each of our ministers, which is greatly appreciated. A Temperance Library, supplied with the latest and hest books and other helps available, ought to be collected for our mission. It would be invaluahle in the production of temperance literature in the vernacular, of which there is great need. At present we have nothing, in the way of temperance readings and recitations for programs. Books on temperance, which may be no longer needed in America, would do good in high school, college and other English-speaking institutions. Above all, let there be earnest prayer that India may be redeemed from the evil influence of strong drink!

Notes From Our Correspondents

As cold water to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country

ALABAMA

Mobile.—Again the Mission Board of our congregation, at Fruitdale and Citronelle—for the two work together—have changed my work. I have been at Fruitdale and Citronelle one Sunday each a month, now my work will be two Sundays in the city and two at Brewton. We wish to get our work ready for the brother sent by the General Mission Board, who will be with us in January. Some have written us for work here in the city. Just now I could use a brother who has experience as a practical carpenter, one who can superintend the construction and repair of houses, but he must come soon, or the place will be filled. We still have homes for rent or sale at Brewton, and they need loyal workers there. Our communion at Fruitdale was very pleasant, and we trust profitable. Should any brethren pass through Mobile, do not forget us at No. 1 Owen's Lane.—Wm. E. White, Mobile, Ala., Nov. 15.

CALIFORNIA

Chico.—Brd. Andrew Blickenstaff and wife, of McFarland, Calif., came up us Nov. 5, in the interest of the Oakland Mission, for the building of a church. We held our communion Nov. 8, with Bro. Blickenstaff officiating. He also preached for us Sunday morning. Bro. Chas. M. Yearout has taken charge of the work at this place. We have recently received ten members by letter.—Sarah E. Rife, Chico, Calif., Nov. 12.

Golden Gate Mission.—The last week in October we enjoyed having with us for a few days Brother and Sister Blickenstaff, of McFarland, who are soliciting our District for the churchhouse for the Golden Gate mission. On Wednesday evening Bro. J. E. Jarboe gave us a very helpful and much appreciated sermon. Nov. 8 Brother and Sister W. H. Swadley, of Chicago, came to us. On the following day the preaching hour was taken up by Sister Swadley, who gave a talk to the children. In the afternoon she talked to the mothers and daughters. That evening and each evening until Friday she gave us an inspiring address. We will be able to do better work for the Master because of having had Brother and Sister Swadley with us.—Ivy Wagner, Oakland, Calif., Nov. 14.

Rio Linda.—We had with us, last evening, Brother and Sister Blickenstaff, of McFarland, who came in behalf of the Oakland Mission. Bro. Blickenstaff gave us a very interesting talk. We are glad to have the brethren and sisters stop with us when passing by. Any one wishing to change location, and desiring to get close to a small church, to help in the Master's cause, will please come, or write and see what we have here. There is a big field in which to work in and around Sacramento. We have a small church organized, with about fifteen members. We have purchased a building for our churchhouse, and will move into it in the near future.—Golda Whipple, Sacramento, Calif., Nov. 15.

COLORADO

Cheraw.—On Saturday, Nov. 1, Eld. J. J. Yoder, of McPherson, Kans., and Eld. Homer Ullom, of Wiley, Colo., met with the members living near Cheraw, to organize a church. There are thirty-eight members living in this community who constitute the charter members. The following officers were chosen: Bro. David Hamm, elder; Sister Cora Boone Hensard, clerk; Sister Annie Benge, correspondent. At present we have no churchhouse, but take part in Union Sunday-school and church services in the Progressive Mennonite church, two miles west of this place. Cheraw is a growing little town in the Arkansas Valley. It is the trade center of a rich, irrigated country of abundant opportunity for any one who would like to live in sunny Colorado. We shall be glad to have many more of our members locate here. Lots have already been purchased in Cheraw, on which to build a churchhouse. We hope to have one home completed, by June, 1920. It is the intention of this church to secure a minister to give his full time to the work.—Annie Benge, Cheraw, Colo., Nov. 13.

Rocky Ford church recently enjoyed the visits of several brethren. In July Bro. M. S. Frantz gave a series of inspiring sermons. A few weeks later Bro. Virgil C. Finnell gave us several instructive lectures on the rural church problem and on Sunday-school work. Our District Sunday-school Secretary, Bro. Deeter, of McPherson, was also with us over one Sunday. Nov. 2 Bro. Geo. Rogers, of Altoona, Pa., gave us two helpful sermons. Bro. Paul Hoover, of Indiana, had charge of the song service and also conducted a singing class during the following week. Two were baptized during the summer. We have a large number of children and young people in our congregation and these keep the pastor, Sunday-school teachers and Christian Worker officers busy, giving them something to do. Next Sunday, Nov. 23, will be observed as Rally Day. Thanksgiving services will be held in the morning of the 27th. Our Sunday-school is planning to give the "White Gift" service at Christmas time. Last spring a par-sonage was purchased, one-half block south of the church, where our pastor, Bro. A. G. Crosswhite, and wife, are at home to all who wish to call on them.—Mrs. O. C. Franz, Rocky Ford, Colo., Nov. 17.

FLORIDA

Bethel.—We expect Eld. R. P. McCune, late of Ottawa, Kans., and now at Sebring, Fla., to commence a two weeks' series of meetings in our congregation Dec. 7, closing with a love feast Dec. 20, with probably an all-day meeting and a basket dinner. We are sorry that we can not be present, to help in this inspiring effort, as wife and I expect to leave about Dec. 1, to visit our son, A. B. Crist, and wife, in Los Angeles, Calif.—I. H. Crist, Middleburg, Fla., Nov. 17.

ILLINOIS

Decatur.—Since our last report more of our brethren, who are retiring from active rural life, have located in our midst with their families. They assisted in very materially in carrying on the recent District Conference held here, for which we are indeed grateful. We contemplate holding a series of meetings here, starting on Wednesday evening, Nov. 19, with our pastor, Eld. J. W. Grater, in charge, assisted by Sister Mary Horn as song director. We solicit correspondence from any of our brethren, engaged in evangelistic work, who would like to include Decatur in their itinerary for the fall of 1920.—O. G. Davis, 231 E. Olive Street, Decatur, Ill., Nov. 15.

Dixon church enjoyed a season of refreshing during a series of revival services Oct. 12-26, Bro. Harvey Snell, of Rockford, being the evangelist. He preached eighteen splendid sermons. Eleven were added to the church by baptism. The semiannual love feast on Sunday, Nov. 2, was well attended. Eld. Daniel Beckman, the elder in charge, officiated. Bro. J. J. Johnson will continue to serve as our pastor for another year. We will have services on Thanksgiving Oxy, with a social basket dinner together.—Mrs. J. J. Johnson, 215 Madison Avenue, Dixon, Ill., Nov. 14.

INDIANA

Goshen City.—Our attendance goal for Rally Day was 300, but we went over the top with 329. The collection of $58.68 will be used to help in the remodeling of the basement. After the Sunday-school hour an excellent program was rendered, consisting of recitations and songs by the children as well as talks by the superintendent, pastor and one of the teachers, with music by the Harmony Male Quartette and chorus. Now, since we have room for it, an Intermediate Department has been organized, with Sister Madge Gump as superintendent. At a council meeting, held Nov. 13, and presided over by Eld. David Metzler, one letter was read and four were granted. Church and Sunday-school for the next year, with Bro. David Metzler, superintendent. The Union Sunday-school and Christian Workers' Association of the Elkhart, Goshen and South Bend churches held its semiannual meeting Nov. 14, at the Bethel church, South Bend. The association has been more thoroughly organized, with Sister Cora V. Wise, of South Bend, president. A constitution was adopted at this meeting. Among the speakers on the program were Eld. Otho Bigler, Burton Metzler, Bro. Ebersole and Bertha Stahley. The next meeting will be held the first Sunday in May.—Beulah Manahan, Goshen, Ind., Nov. 17.

Killbuck.—Oct. 25 occurred our love feast, which was well attended by members from surrounding congregations. The ministerial help was ample and the services were very spiritual. Nov. 25 Bro. John P. Bowman, of Flint, Mich., will commence a series of meetings at the Antioch house, to continue at least two weeks. We are expecting Bro. Bowman to locate with us as resident elder about March 1.—H. E. Millapaugh, Muncie, Ind., Nov. 20.

Loon Creek.—Oct. 12 the Young Men's Bible Class and the Loyal Daughters' Class gave a program which was appreciated by all. Oct. 19 we held our love feast. Services present were Brethren Lemuel and Goodmiller, Aaron Moss, who officiated, O. W. Paul and B. O. Hirt. We had planned to have our Rally Day Oct. 19, but on account of smallpox prevailing in the community, it was postponed indefinitely. Nov. 1 we held our council meeting, with Bro. D. W. Paul presiding. Two letters were granted. Bro. Everett Paul was elected Sunday-school superintendent for next year. Since Bro. S. Z. Smith could not hold our revival meeting in Mail, our pastor will do so.—Mrs. B. D. Hirt, Huntington, Ind., Nov. 18.

Lower Deer Creek church met in council Nov. 1, with Eld. J. G. Stinebaugh presiding. Sister Ella Oilling was elected Sunday-school superintendent and other Sunday-school church officers were also chosen for the coming year.—Ella Oilling, Oelphi, Ind., Nov. 19.

Mississinawa.—We have been having some interesting special meetings. Sunday, Nov. 2, Rev. E. S. Shumaker, of Indianapolis, President of the Anti-Saloon League, gave a good lecture, after which pledges and temperance literature were given out. Good work that work. Nov. 9 our pastor gave a fine stereopticon lecture on China and our mission workers. Appropriate songs were rendered by our young folks. Last Sunday the Union Sunday-school was started at the church. It was divided into four parts. One is advanced, having studied missions before. Good interest was manifested and we expect these meetings to be a great help to the church. Our Thanksgiving services will be held on Sunday morning, Nov. 30. Our Sisters' Aid Society has interesting, well-attended all-day meetings, once each month, at the homes. We are planning to help interest and enlighten the people in the Lacust Grove house. Send our Chicago missions on Thanksgiving Day. Good attendance and interest manifested at Sunday-school and at regular preaching services, and we have cottage prayer meetings on two evenings of each week.—Alice E. Miller, Gaston, Ind., Nov. 19.

Nettie Creek.—Eld. B. F. Petry came to us Oct. 12, to begin a three weeks' series of meetings at the Locust Grove house. Two accepted Christ. Nov. 8 we had a called council meeting. Elders J. W. Rarick, E. O. Norris and L. L. Teeter were present. Brethren Clessie Miller, Perry Hoover and Martin Hoover were ordained to the eldership. We elected Estol McCollough, Sebo Lanncrd, Charles and Frank Wampler to the deacon's office. Four letters were received at this meeting.—Chas. W. Miller, Bagerstown, Ind., Nov. 13.

Notice to the Churches and Mission Workers of Middle Indiana.—Bro. Ernest Miller, of Huntington, having gone South for the benefit of his wife's health, has resigned as Secretary-Treasurer of the District Mission Board, and the remaining members of the Board have appointed Bro. B. C. Metzger to fill the vacancy. Bro. Miller, having previously been a member of the Board, are hereby notified to communicate with Bro. Metzger.—J. G. Stinebaugh, President, Converse, Ind., Nov. 19.

IOWA

Coon River.—Sunday, Oct. 19, Bro. Sargent began a series of meetings, which closed Oct. 31, with one conversion. Sister Sadie Manges conducted the song service. Thursday, Nov. 6, they again met for prayer services and baptism.—Mrs. Zona B. Ott, Panora, Iowa, Nov. 15.

Fairview church met in council Oct. 5, with Bro. Ogden presiding. The reports of the visiting brethren were good. One letter was granted. Bro. J. H. Brower closed a successful two weeks' series of meetings in October, when three accepted Christ and were baptised Nov. 1 just before our love feast. Bro. Abram Wolfe and Bro. Glotfelty, of Batavia, Iowa, were with us. The latter delivered the examination sermon. Bro. Wolfe gave two interesting sermons on Sunday, which were appreciated by all. He was with us again Nov. 16 and gave a few minutes' talk. Sunday, Nov. 2, J. W. Lawrence was elected to the deacon's office.—Ola Tarrence, Udell, Iowa, Nov. 17.

Muscatine.—Bro. I. W. Brubaker, of Prairie City, Iowa, and Bro. A. M. Stine, of Adel, Iowa, both of the Mission Board, met with us Oct. 25, to help us with our work and plan for the future. Bro. A. M. Stutsman was appointed foreman until we can secure a minister, and is carrying on the work very well. Nov. 9 Bro. Irving Haughtelin, of Panora, Iowa, gave us two splendid sermons. Nov. 18 Bro. Morris Eikenberry, of Dallas Center, Iowa, gave us two helpful sermons, which we appreciated very much.—Mrs. Emily Wies, Muscatine, Iowa, Nov. 18.

Salem.—Oct. 11 we met in the evening for our love feast, at which Bro. Harry Rogers, of Mt. Etna, officiated. Visiting members from Greenfield and Osceola were present. Oct. 26 our Sunday-school gave a very instructive temperance program. An offering of $9 was taken and sent to the Lincoln-Lee Anti-Saloon League. Many pledges were also sent in by our Sunday-school pupils. Recently Bro. H. F. Caskey has given us several addresses, which were appreciated. Some time ago Bro. Jas. Coughlnour, of Ankeny, gave a very uplifting message. Bro. Rogers, of Mt. Etna, delivered an able evening sermon to us Oct. 26.—Mrs. Chas. J. Wray, Prescott, Iowa, Nov. 15.

KANSAS

Fredonia church closed her series of meetings, with Bro. W. R. Arga bright, of Fairview, Mo., in charge. Although there were no accessions we know that much good was done. Our former elder having resigned, we held a council Nov. 9 and chose Bro. Reed, of Galesburg, Kans., for the coming year. Other church officers were elected at the same time. Our communion services were held the same evening. Bro. Argabright officiated, assisted by Brethren Reed and Lentz. Recently we had Sister Lydia E. Taylor lecture to us on the "Simple Life," which we much appreciated. As yet we have no resident pastor, whom we so greatly need. Any one wishing to change locations, please consider this place.—Mrs. W. H. Sell, Fredonia, Kans., Nov. 13.

Garden City.—We have just closed the first week of a splendid revival, conducted by Brother and Sister H. F. Crist, of Colorado Springs, Colo. The interest and attendance are good, and now, at the close of this first week, one has come forward to receive baptism. Several others have rededicated themselves to the service of the Master. According to present plans we will expect to close our revival Nov. 30, and have our council and communion services Oct. 1.—H. O. Michael, Garden City, Kans., Nov. 17.

Independence.—Oct. 26 Sister Lydia Taylor gave a forceful lecture for the church and its cause. Nov. 16, after an interesting Sunday-school hour, we listened to a fine sermon by Bro. Geo. M. Holmes on the subject, "Consecration and Reconsecration." In the evening the Christian Workers' Meeting, led by Sister Nora Harlow, was followed by another good sermon by Bro. W. H. Miller. At the close as the invitation was extended, four came forward for baptism. Since our last report one has been reclaimed. We now have cottage prayer meetings each Tuesday evening, also the regular prayer meetings at the church on Wednesday evening and the Christian Workers' Meeting each Sunday afternoon. The Gospel Team holds a meeting on Saturday evenings at the church.—Pella Carson, Independence, Kans., Nov. 17.

Larned.—Eld. Lentz arrived in Larned Sept. 1, to take up pastoral work in the city church. We found that some loyal members have been keeping up the work as best as they could, without the aid of a pastor. At our business meeting the writer was chosen delegate to District Meeting, which was held at Galesburg, Kans. The Christian Workers' Meeting was organized with Sister Lovey Zook as president. Also a midweek Bible Study Class, with Sister L. L. Alger as teacher. This class is finding the Epistle to the Romans very interesting and helpful. We held our love feast Nov. 2, with Bro. Talhelm, of Nettleton, Kans., officiating. The south church joined us in this service and all enjoyed it together. Nov. 18 we gave our first stereopticon lecture to interested audiences. We trust the stereopticon will help to increase the attendance and drive the Gospel Message home with added force.—L. L. Alger, Larned, Kans., Nov. 18.

Maple Grove church met in council Nov. 15, with Eld. J. E. Small, of Portia, presiding. We elected our church, Sunday-school and Christian Workers' officers for the coming year: Sister Lizzie Miller, "Messenger" agent; Bro. Floyd Miller, Sunday-school superintendent; Bro. Ankenmann, superintendent of Christian Workers' Meeting. Capt. Wiard will give a series of lectures Nov. 17-23, following which Bro. Geo. Eller, of Oberlin, Kans., will assist our pastor, Bro. A. F. Becker, in a series of meetings. We have secured Bro. Nicodemus, of Bethany Bible School, to hold a revival meeting for us in March or April, 1920. One letter was granted.—Anna Cheesmap, Norton, Kans., Nov. 17.

Prairie View church just closed a two weeks' series of meetings, held by Bro. Edw. Sanders, of Abilene, Kans. As a result of his efforts seven were baptized and one awaits the rite. We held our love feast Nov. 15, with Bro. Stewart officiating.—Louie Yiengst, Shalow Water, Kans., Nov. 18.

MARYLAND

Antietam—Our love feast was held in the Welty house Oct. 25 and 26, but not as many were present as usual, owing to the threatening weather. Bro. John J. Johns, of Blue Ridge College, officiated, and preached for us on Sunday morning. A collection was taken for home mission work.—Susanna M. Newcomer, Smithburg, Md., Nov. 19.

MICHIGAN

Long Lake church met in special members' meeting Nov. 15, with Eld. Kreider presiding. Eld. Joseph, of Onekama, was present also. Bro. John H. Landis was elected to the deacon's office. Bro. Rosell, formerly a minister in the Methodist church, was given the privilege of speaking to us. Bro. Rosell has been holding meetings in Traverse City, into the ministry by Bro. Kreider, Sister Rozell will be installed later. We are planning to have an all-day meeting on Thanksgiving Day at the church.—Oollie Shepherd, Manistee, Mich., Nov. 17.

MISSOURI

Pilot Knob.—The writer left home Nov. 1 for the Pilot Knob church, Ark., a mission point in the District of Southwestern Missouri and Northwestern Arkansas. He preached fourteen sermons, including one of a missionary character—the first delivered there for many years. Considering all things, the meetings were a success. The greatest one of the best meetings the Pilot Knob church ever had, the interest being good throughout. Two were baptized and the little band of members strengthened. Land is still cheap and any one wishing to change location and to go where his help is needed, would do well to locate there. Information may be had by corresponding with J. P. Jones, Alpina Pass, Ark. The outlook is good for the building of a church at this place.—H. J. Argabright, Fairview, Mo., Nov. 16.

Sheal Creek—We were glad to have Bro. A. Homberger, of Joplin, Mo., with us in a week of meetings. The attendance was good at most of the meetings, although the weather was unfavorable. Sunday it was thought best to close the meetings.—Virgie Argabright, Fairview, Mo., Nov. 13.

NEW JERSEY

Amwell (N. J.).—The old Amwell church is still doing business for the Lord on the same site where it was founded, which the historian places at about 1738, and has grown up to like proportions as the best one congregation of the Brethren in New Jersey—the Amwell church. Oct. 10, 1893, it was decided to build the present splendid parsonage, where the writer, while conducting a three weeks' revival, had his home with the wide-awake pastor, Bro. H. T. Horse, and his wife. He is ably assisted by Bro. M. B. Miller. Under their joint care the Sunday-school and church work are now going forward. The present house, where the revival was held, is large and well-equipped, having been rebuilt in 1856. Eld. Graybill and wife, formerly in charge here, before going as missionaries to Sweden, made this place one of their last visits, and were warmly greeted in an all-day meeting Oct. 19. In the evening a love feast was held. Bro. Graybill and wife both helped with the service, which was an inspiration to all. While there was much rainy and unpleasant weather, the meetings closed with nine accessions.—W. E. Roop, Westminster, Md., Nov. 12.

NORTH DAKOTA

Milton.—Eld. O. M. Shorb, of Minot, N. Oak., began a two weeks' series of meetings in the East Alma church, near Milton, Oct. 12. We had good crowds, considering the disagreeable weather, and every one seemed to be very much interested. There were no accessions, but we were all uplifted spiritually. We do not have a regular preacher here, and any time any minister passes this way, we hope he will stop to preach to us. The Mission Board has promised us semimonthly meetings next summer, to which we are looking forward. Our meetings were held in the Presbyterian church, as we have no house of our own, but hope we may have one in the near future. There is a great opening for a church here and any members looking for a location would do well to consider this place.—Mrs. A. S. Hawbaker, Milton, N. Oak., Nov. 9.

OHIO

Baker church held her love feast Oct. 25 and the following day Bro. E. E. Eshelman, of Pastoria, Ohio, began a series of meetings, continuing until Nov. 16. Six accepted Christ. The members received much spiritual food and all felt that the meeting was very profitable. Sister Eshelman was here for two weeks and assisted in the meetings.—Minnie M. Snider, Lima, Ohio, Nov. 19.

Canton Center congregation met in members' meeting Nov. 8, with Eld. M. M. Taylor presiding. We decided to hold a revival service next year, and the matter was turned over to a committee. Arrangements were made for a local Sunday-school Board of Control, to have charge of various phases of the work of the Bible School and Christian Workers' organizations. Our weekly prayer services will be continued for another three months, and a committee was appointed to take charge of the work. Officers for the Bible School, Christian Workers' and Sisters' Aid Society were elected. Recently the members surprised our young minister, Bro. Elmer Frick, and wife in their new home. The affair was a miscellaneous shower. At the same time our other young minister, Bro. Jas. Moomaw, who had already left for Manchester College, was remembered by a substantial donation of money. Sunday, Nov. 16, Bro. Howard Keim, of Kemps, Ohio, preached for us. The Young People did well as the older folks, enjoyed his sermon very much.—Rachel A. Mohn, Louisville, Ohio, Nov. 16.

Eagle Creek.—We expect to have a series of meetings next month, with our pastor, Bro. A. F. Wagner, in charge. Some time ago a special offering of over $250 was given for our two young ministers who are in school, Bro. Gale Freed and Bro. Irvin Thomas. We are planning to have a union Thanksgiving meeting to be held in our church this year.—Pearl Bowser, Greenville, Ohio, Nov. 19.

Jonathan Creek.—Bro. G. S. Stransbaugh, of Fredericktown, Ohio, began services Nov. 4 and continued over Sunday, preaching six inspiring sermons. Two were baptised. Our love feast was held on Sunday evening, May 25.—Mary Weisenbarger, Utica, Ohio, Nov. 15.

Ludlow.—The combined council of the Ludlow and Salem congregations met at the churchhouse in Potsdam Nov. 15. Eld. Jesse Stutsman opened the meeting and Eld. S. A. Blessing presided. One letter was received. Bro. Ira Wise was elected trustee; Brethren Howard Oickey and Harry Oelk, Sunday-school superintendents; the writer, Christian Workers' president. An offering was taken for the "Messenger" fund. Sister Lydia Stouffer is conducting a Bible Class at the church.—Mary Weisenbarger, Sharon, Ohio, Nov. 16.

OREGON

Waston.—We just closed an interesting two weeks' series of meetings, with Eld. S. F. Sanger, of Empire, Calif., in charge. Nov. 1 we held our love feast, with fourteen members communing. We feel that the meetings have done much good in building us up spiritually and encouraging us to go forward in the Forward Movement.—Sister Vertie Myers, of Portland, had charge of the song service. She did her part well and, with Sister Gladys Cambliu, also made many visits in the homes, distributing over one hundred tracts. If any readers contemplate a change of location why not make this point a visit? We need true, loyal workers here. Our elder is alone and has more than he is able to do. We will gladly arrange for preaching appointments for those stopping over. Our next council will be held the first Saturday in December.—Mrs. Huldah Mets, Weston, Oregon, Nov. 6.

PENNSYLVANIA

Altoona.—Sunday, Nov. 2, marked the fifteenth anniversary of the pastorate of Bro. W. S. Long and his wife at this place. The day was fittingly celebrated with services appropriate for the occasion. In the morning our pastor preached on the subject, "The Vocation of the Christian Church." Our Sunday-school rendered a fine program over to the representatives of the various departments of church work. They called to our remembrance the work as it existed fifteen years ago, and pointed out the growth and development that has been made along the different lines of church activity. The esteem and appreciation in which our pastor and wife are held was shown when the Sunday-school presented Bro. Long with a bouquet of roses, while Sister Long's class presented Sister Long with roses. Since our last writing six have been received into the church by baptism. Our evangelistic meetings begin Nov. 16, to be conducted by Bro. Geo. W. Flory, of Covington, Ohio. A love feast will be held at the close of the meetings.—Sadie L. Morse, Altoona, Pa., Nov. 12.

Back Creek.—Our love feast was held Oct. 22 at the Upton house, with a large attendance. Bro. Levi Mohler gave a very helpful and interesting sermon in the forenoon, and an examination sermon in the afternoon. The following were elected to the esteem and appreciation in which our pastor and wife are held was shown when the Sunday-school presented Bro. Long with a bouquet of roses, while Sister Long's class presented Sister Long with roses. Since our last writing six have been received into the church by baptism. Our evangelistic meetings begin Nov. 16, to be conducted by Bro. Geo. W. Flory, of Covington, Ohio. A love feast will be held at the close of the meetings.—Sadie L. Morse, Altoona, Pa., Nov. 12.

Back Creek.—Our love feast was held Oct. 22 at the Upton house, with a large attendance. Bro. Levi Mohler gave a very helpful and interesting sermon in the forenoon, and an examination sermon in the afternoon. The following were elected to the ministry: Jas. J. Kurts Miller, Levi Mohler, who officiated, Samuel Stouffer, David Zuck, C. Rush Oellig, Bro. Newcomer, C. H. Steerman and Bro. Flohr. The large house was well filled throughout and the meeting was one long to be remembered.—J. O. Wilson, Greencastle, Pa., Nov. 17.

Mountain Chapel.—Bro. G. S. Batzel, of Yellow Creek, began a series of meetings Oct. 19 and continued till Nov. 2. The meetings were well attended in spite of the weather and had much good. Two made the good choice.—H. W. Simmons, Everett, Pa., Nov. 15.

Rummel.—Our pastor, Bro. A. J. Beeghly, has been with us since Nov. 1. He is very zealous in the interest of the unsaved and in seeing that the "Messenger" finds a welcome in the home in our congregation. Sunday morning we had a program for the Home Department. Special music was prepared and Sister Rosenberger Blough, of Johnstown, gave us a splendid address, which aroused every one present to take a firmer and more faithful stand for the Master. Those who had no conveyance, or lived too far away to walk, were brought in autos, and about two hundred were present. In the evening our pastor addressed us on the subject, "A Young Man's Duty." Very suitable message for Fathers and Sons' Oay. Sunday evening, Nov. 23, our young people will conduct a Thanksgiving program, using the topic in the Christian Worker's Booklet, with special music and recitations added. We held our Rally Oay services Nov. 2, with a good crowd and a splendid program.—Mrs. J. E. Murphy, Rummel, Pa., Nov. 16.

Schuylkill church just closed a revival meeting that began Oct. 25 in the Stronphauer churchhouse, with Bro. Jacob Myer, of Fredericksburg, as evangelist. The meetings were well attended in spite of the unfavorable weather, and were enjoyed by all. One was reclaimed. Nov. 8 and 9, at the close of our meetings, we held our love feast. In the afternoon we held a very interesting Children's Meeting. Bro. W. K. Conner, of Harrisburg, Pa., gave a talk which was well received and appreciated by all.—Mrs. Cora M. Becker, Pine Grove, Pa., Nov. 14.

Shamokin.—Nov. 9 will long be remembered, not only by the members of Shamokin but also by those who came here to enjoy the love feast with us. Bro. Jacob Merkey, of Fredericksburg, Pa., was the other congregations. Eld. Rufus Bucher, of Quarryville, Pa., president of the Mission Board, and Bro. Jacob Merkey, of Fredricksburg, Pa., were the ministers present. They gave us good spiritual food. Bro. Bucher officiated. The attendance was good. Some people were here for the first time. Some ni the members came over nne hundred miles—this being their first viait to this place. All enjoyed their visit very much. We had the largest love feast ever held at this place. All enjoyed it. The work here la moving along nicely and the interest is growing. We ask an interest in your prayers that the the situation, be found out that out of 150 children not more than a third are in school today. But after about ten days there is to be vacatinn in the school, so the authorities think the children are being taken out for effect only. Bro. Long has talked with a number nf the officials and members of the local board, and these are standing by the mission and we are assured that we need fear nothing. Though some excitement may prevail for a while, it begins to look now as though, in the end, a great blessing will result and perhaps this is God's way of healing an old sore. We are grateful for the attitude that is being shown by those who are in authority. A later report will be given. May all result to his glory!

SOUTHERN VIRGINIA

The Southern District of Virginia began its Conference gatherings on Wednesday, Nov. 5, at 3 P. M. At the orgaoization of the Elders' Meeting, about twenty-five were present. The organization resulted as follows: Bro. L. A. Bowman, Moderator; Bro. J. W. Barnhart, Reading Clerk; Bro. I. M. Weddle, Writing Clerk.

At 7:30 begao the Temperance Program. In this, facts and figures were given, showing the great work already accomplished. Our sluggishness in moldiog deeper sentiment was deplored. Only hy great activity can we hope to eradicate the nefarious traffic. This meeting was a great stimulus to more aggressive work.

At 10 o'clock, on Thursday morning, we convened for the Ministerial Meeting. The first speaker emphasized the fact that the stronger should help the weak, as the best way of working our home field. The second speaker, touching on the financing of the work, declared that God does not take our cattle, our wills or our labor, though they be God's, to finance bis work, except with our consent. There must be a willingness to be used. A thoroughly organized church for aggressive work was urged by the third speaker, who advised that, in our numerous organizations, we put to work our young people. He told us how we could distribute our ministers, so as to result in greatest benefit to our District. Send them out—not simply eleet them, and then let them go at random. In times of old, when workers had received power (the proper training and the Holy Spirit), tha Spirit, or church, sent them out.

With the noon hour came the time for a lunch and a season of sociability.

Work was resumed at 2 P. M., when the Forward Movement was discussed. The first speaker discussed: "Why the Forward Movement?" He urged that we get the latent powers to work. The "How," by the second speaker, emphasized planning, praying, working, encouraging. The third speaker touched on "Results." These are more than the imagination can comprehend or tongue can express.

The Sunday-school Meeting, at 7:30, impressed the fact that helps are only to assist us in the better teaching of God's Word. The "Graded Lesson System" was referred to as one of the best ways to success. The Sunday-school teacher's duty on Sunday and between Sundays was also ably discussed.

The District Meeting proper convened on Friday, Nov. 7, at 9 o'clock, with its very interesting discussiona. An enjoyable feature of all these meetings was the presence, interest and help of the many members from the First District of Virginia. We pray that God may ever bless the results of these interesting gatherings!

SOMERSET, PENNSYLVANIA

During the last three weeks there has been one of the greatest revivals ever beld in Somerset County; and the fact that it is only a mission point, makes it seem the greater. Somerset is the county-seat and it was only about four months ago that the brethren who live in this town started a Sunday-school, with sixty-five present the first day. The interest continued to increase so rapidly that they decided to bave a series of meetings. They rented the assembly room of the court house and then secured Bro. J. H. Cassady, of Juniata College, as the evangelist. The meetings began Oct. 12 and continued for three weeks. The interest soon touched all the town and far into the country. Although it rained almost every day of the meetings, the interest grew until the assembly room was filled to overflowing. Some evenings many were turned away and at times 1,200 people were crowded into the room.

This splendid music was a great feature of the meeting. Prof. J. H. Fike, who is county superintendent of schools, was the leader and proved to all that he was not only able to preside over the schools of one nf the largest counties of the State, but that he could wonderfully lead a great chorus, and a large audience in an evangelistic campaign. Forty-two have been received into the church and three are yet to be received. Bro. Cassady's sermons placed us in a better light before the people than we have ever been. Although he preached on some of our specific doctrines,—baptism and the ordinances, etc.—it was done in such a way that none could be offended, but were wonderfully impressed with the truths.

Our entire membership rejoices at the great results. We are now looking for a pastor; also making plans to build a church. They have showed their wisdom and faith in purchasing one of the finest locations in the city, at a cost of $6,000. They have appointed their finance and building committees and are preparing to begin operations at once. Somerset, although a young mission, bids fair to become one of the most prosperous churches of the State. W. P. Speicher.

AKRON, OHIO

During our pastor's absence in a revival meeting in September, Bro. Guy Beach had charge of the services. On one of those Sunday morniogs we had an uplifting sermon by Rev. F. G. Behner, Secretary of the Akron Federation of Churches. Within the last several months, Rev. Sito, a Japanese brother, has given us two interesting addresses. At our fall love feast our pastor, Bro. H. A. Brubaker, officiated. Eleven ministers were present. During the summer eight young ministers were with us, but most of them have gone back to school.

We regret to say that Bro. Brubaker and wife are leaving the pastorate here the first of December, as they expect to take up the work in Pasadena, Calif. They have worked earnestly for several years at this place, and the church has prospered. Arrangements have been made with Bro. G. W. Kieffaber, of Canton, Ohio, to act as temporary pastor until a resident pastor can be secured.

The church met in business session the early part of October, to elect all officers and committees for the coming year's work. Bro. A. F. Shriver was retained as our elder for another year. An impressive part of the service was the election of Bro. Theodore Brumbaugh to the ministry. He and his wife were duly installed. Bro. Brumbaugh will have charge of next Sunday morning's service, as Bro. Brubaker expects to be with the Cleveland church.

Bro. Galen B. Royer will be with us Nov. 22 and 23, in the interest of missionary endeavor.

Alice Tippy Klinger.

MARASH, TURKEY

The following is a report of the work for the month of September. It gives an idea of the magnitude of the work, the number of different people helped, and the ways in which they are being helped. The report, however, does not show nearly all the activities. Bro. Culler says that the work "looms to staggering proportions and this month [October] we shall do even more." They have taken over another orphanage, which was being run by the Armenians, but which had not been giving proper care to the children, of whom there were seventy-three.

In the Industrial Department 669 persons were employed full time; garments made, 3,255; cloth made, 9,150 yards.

Relief to orphans outside of institutions, 2,490 orphans. Clothing given to 670; number of garments distributed, 2,010; total number of persons helped, 3,100.

Orphanages: Beitel, 190 girls; Acorne, 196 girls; Ebenezer, 193 boys; Beitschallum, 310 boys.

During the season we have had 299 women at the Rescue Home, and given them 374 garments.

Hospital bed patients, 107; clinic, 2,378; total people treated in hospital and institutions, 7,066. Outside medical visits, 242; Village of Deungele, 54; Village of Yenije kala, 131. Mrs. A. J. Culler.

SAILING OF INDIA MISSION PARTY

The ordar to sail, for the mission party that left for India last week, came rather suddenly, and the time for final preparation was very short. But, true to missionary life, every one was on hand in time for the departure of the boat. Because of the atrike of the longshoremen, the time of departure was changed several times. First came the word: "Boat will probably sail Nov. 6"; but it did not leave till some time on the 8th.

The requirements for leaving the States are much more rigid than they were before the war. A landing permit from India must be secured before our Government will consider granting a passport. The absence of this is still holding back some of the missionaries. Then the passport must be viséed by the British officials in New York, and they usually ask for seventy-two hours' time to do this. A long wait in customs is imposed, to clear every point on income tax. A birth certificate must be had for passport. Even with all that one can do, before he arrives in New York, it requiras about two days' work to meet the stipulations there, before one can go on board.

Nov. 6 word was sent out that the boat would sail Nov. 8, at 10 A. M. In spite of the many difficulties every one of the party was ready, but large credit should be given to Bro. D. J. Lichty, in his untiring efforts to untangle the many complications that confronted some of the party. When we came to the boat, a great disappointment met the party who had gathered to see the missionaries off. No one was allowed to go up the gangplank and return. I could not even carry one of the Holsopple children up and return. Instead of seeing their accommodations in the boat, we know nothing, save a card, mailed afterwards, saying that the cabins were small.

In the hustle and bustle the farewells were brief. We saw the party on deck, waved the hand, and turned away, for there was no assurance when the boat would leave harbor.

The party going to India were Bro. D. J. Lichty, Sister Elizabeth Kintner, Sister Sarah Replogle, Bro. Q. A. Holsoppla and wife, Kathren, and children, Frances and Neta Ruth. The Rev. and Mrs. Dahlgren, of the Swedish Mission, located near our field in India, and in whose home I spent one night very pleasantly, sailed on the same boat. Those seeing the party off, consisted of Mr. and Mrs. Kintoer, of Bryan, Ohio, and a relative of theirs, living in Brooklyn; Mrs. Noffsinger and daughter, also of Brooklyn; the writer and wife, of Huntingdon, Pa., and Dan L. Royer, of New York City, a brother of Mrs. Holsopple.

The "City of Lahore," on which they sail, is a 7,000 ton boat. It was reported that it would touch at Gibraltar, Port Said, Karachi and Bombay. It is a freighter, for the most part, does not have large passenger accommodations and has a small deck space. May the Father who cares for all, whether on land or sea, be precious to these who are now out upon the waters, on their way to "India's coral strand"! Galen B. Royer.

REMEMBERING THE MOTHERS

Sunday, Nov. 9, will long be remembered by the people of Salem community. The day was void of sunshine and at intervals the clouds gave freely of their moisture, saturating the beautiful roads as well as the dry and thirsty wheat-fields. This made it difficult for those from a distance to find their accustomed place at the morning service, nevertheless a goodly number "put on the chains" and readily overcame the obstacles.

This day was a special one because of two mothers who were to celebrate the turning of another page in the "Yearbook" of life. Sister A. H. Lolling, who takes special delight in producing sunshine by supplying beautiful flowers for each service, has now turned the sixty-first page in her register, while Grandmother Stebbins, another faitbful soldier, has completed the regular term of years allotted to man, and has finished with credit two years of "post-work." She is entering with renewed zeal and energy upon the seventy-third mile of life's journey.

Two other special guests of honor were present to testify to the beauties of life and to the fruitage of years of service—Bro. A. H. Lolling, companion of the first party mentioned, and Bro. S. E. Moats, a faithful friend to all.

After enjoying a very profitable Sunday-school lesson and attending to the regular preaching services, the special preparation for the day was announced, very much to the surprise of the two for whom the event was planned.

It required only a few minutes for the good ladies to prove their skill in "Domestic Science." The table was spread with "good things." The audience was lined up on the edge of the room, in readiness to be served in cafeteria style. Tbanks were offered, and then each person present proceeded to "help himself" in a manner that caused the ladies to smile with content, in assurance of a work well done.

The pastor acted as toastmaster. Both old and young responded in a commendable fashion. Many words of counsel, praise, hope, and cheer were spoken. A personal letter from Miss Evylin Trostle, one of our workers in Armenia, was read with unusual interest. It gave us a new grip on life and a stronger purpose to help in the enlargement of the true community spirit, and to bring about the kingdom of God more fully witbin the hearts of men.

After an informal closing, the crowd dispersed, bestowing their best wishes and congratulations upon the two mothers who have meant so much to our community. May the influence of their lives rest as a gentle benediction upon all who may chance to come in touch with them!

The fact was forcefully brought home, to all in attendance, that a few flowers, strewn with care along the rugged pathway of life, will help to remove the sting and pain that steal into the experience of every individual who is really worth while. W. A. Kinzie.

MISSION BOARD OF TENNESSEE

The Mission Board of the District of Tennessee held a meeting Nov. 3 at Jonesboro. The first business was the appointment of an evangelist, to take the place of Bro. S. H. Garst, who was forced to resign on account of his work at home, where he has four regular places besides other calls. We were sorry to be obliged to relieve him, as his work was only started and was both efficient and successful. However, we were fortunate in securing the services of Bro. A. M. Laughrun for a year.

The Board has been somewhat handicapped on account of means, but we are glad that the time has come when that difficulty has been overcome. We now have funds on hand for present needs, and the churches are responding nobly to the cause by liberal giving for the support of the work.

During the last few years several families of our members have located in the Sweetwater Valley, McMinn County, Tenn. They have several deacons, but no minister. Their needs were considered, and help will be given by the Board in sending a preacher to hold meetings and visit in their homes.

The Board adjourned subject to the call of the President. P. D. Reed.

WEST JOHNSTOWN CONGREGATION, PENNSYLVANIA

We held our preparatory council Sept. 25. Our pastor, Bro. E. M. Detwiler, had extended the visit to the membership, and presented his report. Our semiannual love feast was held Sept. 28, and was an enjoyable one. The following evening Bro. Chas. O. Beery opened a three weeks' evangelistic campaign. He labored earnestly and as an immediate result the membership was built up and eighteen persons, mostly young Sunday-school scholars, were baptized. The song service was in charge of Sister Ella Steuppe, and was inspiring. Frequent special music was a feature.

Our Rally Day services and promotions took place Oct. 5, when the attendance was encouraging. Our elder and wife, Brother and Sister N. W. Berkley, are with us again, after spending the summer on their farm in the eastern part of the State. He is the teacher of the newly-organized Young People's class, composed of persons from three other organized classes, in order to conform more closely to age classification. We believe this will fill a long-felt need. Another of our needs is more classrooms.

From Oct. 20 to Nov. 2 Bro. Detwiler was in a series of meetings at the Maple Grove church of the Johnstown congregation. During his absence the pulpit was occupied by the home ministers, Calvin Beam, N. W. Berkley and Jerome E. Blough. The Bible Institute for the Johnstown Circuit is being held in the Moxham church Nov. 11 to 13. The principal instructors are Eld. Walter S. Long, of Altoona, and Eld. S. P. Early, of the Shade Creek church. The steel strike, now in its eighth week, which is affecting thousands in our city, is showing some signs of nearing its end soon. Jerome E. Blough.

FALLEN ASLEEP

"Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord"

Gahle, John F., born at Kent, Ill., Dec. 8, 1861, died Oct. 31, 1919. He lived all of his life in this community and was a highly respected citizen. Services by the writer from the Yellow Creek church. Burial in the cemetery near by.—I. E. Weaver, Kent, Ill.

Grimes, Sister Susanna, died at her home in Everett, of cancer of the stomach, after about a year's illness, Nov. 1, 1919, aged 63 years, 10 months and 28 days. She was a daughter of Samuel and Hannah Hickey Wiles and had been a faithful member of the Church of the Brethren for many years. She leaves her husband, Bro. Andrew Grimes, one foster daughter, also two brothers and two sisters. Services at the Church of the Brethren by her pastor, Bro. Ira C. Holsopple, assisted by Eld. John S. Hershberger. Interment in the Everett cemetery.—Nancy Lashley, Everett, Pa.

Davidson, Isaac, born Jan. 28, 1853, near Sinking Spring, Ohio, died Nov. 10, 1919, at the home of his brother. Father, mother, one brother and two sisters preceded him. Four brothers and three sisters survive. Services by the writer at the L. D. S. church. Burial in the old Dutch cemetery.—Van B. Wright, Peebles, Ohio.

Elsherry, Gladis Doris, youngest daughter of Brother and Sister Elmer J. Elsherry, died at their home near Palisade, Nov. 6, 1919, aged 4 years, 9 months and 2 days. Services at Mt. Garfield church by the writer, assisted by Bro. J. D. Coffman and Bro. David Bowman.—Salem Berry, Loma, Colo.

Gaxber, Sister Hannah C., born August 23, 1850, died at the home of her daughter, Oct. 27, 1919. Surviving are her husband, one daughter, four grandchildren and two brothers. Services by Eld. J. Carson Miller, assisted by Bro. Howard Martin. Burial in Flat Rock cemetery.—Annie Wine, Forestville, Va.

Gettel, Rufus, infant son of Brother and Sister Samuel Gettel, died Oct. 9, 1919, aged 2 years, 10 months and 18 days. Services by Brethren H. B. Gibble and J. P. Mosley, at Ziegler's meetinghouse. Interment in the cemetery adjoining.—Geo. E. Keeney, Bethel, Pa.

Gibble, Sister Rebecca, nee Helsey, born Dec. 20, 1850, died Nov. 5, 1919, aged 68 years, 10 months and 6 days. She was a member of the Brethren church for many years. Her companion, Bro. A. G. Gibble, five children, one brother and one sister survive. Services at the Midway church by Eld. Jno. Herr and Eld. A. H. Brubacher, assisted by Bro. S. K. Wenger. Interment in the adjoining cemetery. Text, Rev. 7: 13-17.—Lizzie B. Nolt, Lebanon, Pa.

Howard, Brother Arlington M., son of Brother and Mrs. Joseph Howard, of Upper Ferndale, died Nov. 10, 1919, aged 13 years. He is survived by his parents, three brothers and three sisters. He was a member of the Roxbury church for two years, and a member of the Sunday-school. Services in the Roxbury church by Eld. E. M. Detwiler. Interment in Grand View cemetery.—Jerome E. Blough, Johnstown, Pa.

Kinney, George M., born in Onondaga County, N. Y., March 30, 1848, died of heart trouble at the Deaconess' Hospital, Marshalltown, Iowa, Nov. 5, 1919, aged 71 years, 7 months and 6 days. He was the only child of Chester and Laura (Clark) Kinney. Dec. 26, 1870, he was married to Sister Elizabeth Hannah Slifer, who died Oct. 29, 1914. He was a member of the United Brethren church. He and Sister Kinney, during life, did much in helping the hospital in which he spent the last few weeks of his life. He leaves one son. Services by the writer at the Church of the Brethren in Lanark. Burial in the Lanark cemetery.—James M. Moore, Lanark, Ill.

Moats, Sister Sarah J., was born in Illinois on March 4, 1861. At the age of fifteen she pledged allegiance to her Master, remaining true to his Word and resting securely upon his promises until the close of life. She was united in marriage to Bro. Samuel E. Moats Jan. 12, 1880. They came to Kansas and located on their farm, five miles southwest of Nickerson, Oct. 3, 1885, remaining there until the final call. To this union were given two sons and two daughters. Besides rearing and caring for their immediate family, their home became a haven of rest to others. June 27, 1916, the deceased became afflicted with paralysis, from which she partly recovered. She was a faithful attendant at our recent revival, adding her share to the success of the meeting. Upon returning home on Sunday morning, Oct. 19, she retired seemingly in her usual health. About eleven o'clock her evident restlessness attracted the attention of her companion, who soon discovered that she was suffering from the effects of another attack. Medical aid was summoned. For a few days the outlook was promising, when again, on Sunday evening, Oct. 26, the hand of affliction was laid upon her a little heavier. The science and skill of man were baffled. She lingered and ended same Oct. 29, her age being 58 years, 7 months and 25 days. Services by her pastor at the Salem church Nov. 1, at 10:30. Interment in the family lot in the cemetery near by. Besides the immediate family and relatives she leaves many friends.—W. A. Kinzie, Nickerson, Kans.

Ohmart, Marion, son of Christian and Eva Ohmart, born at North Manchester, Ind., died near Larned, Kans., Oct. 30, 1919, aged 59 years, 1 month and 27 days. In 1883 he married Lydia C. Neff, who died eight years ago. To this union were born two sons and four daughters, who survive with six grandchildren, three sisters and two brothers. At the age of thirty he united with the Church of the Brethren and lived a consistent Christian life. Short services were held at the home near Larned, by Bro. Alger. The body was then taken to Navarre, Kans., where services were held by the writer, assisted by Eld. Geo. Manon. Burial in the Navarre cemetery.—C. A. Shank, Abilene, Kans.

Overholser, Sister Mary E., nee Weaver, daughter of Thomas C. and Eliza J. Weaver, born at Sinking Spring, Ohio, Sept. 25, 1878, died Nov. 6, 1919, aged 41 years, 1 month and 11 days. She united with the Church of the Brethren about the age of eighteen years. Feb. 10, 1897, she united in marriage with Bro. I. S. Overholser. On Friday, Oct. 31, she went to the City hospital and the following Monday underwent most serious operation, from the effects of which she never recovered. She was actively engaged in the work at the Springfield church until her death, an active member of the Ladies' Aid, often leading the singing, and the teacher of the primary class of the Sunday-school. Services in the Springfield church Nov. 8, by the writer, assisted by Bro. Cyrus Funderburg.—J. C. Inman, 734 W. Columbia Street, Springfield, Ohio.

Reed, Griffith M., born April 28, 1865, in Floyd County, Va. He married Priscilla Reed in 1885. To this union were born five children, one of whom died in infancy. He united with the Church of the Brethren about 1887. He met his death Nov. 12, 1919, when a train struck his automobile. Services in the Methodist church at Caney, Kans., by the writer and Bro. L. G. Templeton.—S. E. Lantz, Madison, Kans.

Robrer, Eilen Catherine, nee Gray, born in Washington County, Md., died at her home in Vinton, Iowa, Sept. 26, 1919, aged 89 years, 10 months and 8 days. Her husband, Martin Robrer, preceded her in death Feb. 6, 1905. She was a faithful member of the Church of the Brethren for about 60 years. She was fond of Gospel songs, and enjoyed singing them. She will be almost to the close of life. For over a year she was unable to leave her bed. She was loved by a large circle of friends, although all of her own people preceded her in death. Services were held at the Congregational church by Eld. S. B. Miller, of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, assisted by the pastors of the Congregational and Methodist churches. Interment in the cemetery at Victor.—Rose D. Fox, Brooklyn, Iowa.

Rudy, Bro. John, born in Lebanon County, Pa., died at his home Sept. 9, 1919, aged 73 years, 2 months and 24 days. He married Sister Rebecca Eisenhauer. Two sons and five daughters were born to them, one of whom preceded the father. Services at the Freystown church by Elders Jacob Pfautz and E. M. Wenger. Interment in the cemetery adjoining.—Geo. E. Keeney, Bethel, Pa.

Shumaker, Sister Barbara, daughter of George and Frances Emrick, died Oct. 29, 1919, aged 69 years, 10 months and 29 days. In 1868 she married Philip Shumaker, who preceded her in 1918. To this union were born six daughters, five of whom survive. She united with the Church of the Brethren in August, 1918. Services at the Castine church by the writer, assisted by Rev. Hartzler, of the U. B. church. Interment in cemetery near by.—Sylvan Bookwalter, New Paris, Ohio.

Smith, Helen Brammer, daughter of Brother and Sister Jas. Brammer, born in Manchester, Ohio, died at the home of Ira McHenry, near Hadden, Kans., Sept. 30, 1919, aged 72 years, 9 months and 17 days. In 1867 she married Daniel Smith, who preceded her. They adopted one son and one daughter. She united with the church about forty years ago and lived a faithful until death. She leaves two adopted children, twelve grandchildren, ten great-grandchildren, one brother and one sister. Services at the Belleville church by Bro. E. D. Steward. Interment in the Belleville cemetery.—Blanche Steward, Abilene, Kans.

Smith, Margaret Ann, daughter of Joel and Sarah Hyatt, born near Connersville, Ind., died Oct. 29, 1919, aged 75 years, 2 months and 29 days. She married Charles Wesley Smith in 1868. To this union were born two sons and two daughters, one of whom died in infancy at the age of nine. She also leaves five grandchildren and six great-grandchildren. In June, 1899, she united with the Brethren Church and lived a faithful and consistent Christian life.—Mrs. Chas. Waters, Hartford City, Ind.

Studebaker, Elizabeth, daughter of David and Catherine Cripe, born in Clinton County, Ind., Dec. 8, 1845, died at the home of her daughter, Nov. 7, 1919. She united with the Church of the Brethren in 1865, and was married in August, 1871, to David Studebaker. One daughter, five grandchildren and two great-grandchildren survive. Services at the home by Bro. W. J. Hatzler. Interment at Pleasant View cemetery.—Lillian A. Hufford, Rossville, Ind.

Walters, Sara Lestra, nee Corle, born near Woodbury, Pa., died at the Lake Side hospital, Cleveland, Ohio, Nov. 7, 1919, aged 35 years, 1 month and 7 days. She united with the Church of the Brethren at the age of sixteen and was a consistent member. She leaves her husband, one son, a daughter, her father and mother, eight brothers and five sisters. Services at the Curryville church by Elders J. B. Miller and M. R. Brumbaugh. Interment in the Cross Roads cemetery.—Alice M. Baker, Curryville, Pa.

Wyatt, Aleck, son of Bro. Jos. Wyatt, died Nov. 5, 1919, aged 31 years, 11 months and 13 days. He was baptized two years ago and was an earnest, steadfast member of the church. His mother died a number of years ago. He is survived by his father and stepmother, eight brothers and sisters. Services by the writer.—D. L. Mohler, Leeton, Mo.

CHRISTMAS SERVICES

Now is the time to make your plans for the special exercises that you expect to have Christmas. We have a variety of Christmas exercises and the fact that our business on these services increases each year is good evidence that they meet the approval of the schools that have used them.

Many schools have adopted WHITE GIFTS FOR THE KING. This service really brings out the real Christmas spirit. Many excellent reports have come to us from schools that have used this service. One school that we know of in particular has an enrollment of approximately two hundred, and last year at the Christmas service the cash and pledges alone amounted to $239.35. If proper preparation is made we feel sure that every school will be surprised at the result of the White Gift service.

The following Christmas services will also be furnished by us:

WHITE GIFTS FOR THE KING—A service of 14 pages containing Songs, Recitations, Responsive Readings, etc. This is just published, and while it can be used separately it works in very nicely with the White Gift service mentioned above. Price per single copy, 6 cents; per dozen, 65 cents.

"THE KING OF PEACE—A 16-page service of Songs and Readings. Single copy, 5 cents; per dozen, 55 cents.

THE CHRISTMAS CAROL.—A 32-page Christmas service containing Songs, Recitations, etc. Price, each 8 cents, or when ordered in quantities of twenty-five or more, 7 cents each.

TIDINGS OF GREAT JOY—A 16-page service of Songs and Recitations. Price 5 cents each or 55 cents per dozen.

These services have all been prepared with the idea of presenting the best service that it was possible to get. It would be well to order sufficient so that you can get the best results out of your service.

Notes From Our Correspondents

work may continue to grow, in number and in spirit.—Mrs. Clara Hollinger, 149 South Third Street, Shamokin, Pa., Nov. 18.

Spring Run.—Bro. J. B. Miller, of Curryville, Pa., recently closed a very interesting meeting of two weeks in this congregation. Weather conditions were sometimes unpleasant on the outside of the house, but the strong appeals and the sound doctrine, presented by Bro. Miller, together with the inspiring song service, made the meetings very spiritual. The communion, on the evening of Nov. 1, was a splendid service. A heavy rain, during the evening, prevented many of our people from being present. Two were baptized and one was restored. We believe that many others were seriously moved, and we are hoping that the seed sown may yet result in souls being born into the Master's Kingdom.—J. C. Swigart, Mattawana, Pa., Nov. 20.

Walnut church, Johnstown congregation, enjoyed a real spiritual feast Nov. 8 and 9, at which time we held our first School of Methods for Sunday-school workers. There were six sessions, two on Saturday and four on Sunday. The following instructors were present: Foster Statler, our District Field Secretary, A. E. Wilt, H. B. Speicher, Mrs. Robt. Haynes, and Mrs. Wagner, who was formerly elementary superintendent of the county. Prof. A. B. Miller, of Juniata College, was also present on Saturday evening and offered helpful suggestions. The different phases of Sunday-school work, pertaining to the various departments, were ably discussed by these experienced workers. We feel that it was a real help to have these conferences and discussions on this important work. Our Sunday-school workers met Sunday afternoon, Nov. 16, and elected officers for 1920, with Bro. W. L. Brougher, superintendent.—Elizabeth W. Howe, Johnstown, Pa., Nov. 16.

Windber.—Oct. 20 Bro. M. J. Weaver, of Roaring Spring, began a series of meetings at the Windber house, continuing till Nov. 5. He preached excellent and very helpful sermons. In spite of the inclement weather the meetings were well attended and much interest was manifested. There were thirty-one conversions, and twenty-seven of the number were baptized. Bro. Weaver preached the first sermon to the Windber congregation when first organized, and we were all glad to have him with us again.—Mrs. Harvey Knavel, Windber, Pa., Nov. 15.

VIRGINIA

Basic Mission is in a prosperous condition. We have a thriving Sunday-school, with an enrollment of 204, under the efficient superintendency of Bro. J. W. Sampson. The little boys' class of 94 is the admiration of visitors. Bro. Minor C. Miller, our District Secretary, says this is one of his "live wire" schools. We are in the midst of a very interesting series of meetings, with Bro. Charles Walter, of Summum, Ill., as evangelist. He is a very forceful speaker and draws large crowds. There have been five confessions. The revival will continue until Nov. 30 and our love feast will be held Nov. 22, beginning at 5 P. M. Any ministering brethren, passing through Basic, at the junction of the C. & O. and N. & W. railroads, will confer a favor by stopping over and preaching for us.—John W. Andes, Waynesboro, Va., Nov. 14.

Mt. Vernon church met in council Nov. 15, with Eld. J. R. Kindig presiding. The following officers were elected for the coming year: Bro. Chas. Cline, church clerk; Sister Nora Kendig, "Messenger" agent; Sister Lovenz, "Messenger" correspondent; Brethren Chas. Cline, Chas. Kendig and John Kendig, mission board. In October we met for our visit council and the deacons gave a very favorable report. Three letters were received and two were granted. We held our love feast Nov. 1, with about forty-two members present. Bro. S. I. Flory, of White Hill church, officiated at this service. Sunday morning, Dec. 7, Bro. C. B. Smith will be with us to begin his pastoral work for the coming year.—Fay Cline, Stuarts Draft, Va., Nov. 17.

Oak Grove (Lehanon Congregation).—Oct. 11 Bro. E. S. Coffman, of Harrisonburg, Va., began a series of meetings and continued until Oct. 27. Four were baptized. We held our love feast Nov. 1, and after this service our newly-elected deacons, Brethren Luther and Edward Cupp, with their wives, were installed. These meetings were a spiritual uplift to our church and community.—Ollie Mae Cline, Mt. Sidney, Va., Nov. 13.

Staunton church met in council Oct. 30, with Eld. N. W. Coffman presiding. There was a good representation of the members present. Two letters were granted. Bro. Minor Miller was with us Oct. 18 and 19 and gave us a splendid address to the Sunday-school, and how to conduct it. A collection of $8 was taken for the General Sunday School Board. Nov. 7 nine sisters met and organized an Aid Society, with Sister Will Reed as president. If those who have friends or relatives at the hospital will notify Sister Katherine Childs, 531 Greenville Avenue, they will be visited by members of the Aid Society. We decided to meet the first Wednesday in every month at the church.—Ressie M. Garber, Staunton, Va., Nov. 17.

WISCONSIN

Worden congregation was again visited by Bro. Roger Winger, who lectured this time at the White Rapids mission station. In connection with his lectures, the first love feast was held at this point. Twenty-six members partook of the Lord's supper. The work up this field is growing in attendance and interest as well as in numbers. Seven were received by confession last Monday. One entire family of six, who could not be baptized last spring, on account of the illness of the father, was also received. This makes fifteen received by confession at White Rapids alone, since we began meetings last March. Our love feast was held in a log-house—the home of Bro. Wm. Anglemyer. These log-houses in Wisconsin have a rough exterior but the interior betokens real religion. These encounters need more live workers to push the activities of the church. In order to do this, publicity agents have been appointed by the church—Bro. I. D. Cripe, of Stanley, Wis., and Bro. Levi Bentriger, of Amberg, Wis. These men are to get in touch with new settlers, Appointed by the church and wholly reliable, they are serving acceptably in their particular field of the new settlers.—J. M. Myers, Stanley, Wis., Nov. 28.

The Incarnation of Faith

ARE you still in the faith? When the time of Paul's departure had come, one of the things he could rejoice over was that he had kept the faith. The faith? What is that? What was it that Paul had kept? And how did he keep it? What do you mean when you say you are still in the faith?

Some people think "the faith" is something to believe, a system of doctrinal statements. Well, it is something to believe, but it is so much more than that. The assent of the intellect is such a little part of "the faith." It is also something to love. The faith that avails is the faith that works by love.

It will not hurt to say it again. The assent of the mind to truth is such a small part of keeping the faith. The vital point is whether this thing your mind agrees to has gotten into your bones. Has it become your all-absorbing passion? Has it actually made a difference in what you think about mostly from Monday morning till Saturday night? And in the way you spend your time? And in the impression you are making on your neighbors?

The extent to which Christians are satisfied with correctness of creed and ritual is positively alarming. It is, brethren, positively alarming. There's so little life to that sort of faith. So little to distinguish it from a dozen or a hundred other kinds of faith. If your faith doesn't produce a more Christlike life than the faiths which differ from yours, it is no better than they are. You can argue till doomsday about the superior soundness of yours and it will avail nothing. The test is in the fruitage. The soundest faith is that which yields the healthiest life.

Keeping the faith was for Paul a matter of loving quite as much as of believing. It was devotion to a life ideal. It was devotion to Christ, for Christ was that ideal.

"And the Word became flesh." The Word, please remember, and words are instruments of communication. God adopted a new method of talking to men. He spoke in a language incarnate. That was the most effective kind of speech.

Are you still in the faith? Have you kept the faith? You have, if "the faith" has become incarnate in life.

Production and Use of Tobacco in the United States

RECENT statistics, published in the Commerce Monthly, a most reliable Journal, give the most surprising figures, as to the increase of the production and consumption of the filthy weed in our country. The statistics show that we produce almost a billion pounds of tobacco annually. The Monthly gives the average production for five years at 996,000,000 pounds. British India is second to our country, and raises 450,000,000 pounds. Russia stands third in the production of tobacco among the nations of the world, and raises 211,000,000 pounds, while Austria-Hungary is fourth, and produces 179,000,000 pounds. These totals are very surprising and show conclusively how the world is given over to the production and consumption of tobacco.

While the United States produces more than twice as much of the weed as any other nation in the world, she also leads largely in its consumption. She also supplies the world with almost half of the amount used. According to the figures given, she placed on the markets of the world, last year, 630,000,000 pounds. These figures show our export of unmanufactured domestic tobacco for the last year. This includes all the tobacco exported and the increase has been very large since the close of the world war.

The production of tobacco, its consumption and export, has largely increased in our country during the last few years. The higher prices for the leaf, which increased from ten cents a pound to twenty and thirty cents a pound, induced tobacco growers to produce more. In 1917 the export trade of our country, in the weed, was 414,000,000. For this year the number of pounds, given in the preceding paragraph, shows the immense increase of 21,000,000 pounds. If present prices continue, the production will largely increase in the years to come.

The following table gives the value of tobacco raised in the various States of our Union. The number of pounds is not given. The leaf produced varies in value according to quality. The small Connecticut crop is more valuable, in dollars and cents, than the larger crops of Pennsylvania and Tennessee:

State	Value (000 omitted)	State	Value (000 omitted)
North Carolina,	$101,520	Maryland,	$ 7,121
Kentucky,	98,325	Massachusetts,	6,000
Virginia,	38,038	Indiana,	3,032
Ohio,	30,588	West Virginia,	2,546
Wisconsin,	19,551	Florida,	2,031
South Carolina,	18,662	Georgia,	1,334
Connecticut,	16,500	New York,	1,125
Pennsylvania,	16,188	Missouri,	742
Tennessee,	10,581	Other States,	434
Total,			$374,318

Leaving the statistics, as to the production and export of tobacco, let us, for a moment, look at its consumption in our own country. In this we lead the world, as we do in its production. We consume quite 700,000,000 pounds annually. Our population is now over 100,000,000 souls. The women use very little of the weed. This is to be said to their lasting credit. Young children use none and a good many men do not use it. They have found it to be a dirty, filthy habit, injurious to health, and have given it up. A safe estimate will be to place the number who use tobacco among us at twenty-five million. If this number is correct, the use per capita is not far from thirty pounds annually. With expensive cigars and cigarettes, a cigar, weighing about two ounces, is sold at from five to thirty-five cents each, and as to the high-priced chewing tobacco, $1 a pound is not too high an estimate to place on the stuff. This makes our annual tobacco bill reach the enormous sum of over seven hundred million dollars. Think of this vast sum of money worse than wasted—chewed and spit away—a most filthy habit—smoked and puffed away, snuffed and blown away, all save the nicotine, which remains in the body to injure it, destroy its health and to the positive injury of all who use the weed.

The other day, at the Union Depot in Chicago, I saw representatives of the Red Cross, each bearing the insignia of the order, handing out sandwiches to the hungry soldier boys passing in and out, and I commended this kind act, but when the sandwiches were accompanied with cigarettes, I condemned this act of teaching our boys to use tobacco. A week later, in one of our large western cities, Denver, a lady wearing the Red Cross, asked me for money and I said: "No! I will never give another penny of the means with which God has blessed me to you people to teach our boys to use tobacco." She smiled and said the boys needed the tobacco. I replied: "They do not. You are teaching them a useless, filthy habit, which is an absolute injury to their health and happiness."

The State of Illinois has very wisely passed a law prohibiting the sale of cigarettes to our boys, and the Red Cross violates the spirit of that law by giving the weed away instead of selling it. I gave the Red Cross money to help our boys, but now since the Red Cross has gone into the business of teaching the use of the filthy weed, I can not conscientiously use the Lord's money in that way. CAN YOU? D. L. M.

Family Religion

THE phrase struck me with peculiar force. It occurs in one of the topics for the Week of Prayer, according to the program set forth by the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America. We are accustomed to the phrase, "family worship"—even if we are not very much accustomed to the worship itself—but what is family religion? Another name for the same thing?

No, something larger. Family religion is the whole, of which family worship should be an important part. Family worship is a most helpful agency in producing the end, family religion. Family worship is a specific exercise engaged in at a particular time. Family religion is something that lasts all day. At least it is more likely to, if regularly reëforced by family worship.

Do you know of a finer and more useful institution than the Christian family? That "place of permanent love, peace, and spiritual beauty"?

"Whose Leaf ALSO Doth Not Wither"

THE important word is the "also," for it discloses the true mission of the tree. It looks back to what has just been said. The unwithered leaf is an added indication of the healthy condition of the tree. But you must not think too much of the leaf. This is not a shade tree. The leaf is interesting only because it promises a tree which brings forth fruit.

But there was once a tree which belied that promise. It had "nothing but leaves."

Christians are like fruit trees, supposedly. Jesus desires that they "bear much fruit." Do not be too glad that the leaves of your profession do not wither. Not until you have made sure that they also do not wither—that the fruit is there to justify the foliage.

In His Own Time

BY MYRA BROOKS WELCH

In his own time,
When the arms of right have conquered
And the victors stand arrayed in robes of whiteness—
When the wheat has all been garnered,
And the grapes have all been trodden in the wine-press—
Our God shall reign, and there will be
No tears, no pain, and no more sea.

In his own time,
When the waiting is over,
And the saints shall be rewarded for their patience—
When the darkness shall be ended
And the pearly gates are open to the nations—
Our God shall reign, and there will be
No tears, no pain, and no more sea.

In his own time,
When we gather in the Kingdom
And sing praises like the noise of many waters—
When we cast our crowns before him
A vast company of royal sons and daughters—
Our God shall reign, and there will be
No tears, no pain, and no more sea.

The Purpose of the Sunday-School

BY AMOS H. HAINES

FAILURE to grow and develop means decay and death. Development is a fundamental law of nature, of the universe, of God. "First the blade, then the ear, after that the full corn in the ear." This principle may be applied to education, to politics, to all forms of community and national life, and also to religion. If our ideals do not grow in our religious and Christian experiences, and prophetic visions, there is little hope of world redemption.

Many people today—indeed many so-called Sunday-school workers—are absolutely a blank and visionless to the spirit of the age in which we are living. They do not know there is a new democracy, a new pedagogy, especially a new Sunday-school pedagogy, a new psychology, and new helps to Bible study. The ideals and conceptions of entirely too many persons engaged in Sunday-school work are the very same ideals and conceptions of, say, twenty, thirty or forty years ago.

It is rather disheartening to meet with a body of Sunday-school workers—many professing to be workers of experience—and to find, perhaps, fifty per cent of them entertaining very crude ideas of a systematic study of the Bible. They scarcely know what is meant by a course in Biblical Introduction and Historical Setting. Some are excusable for lack of ability. Others are inexcusable, because they remain opaque, out of mere prejudice. They know little or nothing of the Bible themselves, and seem envious of those who know the content of the Bible and are able to teach.

Now the fundamental purpose of the Sunday-school is to teach and explain the content of Scripture. The truths and facts of each and every lesson should be clearly presented. The background and setting, from which a lesson comes, should be clearly taught and presented, if possible, by use of map and chart. Lincoln's Gettysburg speech—that great English classic—would be meaningless to a person not acquainted with slavery and its history in relation to the United States. Such is true of nearly the whole of the Old and New Testaments. To understand the message, we must inquire for the occasion and historical background. By so doing, nine-tenths of our exegetical questions are already solved.

The purpose of the Sunday-school is not to moralize and speculate upon and about the lesson text. It is to know and understand the teaching of the Scripture lesson, historically, exegetically and practically. This means a body of trained teachers. The intelligent Sunday-school scholars must learn to use their heads. They must learn to think and think straight. The teacher should here be the leader, both by precept and example. As in all teaching, more or less, there is entirely too much bluffing.

The books of the Bible should be taken up from the view-point of Biblical Introduction, and a good modern text on this subject, in addition to the American Revised Bible, should be used. Again, let us call attention to the liberal use of maps and charts. Until some work and study of this kind is undertaken and attained to by the laymen of the church, the unscrupulous preacher will continue to impose on the entirely too credulous hearer—the people in the pew—and call it preaching. Entirely too many are inclined to lie back, take it easy, possibly go to sleep and say: "The old-time religion, and it's good enough for me."

The Sunday-school exists to teach the Bible "intelligently" and not to speculate and moralize about the Bible. Those who are not cognizant of these facts should become so. They should make a careful study of the whole Sunday-school problem. I like the motto of the Men's Organized Adult Class: "The class exists to bring men to Christ and to build men up in Christ." "Study, give diligence, to show thyself approved unto God."

Talking to the Boys and Girls

BY J. H. MOORE

IT was about 1882—probably in the fall of the year—when residing at Mt. Morris, Ill., and looking after the editorial department of The Brethren at Work, that Bro. M. S. Newcomer requested me to go with him to an appointment he had at a schoolhouse in the bounds of the West Branch church, of which he was then elder in charge. The name of the point has passed from me. The ministers of his congregation were conducting monthly services at the place, and as it was Bro. Newcomer's day to look after the appointment, he had me go with him and address the people.

Before starting I outlined the theme on which I purposed discoursing—some common subject that would be appropriate for any ordinary meeting, in any community. There was a good congregation, and while Bro. Newcomer was looking after the devotional services, I took in the situation, and observed that there were many more young people than those of mature years. I further noticed that there was quite a group of real bright-looking boys occupying a few of the front seats on the right-hand side of the house. I said to myself: "The sermon that I have outlined is not what these young people are looking for. These boys, especially, want something more than a goody-goody talk. They have been listening to talks of that sort ever since they can remember. They are looking for something new, something they never heard before."

So, by the time Bro. Newcomer had matters arranged for me to take the floor, I had decided to dispense with the preparation that I had made, and to give the boys a talk on the mode and form of Christian baptism. Rather a big subject for young people, and yet I knew it would be new to them, and I hoped to make it instructive as well. Turning to Matthew 28 I read verse 19, and proceeded to explain, to the group of boys before me, how the New Testament was first written in Greek, and by learned men had to be translated into English, so as to give us the book in our own language. Then, taking up the word "teaching" in my text, I told them that the word in Greek meant making disciples, or to bring it clearly to their comprehension, it meant making learners, or scholars, like we have in school.

Leaving this point, I called attention to the fact that God at one time gave to John the Baptist a baptism that was from heaven, or told John how to administer a baptism that would be approved by heaven. John having received this information, along with other things, made known to him, went to preaching in the Jordan Valley, at a point on the bank where a public road crossed the river. People gathered around him by the thousand, and all those accepting his teaching were taken into the river and baptized with the baptism that John had received from heaven.

Finally Jesus came and asked for baptism. John led him down into the water and baptized him just like he had baptized hundreds of others. Then, sometime after Jesus was baptized, he too, went to preaching. He selected twelve apostles, to be with him, to help him teach the people and to baptize those who were willing to accept Jesus as their Savior. After a few years, Jesus was put to death and buried, but arose from the dead the third day. Before leaving the earth, in order to go back to his Father in heaven, he told his apostles to go into all the world, preach the Gospel to every creature, make disciples of them, then to baptize them "into the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost." In a brief manner the Trinity was explained, along with the importance of using the three names in performing baptism.

I noticed that the boys were listening intently, and glancing to the other side, I saw that the girls also were paying the closest possible attention. Now I was ready for the real work of the hour. The meaning of baptism was taken up and explained by referring to what the Bible said about Naaman dipping himself in the water of the Jordan seven times. I told the boys that in the Greek the word "dip," as applied to Naaman, was the same term as is found for baptizing in the commission. At this point the eyes of the boys brightened up, showing that the thought had taken hold of them. Several other illustrations were offered, in order to clinch the thought.

This paved the way for fifteen or more minutes' comment on trine immersion, showing that as there were three Persons named in the formula for baptism, there should also be three actions in performing the rite. Several clear illustrations were offered, showing that sentences of like construction demanded three actions. I used a little ancient history, telling how all the churches used to baptize that way, and that this was really the only form of baptism taught in the New Testament.

From start to finish it was an off-hand talk without notes, and occupied nearly one hour. While my language was kept within the intellectual grasp of the boys and girls, there were no unusual efforts to attract and hold attention. It was a straight, reverent, earnest talk, employing as much dignity as was necessary to command respect. I am sure that I paid no special attention whatever to the old people, and yet they listened with as much care as did the young folks. At the end of the service I first approached the boys, shook hands with them, then met the others as they lingered.

Here was an attempt at planting some seed of the Kingdom in the hearts of a group of young people, and I have often wondered if there has ever been any harvest as the result of the special planting. As a matter of fact, it is largely the preacher's business to plant good seed, to make disciples or learners of the people; then to help those who express a willingness to accept Christ, to enter the Kingdom, and to receive the additional training, fitting the new-born creatures for usefulness in the Lord's vineyard.

My venture with these young people encouraged me to do more of that sort of preaching, and I have learned that children are always ready to listen to the story that contains information. At one point I gave six talks, prepared solely for the little folks, extending over a period of nine years. At the last talk I decided to test the memory of the children and young people regarding these talks. I told them that nine years before I had talked to the children, and since then and including the talk on that occasion, I had given five talks, and I was wondering if they could name the subjects on which I had addressed them. To my surprise they named every subject, and that, too, without any hesitation. In none of these sermons were there any efforts at wit, jokes or amusing incidents. It was a wholly straight-forward talk—each talk occupying not more than twenty-five minutes. For forty-five minutes I once listened to a Baptist preacher talk to a group of children on the atonement—one of the most difficult subjects mentioned in the Bible—and yet he held the close attention of every boy and girl from start to finish.

These incidents, along with others that might be mentioned, prompt me to suggest that for ministers who can accommodate themselves to the conditions, there is a marvelous field open for much Gospel teaching. There is hardly a subject in the Bible that can not be brought within the comprehension of the ordinary boy or girl. Too many attempts have been made to interest half-grown children with goody-goody stories. They soon get tired of that kind of talking.

They want facts—something that they can understand, can remember and is worth remembering. Our people are losing much by not supplying this want.

Pleasures of Earth versus Joys of the Holy Spirit

BY S. Z. SHARP

EVERY one wants happiness. The great majority of people seek it through earthly pleasure, that comes through the senses. The few strive to obtain it through the joys of heaven, afforded by the Holy Spirit. We should notice, first of all, the vast difference between earthly pleasures and heavenly joys. The word "pleasure" usually means an emotion that is short-lived, while joy is a state of feeling that may be eternal. "The kingdom of God is . . . righteousness and peace and joy in the Holy Spirit" (Rom. 13: 17).

It is this "joy in the Holy Spirit" that we wish to place in strong contrast with earthly pleasures. The most common and most pernicious of the latter are the sensual pleasures, corrupting the mind and defiling both the soul and the body, which is to be preserved as a temple for the indwelling of the Holy Spirit. The sensual passions cause the social evils, diseases and divorces. This kind of pleasure is limited in time, and is not designated by the term "joy."

Next comes the intoxicating cup, which affords momentary pleasure, but "at last it stingeth like an adder and biteth like a serpent."

The ball-room affords a sweet and exquisite pleasure, as it enlists so many of the senses. It is, however, but momentary and leaves the stamp of perdition upon the soul.

"The love of money, the root of all evil," is one of the most common evils. While it affords a certain kind of pleasure, it warps and contracts the soul, centers its interest upon self, and leaves the soul deaf to all appeals of charity or missionary contributions. The money-lover is found in every station of life, even in the church. His case is clearly defined in this scripture: "What does it profit a man though he gain the whole world and lose his own soul, and what will he give in exchange for his soul?" The story of the rich man in hell is still more expressive of the fate of those whose greatest pleasure is in riches.

A desire for attending theatres and moving picture shows, whose exhibits are often marred by impure and degrading features, tends to pervert the taste and unfit the soul for the higher and purer emotions.

The pleasures of conforming to the popular fashions of the world by "plaiting of the hair, wearing of gold and jewels, and putting on of apparel," are not to be compared with the joys of "a meek and quiet spirit" and "of the hidden man of the heart." All these pleasures are merely human and end with the using.

We now turn from the votaries of earthly pleasure, who pass down the broad road to perdition, and we will next consider the heavenly "joys unspeakable and full of glory." The highest, holiest, purest, eternal and unspeakable joys are those chosen by the Son of God, "who for the joy that was set before him, endured the cross, despising the shame and has sat down at the right hand of the glory of God." His followers chose the same. The Day of Pentecost ushered in a new era of heavenly joys which have been the heritage of the saints all down the centuries. The converts to the faith met daily, "having all things in common and in breaking of bread." It was not the food they ate that gave them joy, but the sweet fellowship and the communion of the Spirit. The time came when they needed deacons in the church. They looked out for men who were full of wisdom and the Holy Spirit. Stephen was one of them. He was so filled with the Spirit that his face shone like that of an angel. As the Gospel continued to be preached over the earth by Paul, Barnabas and their successors, and many souls were gathered into the kingdom, the souls of the saints were "filled with joy and the Holy Spirit." Earthly pleasures never reach heaven; they are confined to this earth and end with those that perish, while the joys of the Spirit reach the courts of heaven and rejoice the angels.

The joys of the Spirit, chosen by the Savior, have induced millions to make the same choice. They endured the cross, despised the shame and are gathered "under the altar" in the temple of God (Rev. 6: 9). As early as the days of the Emperor Nero, Christians were impaled and burned at night to light up his parks. Under the reign of Emperor Diocletian, the persecutions of the Christians were exceedingly fierce. Every form of torture was employed that human ingenuity could invent. Fire, the sword, wild beasts and wild men all played their part in the destruction of human lives. Many of the saints offered themselves willingly, to be executed, that they might get the martyr's crown. Even boys and girls stood the supreme test. So many offered themselves to be executed that the emperor became disgusted and issued an edict, stopping further executions.

Any one reading "Fox's Book of Martyrs," or "The Bloody Mirror," by Thielem Von Vraght, will know that during the period of the Inquisition a great army of Christians were put to death because they esteemed the joys of the Spirit and the promise of eternal life of greater value than the pleasures of earth.

During the Boxer Rebellion in China, in 1898, thousands of Christians, enjoying the promise of eternal life and the joys of the Spirit, willingly gave themselves up, to be beheaded rather than to recant.

The power of the joys of the Spirit is illustrated by the fortitude with which so many saints went into death. It is recorded of some who were burned at the stake that while the fire leaped up around them, they sang hymns of praise. Paul and Silas, when cast into prison, with their backs lacerated with the Roman lash and their feet fastened in the stocks, were so filled with the joys of the Spirit that they sang and praised God.

When England, under "Bloody Queen Mary," changed from Protestantism to Catholicism, many Protestants were burned at the stake. Bishop Cranmer was given the choice to recant his religion or to be burned. He exclaimed: "I can not burn, I can not burn," and wrote his recantation. Later, he repented, received the power of the Spirit and said: "Now I can burn." When he was led to the stake, he thrust his hand, with which he had written the recantation, into the fire and let it burn into a crisp. Such is the power of the Spirit, to sustain the true disciples, that cheerfully they endure the most horrible torture, in view of the joys that await them in the life to come.

We, too, can drink in the joys of the Spirit when we meet in a revival meeting, and our souls are enraptured with prayer and song, and a stirring appeal is made by the evangelist, that brings sinners coming home to Christ. Then the angels in heaven are made to rejoice.

If in the right spirit we sit around the Lord's table, in fellowship with one another and "with the Father and with his Son, Jesus Christ" (1 John 1: 3), we receive a foretaste of "joy unspeakable and full of glory, eternal in the heavens."

"When we've been there ten thousand years,
Bright shining as the sun,
We've no less days to sing God's praise
Than when we first begun."

The Duty of Churches to Their Pastors

BY LEANOER SMITH

"Now if Timotheus come, see that he may be with you without fear: for he worketh the work of the Lord" (1 Cor. 16: 10).

THE pastoral question is becoming highly important with many of our churches. This question has two sides, and both of them should be considered prayerfully, in order that we may arrive at a just conclusion as to what our duties are to each other.

The Word of God is a Perfect Rule of faith and practice. It is not only profitable for doctrine, reproof and correction, but for perfect instruction in righteousness, that the man of God may be thoroughly furnished unto all good works. Every station and office has its corresponding duties. For instance, there are parental duties, which devolve upon parents, and filial duties for the children. There are pastoral duties, which devolve upon the ministers of the Gospel of Jesus Christ, but there are corresponding duties which necessarily devolve upon all church members. To call your attention to these particularly, is the object of this article.

Numerous are the passages of Scripture which present this subject to us. In writing to the Hebrews, the apostle says: "Obey them that have the rule over you" (Heb. 13: 17). To the Philippians the same apostle says: "Receive him therefore in the Lord with all gladness; and hold such in reputation." And to the Thessalonians he is still more explicit: "And we beseech you, brethren, to know them which labor among you, and are over you in the Lord, and admonish you." The same spirit and design is evidently expressed in reference to Timothy, when these words are used: "See that he be with you without fear: for he worketh the work of the Lord."

I. A REFERENCE TO THE NATURE AND OESIGN OF THE PASTORAL OFFICE.—"He worketh the work of the Lord."

II. THE OBVIOUS DUTY OF THE CHURCH TO SEE THAT SUCH ARE WITH THEM WITHOUT FEAR.

I. A REFERENCE TO THE NATURE AND OESIGN OF THE PASTORAL OFFICE.—"He worketh the work of the Lord." The pastor is called to his office by the church. He is guided by the Holy Spirit in accepting the call. He is employed in doing the Lord's work. The directions for doing it are laid down in his Holy Word. His great object is to glorify the Lord, and to spread abroad the true knowledge and glory of God. His success is from the Lord, and his final reward is that which the Lord, the Righteous Judge, confers upon him. These important topics we must pass over, but we briefly call your attention to three views of his work.

1. It is solemn. It is a work connected with mind and with spirit; with the undying souls of men. It is a work that comprises, within its own legitimate sphere, all that is momentous in time and eternity. It is inseparably connected with the eternal glory or the everlasting misery of our fellow-beings.

2. It is arduous. It is a work which requires the outlay of the whole man—all the energies of the body—all the capacities of the mind—and all the emotions of the spirit. It is arduous from the lofty sublimity of its theme—from the array of its opponents, with whom it has to contend. It is arduous, as it requires all the devotion of time, means, energies and resources, which the most highly-favored human being may possess. A pastor must devote all he has to God and the requirements of his office. It is a work pertaining to every day, every season, and every place where he lives or moves. Well might the apostle exclaim: "Who is sufficient for these things?"

3. It is responsibility. The pastor is but a servant or steward, and he must render a clear, minute, and complete account of himself and his work to God. God will reckon with him, and reward or condemn, according to the employment of talents he has had committed to his trust. That responsibility is connected with the eternal destiny of those under his charge. The blood of souls, if he should be faithless, will be required at his hands. Such is the work and office of the pastor. Consider, then,

II. THE OBVIOUS DUTY OF THE CHURCH WITH RESPECT TO THE PASTOR.—"He is to be with you without fear."

1. Supply his pecuniary need, and let him not fear as to his temporal-support. If he is fully engaged in providing for you spiritual things, how reasonable that you should supply him with needful temporal things! I do not state the amount—to judge of this I must again refer you to the responsibility. A writer of note, in recently referring to the high price of living, and the ordinary wages paid, said: "The ordinary laborer gets from three to four dollars per day, while the railroad engineer, who conducts the engines on the great railroads of our country, gets eight to ten dollars per day. And this is considered a paltry sum for those to whom the care of human life is committed. But, surely, the charge and care of souls is vastly more momentous, and deserving of much higher remuneration." But on this point, two principles should decide: the necessities of your pastor, and the ability you possess. If you can not remunerate him adequately, you must do all you can; and this he has an equitable right to expect. Let this be done respectfully, with great courtesy, and in the spirit of promptitude and love.

2. Give him your confidential and affectionote countenance, and let him be without fear, as to the position he occupies in your esteem. Show him that he has favor in your eyes; that he is planted deep in your regards; that you receive him as from God, and honor and love him as such.

3. Be regular in your attendance on the means of grace, and let him not fear the acceptance of his ministry omong you. This he has a right to expect. If he must study and preach, it is yours to be present, and hear what has been prepared for you. Be not guilty of religious vagrancy, and telling the world of the poverty of your own homes, by being found seeking a morsel here and elsewhere. "Forsake not the assembling of yourselves together as the manner of some is."

4. Unite with him in every holy enterprise, and let him not fear desertion in his efforts to do good. He may do a little single-handed. So did Moses, during Israel's engagement with Amalek. But he may, like Moses, fail, unless you are near him, to encourage his heart and to hold up his hands. I trust it will be said of him: "And there went with him a chosen band."

5. Pray fervently and continually for him, and let him not fear devotionol neglect. How anxious Paul was for this! "Brethren, pray for us." Do this in your closet, in your family, as well as in the social meetings of the church.

6. Exhibit the holy fruit of his labors, and let him not fear losing his reword in the great day. See Philpp. 4: 1; 1 Cor. 3: 13. Live his sermons. See that the ends of preaching, and ordinances, and pastoral duties, are answered in your holy lives. Be living epistles. Be the joy of his heart by your holy fruitfulness and good works in Christ Jesus, our Lord.

Let me conclude, by just naming a few reasons why the minister should be with you without fear:

1. His own comfort. If he is with you in fear, he can not be happy. He will be your slave; his suffering will be excruciating in the extreme. Would you have him happy and cheerful, "then see."

2. Your own profit. He can not do you good without having your confidence, affection, and esteem. Otherwise he will be paralyzed, and you will seek to be profited in vain.

3. The church's welfore. A happy, comfortable pastor is indispensable. Without it, the church will have no attractions to those without, and no joy for those within. If you are to have peace within your walls, you must have a happy pastor. Then see to it.

4. Your accountability to God. God will require you to answer for your treatment of your pastor. Act as in God's sight, and for his glory, so that you may meet him in the presence of the Lord Jesus Christ with exceeding great joy. "Now the God of peace, who hrought again from the dead the great shepherd of the sheep with the blood of an eternal covenant, even our Lord Jesus, make you perfect in every good thing to do his will, working in us that which is well-pleasing in his sight, through Jesus Christ; to whom be glory for ever and ever. Amen."

The Supreme Mission of the Church in the World

BY CHAS. M. YEAROUT

"As thou hast sent me into the world, even so have I also sent them into the world" (John 17: 18; 20: 21).

CHRIST'S mission into the world was to save the world (John 3: 17). The church stands in the same relationship to the world that Christ stood (2 Cor. 5: 20). The church is Christ's representative in the world, and as such should manifest the same deep interest and concern for the salvation of the world that Christ manifested.

The burden of preaching the message of salvation in all parts of the world rests upon the shoulders of the church, and this obligation can not be shifted. The church is responsible to God for the carrying out of the "Great Commission."

We sometimes boast of our keeping every command in the plan of salvation. How about the "Last and Great Commission" given to the church? "Go ye therefore, and teach all nations." "Go into all the world, and preach the Gospel to every creature." Has the Church of the Brethren done this? Have we obeyed this command?" I fear not fully. Jesus says: "As the Father hath sent me, even so send I you." If Jesus had been as slow about carrying out his mission in the world, in establishing and disseminating the plan of human salvation, as the church is in carrying it to all nations, and preaching it or teaching it in all parts of the world, he would hardly have accomplished it in the brief period of about three years and six months. Many people in the world never have heard the message of salvation, as contained in the Great Commission given to the church by the Blessed Master. Luke, in recording the Commission, says: "Thus it is written, and thus it behooved Christ to suffer, and to rise from the dead the third day: and that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name among all nations."

If one thousand of our nearly thirty-five hundred ministers would put forth the effort that the eminent apostle Paul put forth, we would soon be near the goal. How many of our over three thousand ministers have, in their ministerial efforts since in the ministry, led less than five persons to Christ and into the church? Hands up, please. If the church and our ministerial force of today would put forth the efforts, make the sacrifices, and manifest the zeal that the early church fathers put forth and manifested, considering our superior facilities for traveling and reaching the people, the goal set in the Forward Movement would be reached and left far behind. Why this "Forward Movement"? Does it indicate the need of an awakening from a state of lethargy or indifference?

Fifteen thousand conversions and baptisms annually is less than five to each minister, his assistants and wórkers in the church. Some of our active ministers have averaged over thirty baptisms for thirty years or more.

Jesus' last words to his apostles, just before ascending into heaven, were: "But ye shall receive power, after the Holy Ghost is come upon you: and ye shall be witnesses unto me both in Jerusalem and in all Judea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost parts of the earth" (Acts 1: 8). How these words must have stamped themselves indelibly upon the minds of the apostles, and how they must have pondered them in the years that followed! We are told that Saint Patrick carried the Gospel into Ireland, Columba into Scotland, Augustine into England, Boniface into Germany, Saint Gaul into Switzerland, Ausker into Scandinavia. The apostles carried the Gospel into Rome and parts of Europe. In fact, the Gospel was carried by the apostles into most of the then known world, if not in person, then by living representatives or witnesses, for the apostle says: "Even the mystery which hath been hid from ages, and from generations, but now is made manifest to the saints; which was preached to every creature under heaven" (Col. 1: 26; Rom. 10: 18).

In view of the great importance of the commission given to the church in five forms, as given above, to preach the Gospel in all the world, teach it to all nations, the church must commission men and women and send them to do it (Rom. 10: 14, 15). Each local church should use her forces to work the territory intrusted to her care, and then furnish workers and means to the District Boards, to aid the weak churches and work the unorganized territories within the various Districts, and the various churches and Districts should come to the aid of the General Board with workers and means to carry the glad message of salvation into all the world. Thus we will have coöperation and united helpfulness all along the Gospel lines. Every one who fails or refuses willingly to respond in doing his or her part, throws a heavier burden upon the brother or sister who does respond, and in the distribution of final rewards the helpers and workers will receive all the rewards (1 Cor. 3: 8).

I heard Bro. James R. Gish, of sacred memory, say at an Annual Meeting at Ottawa, Kansas: "We love the Lord; yes, we say we love the Lord; but how much do we love the Lord? Some of us never loved the Lord a dollar's worth in our lives." How many in the Brotherhood never gave a dollar to the missionary cause?

We sometimes sing: "Will there be any stars in my crown?" The prophet says: "And they that be wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament; and they that turn many to righteousness, as the stars forever and ever" (Dan. 12: 3). "Let him know that he which converteth the sinner from the error of his way, shall save a soul from death and hide a multitude of sins" (James 5: 20). So, if you desire to shine as the beautiful twinkling stars that deck the sky by night, be sure to turn many sinners from sin to Christ and righteousness. Who can estimate the worth and value of a soul saved from the blighting influence of sin? The entire wealth of the world falls far short of the value of a saved, blood-washed man or woman. And to think that we poor, finite beings may be instrumental in the hands of God of accomplishing this priceless work. No wonder the apostle Paul sacrificed worldly honor and fame, and became all things to all men, that he might save at least some of them.

If the church will consider the value of a soul equal to the mighty dollar, and put forth the effort, work and sacrifice to save souls, that people generally expend to make or get money, I am persuaded that the angels of heaven would oftener have cause to rejoice to see sinners turning to God. The salvation of the world, for whom Christ died, is largely dependent upon the efforts of the church. Shall they be lost as a result of our indifference or lack of concern? Thousands are dying out of Christ every day, and many of them might be saved if Christ's great commission to the church was fully complied with.

What are we, as individuals, doing to aid in carrying the Blessed Gospel to all people, in order that they may hear, believe and be saved? Think of the great meeting over in eternity. Will some of them be there as a result of my effort? Will we come bringing some sheaves for the Master?

"Must I go, and empty-handed, thus my dear Redeemer meet?
Not one day of service give him, lay no trophy at his feet?
Must I go, and empty-handed, must I meet my Savior so,
Not one soul with which to greet him, must I empty-handed go?"

Chico, Colif.

The Church Was Organized in Two Stages

BY I. J. ROSENBERGER

The First Stage of the Church Was Ushered in by Christ and His Apostles.

The Second Stage of the Church Wss Ushered in by Brother Alexander Mack and His Associates in the Dark Days of Persecution and Reformation.

CHRIST'S commission to his apostles covers the entire Christian dispensation. Matthew's record of the Commission is clear. Mark's record says: "Preach my gospel to every creature." This version is embarrassing. Wilson's translation says: "To all creation." Wilson's version is verified by the American Standard and the Anglo-American Version. This latter version gives a better rendering. Christ gave his apostles this special commission: "Ye shall be my witnesses unto me, both in Jerusalem and in Judea and in Samaria and unto the utmost parts of the earth."

The apostles went to work with vigor. The Jews met at Jerusalem on the Day of Pentecost to celebrate their annual feast, but in the prophetic fulfillment of this feast, unknown to the Jews, came this day for Christ, in his propaganda, to empower his chosen for their conquest. Hence, having all things ready, at the proper time God sent his power "as of a rushing mighty wind," a cyclone, and filled the great throng with consternation and amazement. And what added to their mental daze, the apostles, seemingly with tongues of fire on their heads, opened up a most terrific onslaught on the trembling mass of people—not with shot, shell and poisoned gases, but with thrilling truths from heaven's magazine. It was done with such force that the gazing mass was seized with palsied fear.

The matter of the Jews' feast seemed at once to have fallen in the background, and the doctrine and mission of the newly-resurrected Christ became the absorbing subject of the day. The apostles witnessed with such power, that three thousand souls were that day enrolled in the new kingdom. And shortly after, five thousand more believers were added to the fold. The further growth of the new church was so rapid that they seemed to have ceased to count, but simply said: "The saints were multiplied."

Their evangelistic efforts at Ephesus were with such power and effect that "many of them also which used curious arts, brought their books together, and burned them before all men: and they counted the price of them, and found it to be fifty thousand pieces of silver." The Jews said of Paul and Silas at Thessalonica: "These that have turned the world upside down, have come hither also." And the persecution of the saints was said to have scattered them. We are told that they went everywhere, preaching the Word of God. Under persecution, truth seemed to spread and scatter like fire-brands before a driving storm. Under the power of the Holy Ghost, as promised, prison-doors were opened, monarchs were smitten, and high officials of state were made to tremble. "So mightily grew the Word of God and prevailed." With surprising speed did the apostolic force press on to their given goal. David foresaw the apostles filling their appointed mission, given in these words; "There is no speech nor language where their voice is not heard. Their line is gone out through all the earth and their words unto the ends of the world." Paul points out the success of apostolic efforts thus: "Have they not heard? Yes, verily, their sound went into all the earth, and their words unto the ends of the world. . . . Which is come unto you even as it is also in all the world; . . . Be not moved away from the hope of the Gospel, which ye have heard and which has been preached in all creation under heaven" (Revised Version).

Satan made an early assault on Christ, and he made an equally early assault on the church. Christ early warned against false prophets and false Christs that should deceive many, showing the correctness of Christ's prophecy. Dr. Buck lists no less than twenty-four men, who rose in the early centuries and pretended to be the Messiah.

Paul foresaw the same condition. To the elders of Ephesus he said: "Among your own selves shall men arise, speaking perverse things, to draw away the disciples after them." In 2 Thess. 2: 7, 11, 12 Paul says: "The mystery of iniquity doth already work. . . . God shall send them strong delusion, that they should believe a lie; that they all might be damned who believe not the truth."

The foregoing indicates a decline of the truth and a merging into apostasy. Turn to the letters of Jesus, to the Seven Churches of Asia, and view them as personal letters to those churches. I would rather view them as seven messages of prophecy, in seven periods, covering the entire Christian dispensation. Either view of those epistles shows a sad decline. Sardis, the last church but one, John says is dead. There were but few live coals on her altar. The church at Laodicea claimed to have a most spirited experience, including their number and their money. They said they "had need of nothing," but John was directed to tell them: "Thou knowest not that thou art wretched and miserable, and poor, and blind, and naked." Like some churches today, they grew in quantity but lost out in quality.

Christ, at the closing juncture of time, says: "Except those days should be shortened there should be no flesh saved." I feel it both meet and proper to consider that declaration of Christ, and call it into action right now. But let not the reader be discouraged; for the bush that was burning—the one that Moses saw—was not consumed. And Christ declared that the gates—the powers of hell—should not prevail against his church. She will triumph.

Turn to Rev. 12 and you will find the church personified by a woman. I feel quite certain that this woman is the church, because John says: "Her seed keep the commandments of God and have the testimony of Jesus Christ." Such is the apostolic church. Notice how she is cared for:

(1) "There appeared a wonder in heaven." The pending fate of this woman was of concern, and seemed to be undecided to the inmates of heaven.

(2) "She being with child, travailing in birth." The church has always been with child. She has always been burdened to bring forth, to provide for the future of mankind.

(3) "This woman fled into the wilderness." This retreat indicates decline and danger. Amos warned Israel of "a famine not of bread, . . . but of hearing the Word of the Lord." After Malachi, Israel was nearly 400 years without a prophet of the Lord.

(4) "The woman was given two wings of a great eagle that she might fly into the wilderness, into a place where she is nourished." Did not John see the church coming to our free land, the motto of whose government is an eagle? Did he see how this woman has been and is now nourished in this land?

(5) "The serpent cast out of his mouth water, as of a flood after the woman." Satan now seeks the ruin of this woman. With a flood out of his mouth—corrupt doctrine—he seeks to sweep her to ruin.

(6) "But the earth helped the woman." Our Government passed a civic law, declaring freedom to all, in worship according to each one's conscience. That civic government act canceled—swallowed up—the wicked device of Satan.

(7) "The dragon was wroth with the woman and sought to make war on the remnant of her seed." Satan has lost none of his former wrath, but still seeks every opportunity to make war and to persecute the remnant of the seed of the woman—the church.

The language, "Where she is nourished," implies that the church is weak, and needs care. This is the church entering her second stage under the reformed movement. There were a number of distinct reform movements in close proximity. To identify the original one is of deep concern. If we send a cable message to Paris we would not try to identify our message there, among the many, by trying to follow its dark channel through the sea, but we would identify our message by the original draft thereof. In like manner, to identify the original, apostolic church among the many, set up during the Reformation, we could not follow it in apostolic succession through the dark ages, but we can identify it by the original charter, the Gospel. And it is a joy and delight to notice how closely Bro. Mack and his associates did follow the steps of Jesus in their effort of reform. They carefully followed the original charter, the teachings of Christ and his apostles, incorporating all the commandments of Jesus and the Gospel teachings into their new body, which they so prayerfully set up. This happy experience keeps their followers constantly walking in the light. It keeps them confirmed and not in doubt.

In view of the foregoing I pen this proposition: The church in its first stage did degenerate and apostatize to a very great extent, as foretold by Christ and his apostles. The church in its second stage has and is apostatizing now, as foretold by Christ and his apostles. This is unmistakably shown in a pamphlet by the author, entitled, "APOSTASY OF THE CHURCH, AS SHOWN BY CHRIST AND THE APOSTLES." My humble purpose, in these efforts, is to honor the cause, and to help confused souls. It is to aid us in taking our reckonings and to see where we are on our voyage over this tempestuous sea of time. It is to have them remember: "If a man therefore purge himself from these, he shall be a vessel unto honor, sanctified, meet for the Master's use."

The New Jerusalem

BY D. E. CRIPE

AN aged minister, now departed, who was so familiar with the Scriptures that he was sometimes called a "Walking Bible," was once asked the question: "When—at what stage of the events foretold by the prophets—are we to look for the New Jerusalem to come down from God out of heaven?"

After giving it a little thought, he replied: "I think it will be immediately after the great judgment."

Then he was asked: "Who, then, are the nations to be healed by the leaves of the trees which grow by the river that flows out from under the throne of God?"

The old minister meditated longer than he had over the first question. Then he answered: "I believe the New Jerusalem must come down before the final judgment."

The New Jerusalem, as described by the Revelator, is, beyond all comparison, more grand and magnificent than any city which human eye has beheld, or earth has ever known. Its Architect is the great Creator. It is made of the most precious material in the storehouse of the universe. It is built by Hands Divine in the workshop of heaven. It comes to earth finished, complete, adorned as a bride is adorned to meet her husband. Such a great, precious, wonderful city must be intended to serve a purpose no less great and wonderful. What is its mission to be, and when are we to look for its coming?

It is after the Revelator has deseribed the second resurrection and the final judgment that he tells about the New Jerusalem, and its coming to earth, and this has made most people believe that it will not come until after the final winding up of all things earthly, after irrevocable judgment has been meted out to all humanity. However, Bible students well know that the Scriptures do not give everything in absolutely correct order, so far as date and time are concerned. The element of time belongs to the earth only, and is of so little moment in the economy of heaven that the inspired writers are but little concerned about it. The prophets of old foresaw things which were to come to pass centuries later, and wrote of them as if they had already occurred.

The twenty-first and twenty-second chapters of Revelation treat of a glorious time when there shall be a new earth and a new heaven, but they also treat of a people who occupy this new earth—a people who have the power of choosing right and wrong, who can thirst and drink, who can be fearful, unbeleving, abominable. There are to be kings on this new earth, and they shall bring their glory and honor into this New Jerusalem. There are to be nations on this new earth who are not enjoying the perfect bliss of heaven, nor yet the anguish of the lost, but are afflicted and have the possibility of being healed by the leaves of the trees which grow by the river of the water of life. The condition, described here by the Revelator, makes it clear that it is neither the final blessedness of the righteous, nor the destiny of the wicked. It is a favored state, in which man can still choose right or wrong, and can prepare himself for the great judgment.

The language which introduces this blessed condition: "And I saw a new heaven and a new earth: for the first heaven and the first earth were passed away; and there was no more sea," may convey to some a broader meaning than it was intended to give. Some think that this earth is to be burned up by fire before it can be made new, and that it is from the ashes of the old that the new will spring forth. But the curse of the earth lies not in the matter of which it is composed, but in the sins of the people who inhabit it. A conflagration of the earth is not needed to make it a new dwelling-place for man.

The term "heaven" sometimes means the air which surrounds the earth, sometimes the upper firmament, in which the stars are placed, and sometimes the glory world around the throne of God. We should not, for a moment, think that this change will affect the eternal dwelling-place of God, nor yet the boundless universe in which he has set the everlasting stars. More likely this change is to affect the air around the earth, in which the birds fly, the winds blow and the clouds float. When Christ returns to earth, Satan is to be bound with a great chain and sealed in the bottomless pit. This, of itself, will bring about a great change in the air, for he is called the "prince of the power of the air," and we know that in the time of Job he had the power to bring from the wilderness a great destructive storm. He still has the power to bring storms and floods, in so far as God permits it, but when he is chained he can do so no more. At that happy time the heaven of the air will be freed from his baleful influence. The curse which was placed on the earth because of the sin in Eden, is on it yet, for it still brings forth thistles and thorns, but at that time, we are told, "There shall be no more curse." There is now on the earth hate and pride, and the long list of sins brought on through the temptations of Satan, but when he is chained, that he can deceive the nations no more, the earth will be swept of these deadly evils, and well may

Which Standard?

BY REBECCA C. FOUTZ

In most things there is quite a contrast between the Bible's and the world's standard of living, and yet do we not go by the latter because it is easier and more popular, although we know that we will be finally judged by the former?

Do we not usually measure people by their wealth, in this world's goods, and their social standing, when we know that God is no Respecter of persons, and that he judges mankind by the degree in which their heart and life is serving him?

Do we not dress according to the dictates of the world, when we are plainly told that his children will attire themselves sensibly and modestly, without any display or extravagance?

Do we not do business and get gain, justifying ourselves that our methods pass the world's standards, when we know that we'll be judged by the "heaped up measure" and golden rule requirements?

And so on, ad infinitum.

The Obligation of This Generation

BY C. S. IKENBERRY

"And thou shalt teach them diligently unto thy children."

Each generation has its own obligation to the succeeding generation. Though this obligation has been as varied as the ages they represent, yet there is a common fundamental obligation of committing to the succeeding generation our well-tried life experiences. Wesley stated a solemn truth when he wrote and sang: "To serve the present age, my calling to fulfill," for in serving the present age we are laying a foundation for future generations as a heritage to our children.

We have been ushered into a "new era," a wonderful era! "To be living is sublime." Who would want to miss the great opportunity of helping to rebuild the world on the foundation of Jesus Christ? With all these possibilities, the world is restless, seething—ever seeking to solve the great social and religious problems. We have but one solution for this unrest—to teach the rising gencration the true principles of the Christ-life. This is a tremendous problem. It can not be solved in the same selfish, easy life of the Christian as we once attempted to do. Our money and our service must be dedicated to this great task of teaching and training the children. We must not think only in terms of our own or our neighbor's children, but in terms of the great brotherhood of man. The world's menace today is the unchristian nation with a sudden vision of freedom—reeling and staggering in its blindness to obtain its coveted privileges. Whether I am free from this menace or not, I hear my Lord Jesus saying most emphatically: "Go ye into all the world and teach."

Fundamental in our teaching is "Faith." If we ever needed faith in God and the triumph of his Kingdom, it is now. Faith is a legacy we hold sacred, as a factor of our creed. "Faith of our fathers, holy faith. We will be true to thee till death." This, handed down to us as a sacred heritage from our fathers of blessed memory, becomes the balance wheel of our Christian activities. This new era does not need a new faith, but an old faith with a new vision.

Pause a moment and allow your mind to go back to the days of childhood's memory. Recount some of the influences that helped to shape your plastic soul. There is the old church with its sacred hymns, the communion service, the solemn warnings and exhortations. There is the sacred stream where baptism was administered. In the home, there is the Holy Book, the fellowship at the family altar with fervent prayers. Reviewing the influences that are contributing to the character of our children and the rising generation, he sure to note if we have these or equivalent forces that will insure the stability of character to stand the test of the oncoming ages.

The young mind does not need teaching only, but training and restraining. The law of constraint, though once unduly exercised, is yet a strong ruling force in the building of character. The modern theory in education, that allows the child to choose his own games, his own path, and to follow his own tendencies, is not in accordance with the principles of moral education. The law of restraint, properly applied, will give the youth the mature judgment of our own past experience, and will direct him to higher ideals.

The young convict of twenty-five years, when strapped to the electric chair of the State Prison of Massachusetts, preparatory to paying the full price for the murder of a rich Lynn shoe manufacturer, uttered a powerful sermon in his last despairing words when he said: "Oh, if when I was fifteen, some restraining hand had been laid on me!"

The message to this generation, in order to be a blessing to the next, is summed up in this sacred trust: "And thou shalt teach them diligently unto thy children."

Praying for the Kingdom

BY WARREN SLABAUGH

Do we realize the full meaning of our prayer when we pray for the Kingdom of God to come? We pray the Lord's Prayer so often that it is apt to become mechanical. So we should pause to reflect upon its meaning. We desire that God's name be hallowed. We would not take an oath upon our lips and we shrink when others carelessly take the name of our God in vain. And we see more in the petition than refraining from profanity and speaking forth praise to the name of God. We would that men might glorify God with their lives, for God gets his greatest glory from the loyal, obedient lives of his children. When we pray for the Kingdom, are we not desiring that spiritual forces shall conquer and control the hearts of men—that men shall come out of the kingdom of the world into the Kingdom of heaven? Do we not ask that his will be done; that men make his will supreme in their lives? God has brought about every good thing in man's life, therefore he has the right to expect implicit obedience to his will.

And so we pray that men hold his name sacred, that the Spirit of God control the hearts of men and that his law be supreme on earth, in fullest measure, in every nook and corner of the world, just as it is in heaven. We are sure that God's will is supreme in heaven. There is no profanity there, nor drunkenness, nor immorality, nor lying—no discord of any kind. In that glimpse of heaven, which John gives us, we hear only songs of praise to the One who sits on the throne. And is not that what we desire and pray for, that heaven may come on earth? Is there anything that the child of God could desire as much as the blessed thought that sin with all its evil effects be swept from the earth? Only the man who loves his sin can not pray this prayer with its depth of meaning.

Oh, we know that it can never be in this full measure. For God will not overrule the will of man; man will remain the master of his own destiny. And so there will always be men who will resist the Spirit of God and hold fast their sin. But this realization that, to the end of the age, sin will remain, does not quench the longing of our hearts that God's Kingdom might come in all its heavenly fullness.

But, perhaps, there is something else that may stand in our way of praying the prayer truly. We pray these three petitions, which, after all, are but one, unto God's glory; they are for him. But, brother, how will this be accomplished? Though we may never expect that heaven come on earth, yet we all agree that it must come in larger measure before God's plan be fulfilled. All the world must know God and his plan and have a chance to accept his salvation. Not until I am willing to allow all the world the same chance to know my God that I have had, can I say that the time is at hand for God to bring this age to a close. But how is this to be done? There is only one way and that is through his church. My book does not show me any other plan, nor does it tell me of another age of grace, when the work of salvation shall be finished. This age is the age of grace, and the souls of men are in the hands of God's people.

"Whosesoever sins ye forgive, they are forgiven unto them; whosesoever sins ye retain, they are retained," thus John records the Great Commission. Not that we are worthy, only as he makes us worthy. "Ye did not choose me, but I chose you."

So, when we pray the Lord's Prayer so easily (so mechanical it has become) are we not praying a solemn responsibility upon ourselves? Do we really want God glorified in the world through the spread of his Kingdom? Praying the Lord's Prayer regularly and loudly, will not bring it about. Better, what are we doing to bring in the Kingdom? Did you ever hear of any one in the Church of the Brethren who clung to the prayer—it were heresy to omit it a single time—, but who did not believe in foreign missions? He did not want the Kingdom to come in all the earth as in heaven. The prayer should be altered to fit his case, else he is praying for something he does not desire. "Thy will be done only in 'Ourtown' as in heaven."

I love the practice of our church in the matter of this prayer. We should not pray it less, but pray it more, thinking of what we are saying, until the responsibility will so completely fill our lives as to crowd out all our pride and selfishness, and then will not the hope grow bright that the time will speedily come when the kingdoms of the world shall become the Kingdom of our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ."

What Is Needed to Bring This Country Back to Safety

Above all else this country needs a nation-wide revival of old-fashioned prayer-meeting religion.

It needs a religion that makes men realize that if there is a heaven, there must also of necessity be a hell.

It needs a religion that makes a man realize that every act is recorded in his own conscience, and that though that may slumber, it can never die.

It needs a religion that makes an employer understand that if he is unfair to his employés and pays them less than fair wages, measured by his ability and their efficiency and zeal, he is a robber.

It needs a religion that makes an employé know that if he does not give full and efficient service, he, too, is a robber.

It needs a religion that makes a farmer, who packs bad fruit at the bottom and deceives the buyer by the good fruit on the top, realize that he is a thief, just as much as the man who robs a hen roost at night.

It needs a religion that makes a man who robs a railroad of its fare, or its freight bill, know that he robs himself of all right to feel that he is an honest man.

It needs a religion that makes a man realize that by driving too hard a bargain with his servant, his employé, or his merchant, he can be just as much a profiteer as the seller or producer who swindles by false weight, false packing, or false charges.

It needs a religion that will call to account church members who fail to contribute to the extent of their ability to the support of religion, and that compels them to recognize that if they are paying their pastor less than a living salary, they are robbing God and man alike.

It needs a religion that will make the laboring man, who, by threats or by actual violence against the non-union man, strives to keep him out of employment, realize that he is at heart a murderer and is murdering the individuality, and the liberty of his fellow-man.

It needs a religion that will make the politician, who yields principle for the sake of party, who worships at the feet of any class and sells his soul for political preferment, know that he is not only a coward and a poltroon, and unworthy of the respect of any decent man, but which will also make him see that he is helping to murder human liberty—as great a crime as murdering the individual man.

In short, we need a revival of that religion which will make every man and woman strive, in every act of life, to do that which, on the great judgment day, they will wish they had done, as, with soul uncovered, they stand before the judgment seat of the Eternal.

Until the people of this nation accept and live this religion, there will be strife where there should be peace, there will be strikes, and lockouts and murder where there should be coöperation and harmony; there will be hatred where there should be friendship and love.

In the Golden Rule, followed in the fullness of the spirit of this kind of religion, there would be found a solution for every business trouble. There would be created friendship between employer and employé; capital and labor would work in harmony and with efficiency, efficiency for the capital and efficiency for the labor, with profit to both.

Religion of this kind is not measured by the hope of a heaven hereafter, but by the full fruition now of "peace on earth to men of good will."

It is not merely the chanting of hymns here, or in the world to come, but it is in the recognition and full application by rich and by poor, by learned and unlearned, that each one is indeed his brother's keeper, that we can bring this country and the world back to safety.

A nation-wide acceptance of this, the only true religion in action, would bring business peace and world peace where there is now turmoil, and men would then cease to seek to gain their aims by lawless acts of immorality, but would, in spirit and in deed, follow the Divine command: "All things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them."—Monufacturers' Record.

Heart Diseases and the Faith Cure

BY WM. KINSEY

USUALLY, when we think of heart diseases, we are made to think seriously, because the heart is a most vital organ. There are some heart diseases spoken of in the Bible, and nearly always there is a cure or a prevention. We wish briefly to speak of three of these diseases: "Heart Trouble," "Heartburn," and "Heart Failure."

Heart Trouble

"Let not your heart be troubled: believe in God, believe also in me" (John 14: 1). Here the apostle speaks of heart trouble. The disciples had it. They seemed disappointed because Jesus was about to leave them. Oh, the heart trouble that is caused by disappointment! Hearts sorrow because of the loss of loved ones. A dear wife, a husband, or a child, is taken away by death. Hearts sorrow because a husband or a wife, a son or a daughter, is unsaved. Hearts are troubled because reverses have come. Listen! There is a Divine healing for your heart trouble—a faith-cure in which I believe. "Believe in God; believe also in me."

That's it. Faith in God and faith in Jesus Christ—faith and confidence in the good news he has for us (John 14: 2, 3). If we would only trust more in God! "Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace, whose mind is stayed on thee, because he trusteth in thee" (Isa. 26: 3). Mind is stayed—there is a phase of mind-cure about it, too. But let us trust, let us have faith! Love for Jesus also helps to cure: "If ye loved me, ye would have rejoiced [not sorrowed]" (John 14: 27, 28). Have faith in him who "healeth all our diseases."

Heartburn

"Was not our heart burning within us, while he spake with us in the way" (Luke 24: 32)? Medically, heartburn, or cardialgia, is a symptom or form of indigestion. Food will not benefit if not digested. It can not be assimilated. The trouble with the two men on their way to Emmaus, and others, was heartburn—a failure to digest the Word of God. Jesus was "opening to them the scriptures" (Luke 24: 32). And they needed it. "For as yet they [Peter and John] knew not the scriptures that he must rise again from the dead" (John 20: 9). Jesus had risen, and they did not know their Bibles on the subject. Bible ignorance!

Is it any better today? If those women, and others, had known the Scriptures, and Jesus' own words on the matter of his resurrection (Mark 9: 31, 32), they would not have spent their money needlessly at the drug store (Mark 16: 1). How dull of comprehension! "O foolish men, and slow of heart to believe in all that the prophets have spoken" (Luke 24: 25)! Slow to believe. A faith-cure again. This heartburn was simply a matter of spiritual indigestion. They did not understand (Mark 9: 32), and therefore could not assimilate the divine or spiritual truths. And so Jesus, after his resurrection, "beginning from Moses and from all the prophets, he interpreted to them in all the scriptures the things concerning himself" (Luke 24: 27). How long it takes us to see the point! Indigestion of the truth! Physically, very often heartburn is caused by an acid condition of the stomach. You'll often find relief by drinking a glass or two of water, thus diluting the acids in the stomach. We recommend the Water of Life for spiritual heartburn. Faith is the cure. Let us not be slow of heart to believe. Slow heart-action is abnormal.

Heart Failure

"Let no man's heart fail because of him" (1 Sam. 17: 32). Heart failure! What's the matter? Israel is facing a giant—Goliath. Giants cause a great deal of moral heart failure. Daniel had giants—the king and the lions' den. But his heart never failed him. "Dare to be a Daniel." Zerubbabel had a giant—adversaries who hindered the work of rebuilding the temple. "Who art thou, O great mountain? Before Zerubbabel thou shalt become a plain" (Zech. 4: 7). How? Through the power of the Holy Spirit. Never become scared when a giant defies God's people, or an adversary opposes his work. We need not despair; we shall triumph.

But David's secret of victory must be ours. He trusted in God. "Jehovah that delivered me out of the paw of the lion, and out of the paw of the bear, he will deliver me out of the hand of this Philistine" (1 Sam. 17: 37). Trust in Jehovah! That is also a faith-cure for heart failure. Saul trusted in his armor. And we too often trust in our own preparedness. David trusted in God, who was his Preparedness—his Shield, his Buckler, his Refuge and Fortress. "I will never leave thee nor forsake thee" (Heb. 13: 5). Trust in God forestalls heart failure.

The Bible as a Fountain

BY G. W. TUTTLE

Is not the Bible an ever-flowing fountain? Is there not always new satisfaction for the thirsty soul who would drink at the fountain? Will not he who is athirst drink deep and be satisfied?

Other fountains fail to satisfy the soul that is athirst. What are the fountains of pleasure, ambition, worldly gain, praise of men, education or talent, when the soul cries out for the Water of Life? Here is the fountain, the satisfying portion for those who thirst for God as David thirsted for the water from the well by the gate of Bethlehem. Has not God made provision for every rightful desire of both body and soul? "Who satisfieth thy mouth with good things; so that thy youth is renewed like the eagle's."

I shall never forget a noted spring—the Jacob's spring—that was close beside the dusty New England highway. How hard-trodden was the pathway to it! How plentiful were the waters which gushed out! How cooling and refreshing were its waters! I doubt if I ever passed it, in the heat of summer, without turning in and quenching my thirst. Other springs might fail when the drouth was upon us, but the waters of the old Jacob's spring still bubbled up in unceasing flow.

For the soul-life the Master came, that the thirst of the soul might be satisfied. "I am come that they may have life, and that they might have it more abundantly." Did not the Master himself drink from the fountain of the Word when tempted by the devil? Passage after passage he quoted to the adversary. Do we drink deep at the fountain of the Word when temptations are strong?

And the waters of the Word must flow through our hearts and lives. "Thy Word have I hid in mine heart, that I might not sin against thee," said the Psalmist. God's Word in the heart is better than gold in the bank. His promises are the gold of heaven in the bank of life. Do they not enrich us in time of trouble, and sorrow, and earthly losses, until we see—even though it be dimly—the heavenly gain that our Father sees so clearly?

Here is the fountain of perpetual flow; the fountain that pours into the heart of man a flood of new thoughts and new life, until his whole being is saturated with that which is new and wholesome and pure, and he realizes the fitness and power of these words: "If any man be in Christ, he is a new creature; old things are passed away; behold, all things are become new."

IT is an old saying, and one of portentous import, that we are forming characters for eternity. Whose—our own or others'? Both—and in that momentous fact lies the peril and responsibility of our existence. Who can fathom the solemn thought?

THE QUIET HOUR

Suggestions for the Weekly Devotional Meeting Or for Prayerful, Private Meditation

The Heavenly Visitor

Rev. 3: 20

For Week Beginning December 14, 1919

1. Introductory.—Christ KNOCKING at the door is a proof that he has come very near, and that he is ready to bless us. It also implies his willingness to come in, though the heart may be reluctant to grant him admittance. Man's nature is like a house with many rooms. The Lord knocks at the door of each apartment to gain access to the entire dwelling.

2. Christ Knocks as a Redeemer That He Might Save.—He longs to save THE SLEEPING CONSCIENCE from reposing in the slumber of death. Having paid the ransom for the soul, he knocks that he might gain possession of his blood-bought property, to save it from the destructive hands of the enemy.

3. Christ Knocks as a Physician That He Might Heal.—Well does he know that all the inmates of this house of "Mansoul" are sick and IN NEED OF HIS HEALING TOUCH. The whole head is sick, the heart faint, and the hands and knees are feeble. There is, in fact, "no soundness." The whole inner life has been polluted by the poison of sin. Behold, the Healer is at the door. "If any sin-sick man opens the door, I will come in unto him."

4. Christ Knocks as a Teacher That He might Instruct.—He is the Great Teacher come from God, who can anoint the eyes of his pupils with the heavenly eye-salve, that they may see and understand heavenly things. Minds, blinded by sin, can be RADIANTLY ILLUMINED by him who is the Wisdom of God. "If any unlearned man opens the door, I will come in unto him."

5. Christ Knocks as a King That He Might Rule.—A life that is self-centered is a blasted one. As Lord, Christ knocks that he might get into the life which he has redeemed by his atoning sacrifice, longing to govern and control it for its own good and divine glory. Until the King of Heaven is enthroned within, the soul is under the bondage and tyranny of foolish and presumptuous self. Christ wishes the government of your life to be upon his shoulders, that there might be no mismanagement in the affairs of the soul. Although he is "King of our lives," he does not compel—he knocks.

6. He Knocks as a "Merchantman" That He Might Enrich.—He knows the poverty of those who say they are rich and have need of nothing. Unsearchable riches are in Christ, and infinite mercy and love have brought him to the very door of your impoverished life, that you might be filled out of his fullness. "I counsel thee to buy of me gold refined in the fire, that thou mayest be rich." You buy without money when you let the "Great Merchant" in.

7. Christ Knocks as a Bridegroom That He Might Win Us for His Fellowship.—His desire is not only to save, to heal, to teach, to rule, and to enrich, but also to grant the boon of his fellowship to those who respond to his plea. He asks admission to our affections. Three times Peter heard this knock—"Lovest thou me?" Because he loves us so much, he is anxious to do the very best for us. Surely, we can well afford to give him, with our loyal allegiance, the fervent love of our heart and our very best fellowship.

8. Suggestive References.—Christ visits those gathered in his name (Matt. 18: 20). How Christ dwells in us (John 6: 56). We may have fellowship with Christ (John 17: 4-7). The close union of the believer and Christ (Rom. 8: 1, 10, 17). In fellowship with Christ (1 Cor. 1: 9). Our life hid with Christ in God (Col. 3: 3). Living together with Christ (1 Thess. 5: 9, 10). Great blessings in close fellowship with Christ (1 John 2: 6, 24, 28).

Eighteen confessed Christ, five of whom were baptized in the Bethesda church, Cloverdale congregation, Va.,—Bro. Levi Garst, of Salem, same State, evangelist.

OUR EVANGELISTS

Bro. Ira E. Long, of Andrews, Ind., will begin Jan. 4 in the Grand Rapids church, Mich.

Bro. Ira Weaver, of Pearl City, Ill., is holding a two weeks' revival at Cherry Grove, same State.

Bro. J. H. Cassady, of Huntingdon, Pa., is to begin some time in April in the Norristown church, same State.

Bro. John R. Snyder, of Bellefontaine, Ohio, began a series of meetings in the Batavia church, Ill., Dec. 4.

Bro. Ralph W. Schlosser, of Elizabethtown, Pa., is holding a series of meetings at the Midway house, Midway congregation, Pa.

Bro. F. E. McCune, pastor of the Mt. Morris church, Ill., is engaged in a series of meetings at the Columbia house, same congregation.

PERSONAL MENTION

The General Mission Board is scheduled to meet at the Publishing House in regular session on Wednesday, Dec. 17.

Bro. I. J. Rosenberger, of Greenville, Ohio, should be addressed, until further notice, at Schring, Fla., where he plans to spend the winter months.

Bro. J. E. Wagoner, of Cerro Gordo, Ill., one of the missionaries under appointment to India and waiting for the sailing date, is available for evangelistic work during the present month.

Bro. D. A. Crist, of Quinter, Kans., after taking his family to Southern California by automobile, returned to Kansas to attend the District Meeting of his District. He will join his family again shortly, at La Verne, Calif., where they expect to spend the winter.

ELSEWHERE IN THIS ISSUE

The Sunday-school Normal of Northwestern Ohio is to be held in the Silver Creek church, near Pioneer, Dec. 19-22. Further particulars are given on page 780.

Aid Societies of Michigan and of other States, who desire to help the work in Grand Rapids, Mich., will please note the announcement by Bro. C. L. Wilkins among the Notes.

MISCELLANEOUS

Southern Ohio will hold its annual Sunday School Institute in the West Dayton church, beginning on the evening of Dec. 22 and closing Dec. 26. Brethren J. E. Miller and A. C. Wieand and Sister Cora M. Stahly are to be the instructors.

Sister Eliza J. Moore, of Newberg, Oregon, desires us to make special announcement of the love feast, to be held in that church at 7:30 P. M., Dec. 6—to follow the series of meetings now being conducted by Bro. S. F. Sanger, of Empire, Calif.

The season for love feasts now having practically closed, we have discontinued the regular column, for the time being, but will on this page mention the few feasts still to be held: "Dec. 20, Bethel church, Fla.; Dec. 27, 5:30 P. M., East Nimishillen church, Ohio; Dec. 6, 6:30 P. M., Virden church, Ill.; Jan. 1, Strait Creek church, Ohio."

A certain eastern congregation has taken on a new lease of life within the past year as the result of efficient pastoral service. A recent announcement of "coming events" contains, among other things, a "Program for a Live Church." There are seven good points in the program. Here are the last two: "There are souls to be saved; pray the Lord to use you. There is money needed; worship the Lord with your share." Can you guess why this church has been prospering?

In our issue of two weeks ago attention was called to the announcement of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, concerning the Week of Prayer, Jan. 4 to 11, 1920. In line with this, a number of correspondents have written us, urging that special emphasis be put upon the importance of praying for a greater religious awakening, and for greater consecration to the work of soul-saving. Some have suggested that special "watch night" services be held for this purpose. We are glad to encourage anything that will contribute to so important an end. How can we begin the New Year better than with earnest prayer for a genuine revival?

We are requested to make mention of the special evening lectures to be given in connection with the Training School for Church Leaders, now in progress at Bridgewater College. The dates for lectures by Dr. John W. Wayland, of the State Normal School, Harrisonburg, Va., and Pres. H. K. Ober, of Elizabethtown College, are already past. Those that remain are as follows: Dec. 5, Our Needs for Christian Education, by Pres. D. W. Kurtz, of McPherson College; Dec. 6, The Challenge to Religious Education, by Eld. J. W. Lear, member of General Educational Board; Dec. 11, A Master in the Kingdom of Life, by Dr. C. C. Ellis, of Juniata College; Dec. 13, The Bible and Education, by Dr. J. A. Garber, of Washington, D. C.; Dec. 17 and 18, The Call of the Child and the Personal Element in Teaching, by Supt. E. W. Halpenny, of the International Sunday School Association. There is no charge for admission to these lectures.

A BYSTANDER'S NOTES

The Radiant Life.—We are indebted to the American revisers of the Bible for the introduction of the beautiful and suggestive word "radiant," into our Bibles. It is found in Psa. 34: 5, "They looked unto him and were radiant," and in Isa. 60: 5, "They shall see and be radiant, and their heart shall thrill and be enlarged." There are wonderful possibilities in the utterances above given, and best of all, it is within each one's power to have the inward peace and joy illumine the countenance to the point of radiancy.

When Courage Is All Important.—To know whether the genuine grit of right-doing is an important part of your personal make-up, just ask yourself these few questions: (1) Do I, in all essential points, live according to my convictions? (2) Am I able to say "no" squarely and firmly, when the people around me are ready to say "yes"? (3) Am I willing and ready to live honestly within my means, rather than to live more luxuriously, though dishonestly, upon the means of others? (4) Am I brave enough to refuse to do a thing which is manifestly wrong, even in the face of the fact that others do it unblushingly, or because it is customary in the business world? (5) Am I willing to stay home evenings, in order to improve myself by a truly worth while study of good books—not forgetting the Bible—while others spend their leisure hours in profitless entertainment, or having a so-called "good time" generally? (6) Am I content to remain in honest poverty, fully retaining my integrity, while others grow rich by questionable methods, even boasting of their "smartness" and "brilliancy"? (7) Am I fully determined not to bend the knee to popular idolatries, but to stand firmly and erect, while others are bowing and groveling in the dust, to curry favor with the "vain and giddy throng"?

A New Plan of Community Service.—Two years ago the Christian forces of Cincinnati, Ohio, entered upon a close cooperative alliance, by which it was planned to reach all foreign families. The organization is known as the "Cincinnati Social Unit," and aims to exercise a salutary influence upon all who need the practical helpfulness thus made possible. From the very beginning it has been made clear to the foreigner that the whole endeavor is wholly unselfish, having but the single aim of helping to bear the burdens of "the stranger within our gates." The results, so far attained, seem to justify abundantly the investment of time and resources devoted to the work. It is a constructive effort of the highest order—well worthy of general imitation.

Why He Could Not Be an Infidel.—One of the leading lights in the world's arena of foremost scholars frankly confessed that except for three things he would have been an infidel. For years he had read every book he could find that assailed the religion of Christ, but he still remained an humble disciple of the Master, his reasons being these: "(1) I am a man. I am going somewhere, but man-made books have not shed a solitary ray of light upon the gloom and uncertainty ahead. I will not permit them to rob me of my only Guide, and leave me stone-blind. (2) I had a mother. When she went down the dark valley, she leaned upon an Unseen Arm as calmly as a child goes to sleep upon the breast of its mother. (3) I have three motherless daughters. They have no protection but myself. I would not want to leave them in the world if you blot out all teachings of the Gospel."

The Christian Workers.—Each member of the Christian Workers' Society, as well as the organization as a body, must walk on two legs—DEVOTION and SERVICE. Too many of the members, as well as the organization, as a body, try to get along on just one, wholly forgetting that vision of God should always be followed by service to man. The two legs might still more appropriately be designated as "prayer to God" and "work for humanity." Either one without the other proves entirely inadequate. The one hits or prepares us for the other. The logical order, too, should be observed and never reversed. BEING should always precede DOING. In order to BE, we must be charged with divine energy from on high, and only when so energized with God's love and Spirit, can we render CHRISTIAN SERVICE to our fellow-men. Some are trying to render service without the Divine Energy, because they have neglected to "take time to be holy." When our spiritual "trolley" is off, we are powerless—there is no contact with the great Power House.

Latter-Day Visions.—God gives us visions in these days. Every day they come to us—these visions of duty—and we can either revel in them, and philosophize about them, and send the messenger away empty, or we may, with the devotion and fidelity of a Paul or a Peter, follow the way they lead and, living up to our vision, do service for God and man. These visions may come to us in many ways. Sometimes they come in a paper or a book, rousing our emotions even to tears, concerning some oppressed people, or some wrong in the community, that needs righting in the strength of God and in fellowship with Jesus Christ. There are two ways in which we may treat that impulse—that heavenly vision. One is to let it expend itself in feeling, thus becoming harder-hearted than ever, and more indifferent to righteousness. The other way is to follow the new impulse, the aroused emotion, and let it vent itself in seeking to right the wrong, to lift up the oppressed, to bring help to those in need. If we choose the latter course, and live up to our vision, we are lifted to the atmosphere of ecstatic vision—we reach a higher plane, and our hearts and minds are enlarged.

The Danger of Undue Criticism.—Years of observation have taught the Bystander that it is easy, indeed, to fall into the habitual attitude of opposition to proposed activities and their promoters. Every congregation has at least some members who have a knack of discovering error where the more charitably inclined do not find it. They are "the watchdogs of the faith," as one of these would-be critics designated himself. Leaders of the church are held in special suspicion, because a leader, now and then, in the past, has not been wholly without blame. At any rate, the critic assumes that the outstanding man always needs watching. Let an uneonfirmed story start in a newspaper, about a brother whose praise is in all the churches, and at once the mote-hunter will pounce upon it with ill-concealed glee. Of course, the supercilious critic will not concern himself with so trifling (?) a matter as making due inquiry regarding the accuracy of alleged rumors, but will roll the salacious bit of scandal as a sweet morsel under his tongue. For such a one Paul's sublime eulogy: "Love thinketh no evil," is absolutely meaningless. It is beyond his comprehension.

Filipinos Declare for Prohibition

A memorial has been sent to the Congress of the United States by the Council of State of the Philippine Islands, to permit the people to decide the question of prohibition for themselves. Acting-Governor Yeater has announced that the question of prohibition will be considered in his message to the special session of the Legislature, and it is reported that, in case the National Prohibition Amendment should be considered inapplicable to the Philippines, the Legislature of the islands will itself pass a prohibition measure—the proposed enactment being an exact copy of the act of the American Government. Such a praiseworthy determination for the right is worthy of commendation.

China's Need of Medical Practitioners

Those who have wondered why medical missionaries are so urgently called for in China, may get conclusive information from returned missionaries, and even more so from the figures reported by the Foreign Division of the Interchurch World Movement. Startling disclosures of the lack of medical attention in China have been revealed in all their hopelessness. According to the latest report of the American Medical Association there are 147,812 physicians in the United States—one doctor for each group of 744 persons in this country. In China, with a population of 400,000,000, there are 563 doctors, or a ratio of one healer for approximately 710,479 persons—a needy field, undoubtedly, for consecrated medical missionaries.

Health Agencies Called to Washington Session

Preventable diseases cost the United States $4,000,000,000 less in 1917 than they would, had the health conditions of twenty years ago prevailed. There were 400,000 fewer deaths in 1917 than would have occurred, had the 1900 death rate prevailed. It is for the purpose of still further extending the good results that have so far been achieved, that Surgeon-General Rupert Blue, of the United States Public Health Service, is calling on all health agencies to coöperate in a conference in Washington. Health specialists of the United States have given years of study to the prevention and cure of disease, and their indefatigable efforts are bearing fruit abundantly. In this, as all else, greater knowledge is bound to lead to the most happy results.

New York Printers' Costly Strike

According to accurate estimates by trade officials the strike of New York's printers, which has just been brought to a close, involved a total loss of about $3,500,000 by the 10,000 strikers who, in defiance of the orders of union officials, decided on "a cessation from all labor" until their demands could be met. As, under the old wage scale they were already receiving from $40 to $75 per week, their employers declared their inability to pay the advance demanded, and so the printing industry of the eastern metropolis was practically suspended, affecting more than 250 shops. Losses by employers, by reason of the strike, were enormous—in some cases as much as $200,000. A month or more will elapse before conditions will return to normal. With losses all around, the strike is a costly means of adjustment.

China's New Industrial Era

More than aught else in China, its greater industrial development is the burning question of the day. Strange as it may appear, at first sight, the leading incentive toward native industrialism is seen in the all-permeative "irritation against Japan." Seemingly that point is never lost sight of in the more comprehensive development of its industrial enterprises. The growing danger of Japanese domination is fully realized, and as a first step, in asserting the rights of absolute independence for China, her people propose to supply their needs by the products of their own workmanship. This is no small undertaking, when we remember that the average Chinese mind is conservative in the extreme. Much constructive work, however, has been done by missionaries, in the rejuvenation of China, and in the implanting of greater efficiency.

The Massacre of Jews Must Stop

Not the Jewish race only, but also the Christian people of free America, protest against the unspeakable atrocities inflicted upon helpless Jews in Eastern Europe. Nov. 24 was the national day of abasement and mourning, specially observed by the Hebrew race in contemplation of the outrages, but the heart of all America, where religious liberty is the heritage of all, responds in sympathy to the pathetic appeal. Wholesale murders and fiendish torture are acts of barbarians. When they are the climax of so-called religious persecution, every true Christian should recoil from such excesses with shame and horror. Christian churches, no less than the Jewish people, respect the sanctity of human life. Anti-Jewish pogroms pretend to have a pro-Christian basis and sanction. No more intolerable libel on genuine Christianity was ever conceived or uttered.

A Plot for World Terrorism

As shown by a document, recently seized in Switzerland, the leaders of the "Red" element in Russia—Lenine and Trotzky—are planning to bring about an international revolution this winter, involving attempts on the lives of rulers of representative Governments, as well as general strikes, destruction of railways, mines, ships, etc. If the elections in the larger countries do not show results that are favorable to the Russian agitators, the agents of the "Reds" plan to execute all Governmental personages, both of the Allied countries and Germany. Apparently these reactionaries are determined to carry out their program of "rule or ruin" to the bitter end. They may well be regarded as relentless foes of all duly-constituted authority, just as they are inimical to all that savors of the righteous principles of Christianity.

Was It a Meteoric Visitor?

Scientists hardly know just what to make of the mysterious flare that momentarily illuminated three States on the night of Wednesday, Nov. 26, accompanied by atmospheric disturbances and violent tremors of the earth. Many of the residents of Michigan, Illinois and Indiana fled from their homes in panic, fearing an earthquake. Houses were shaken, windows were broken and for a period of several seconds the entire country was bathed in a garish light, as bright as the noonday sun. A lighthouse attendant at Grand Rapids, Mich., claims to have seen an apparent ball of fire fall into the lake, at quite a distance from his place of observation. Scientists, while not wholly agreed as to the true nature of the most extraordinary phenomenon, are inclined to regard it as a meteoric visitation of unusual volume, the terrific impact of which, on striking the lake, might readily have caused the disturbances noted.

A Great Gain to the Nation

Experts, connected with the admirable Scientific Institute, established by the Rockefellers, are certain that eventually they will absolutely eliminate the disease caused by the "hookworm." It has been shown that tens of thousands of lives are destroyed throughout the South, annually, by the dreaded hookworm. Examinations in army recruiting stations show that a man infected with the hookworm has the mind of a child. He can not think like a man, nor can he work like a man. The same results were found in India. This means that in treating a single disease, the Rockefellers will add to the cash value of human effort, within a few years, ten times the value of the Rockefeller fortune. And as the hookworm is overcome, so also other diseases are conquered. Malaria, infantile paralysis, cancer, etc., are being mastered as never before. And thus the oil magnate's multiplied millions are made to serve the cause of healing diseased humanity.

The Lure of the Lottery

Older readers will readily remember that in years gone by lotteries flourished everywhere. Finally public sentiment rose in indignation and all were ruled out by law. At latest reports, the Republic of France is to enter the lottery business again, on a scale so gigantic that even the notorious Louisiana State Lottery dwindles into insignificance. Twelve billion dollars are to be borrowed by the sale of bonds, which will be offered to the public from time to time, as the money is needed. With every bond sold, a number will be given. At the end of a definite period there will be a grand drawing, with prizes for the lucky numbers. Prizes will run as high as $250,000. No interest is paid on the bonds—the prizes taking its place. It is generally conceded that France is making a radical mistake in the employment of the lottery, as above outlined. As a means of fostering the spirit of gambling, no better way could be devised.

A Time for Calm Reflection

Several of the religious journals, and even some of the secular publications, are strongly opposed to the bill, introduced into the House and Senate, known as the Kahn-Chamberlain Bill for Compulsory Military Training and Service. These exponents of public opinion aver that the bill in question means military conscription, no matter how skillfully that fact may be concealed. "At a time when we are far and away the richest and most powerful country; when no conceivable enemy menaces our safety; when alone of the great nations our youth is not seriously decimated by war, or our population weakened by disease; at a moment when the whole world is sick unto death with militarism, staggering under its cost, and in almost open revolt against conscription, we are to follow the old plans and compel our erstwhile allies to follow our example. There seems to be a lack of funds properly to feed and educate all our children—one-fifth of the little ones of New York City suffer seriously from malnutrition—but we can pour out money like water for the enormous costs of universal military training. Many of the people struggle with the problem of the high cost of living, but our military enthusiasts cheerfully advocate to give the powder companies and armament manufacturers further opportunities to grow fat on the sort of armed truce which fails to insure peace, but makes war more likely."

Decreased Human Efficiency

Mr. Harold Almert, a labor specialist, declares that, generally speaking, since the beginning of the war, the mental attitude of labor toward its work, toward its employers and toward the public, has materially changed. In many instances the desire to serve has gone, and the desire to strive for efficiency for efficiency's sake, has disappeared. Instead, there is the obvious tendency to deal with the employer at arm's length, persistently clamoring for a shorter day, higher pay and less work. In proof of his statement Mr. Almert cites this fact: "Before the war 20,000 men produced 40,000 automobiles a month in a certain well-known plant. Today it requires 35,000 men to produce 20,000 cars during a similar period—an almost unbelievable situation." This decreased human efficiency is doubtlessly responsible, in part, at least, for the much discussed high cost of living.

A City Adopts an India Hospital

It is greatly to the credit of the women of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., that, through their energetic action, the maintenance of Vellore hospital, in India, has been assumed by the people of that city. Naming their venture after the title of a mission study book, it is known as "A Crusade of Compassion." Think of the wounds, the sores and the pains of those Indian natives, and then note the list of the things the Poughkeepsie women are going to buy, make and send: "Thousands of thin strips of unbleached muslin, compresses, sponges, face masks, operating aprons and caps, absorbent cotton, bed linen, utensils, toilet articles, and—most of all—there will be ample funds." In approbation of movements like the above—which are of great help to India's needy ones—we need but mention the one outstanding fact that many who are not specially interested in India because of religious motives, will readily help if their city decides to "adopt" a hospital in that land.

A Dire Forecast for Dec. 17

Not wholly supported by other scientists, Prof. Albert F. Portia, of the University of Michigan, predicts an electro-magnetic disturbance without parallel for Dec. 17. On that day Mercury, Venus, Mars, Jupiter, Saturn and Neptune will be in conjunction—a fact generally admitted by astronomers. Prof. Portia, however, asserts that electro-magnetic currents between these six planets and Uranus, on the opposite side of the sun, will pierce that great luminary like a mighty spear, and cause a sun-spot big enough to be seen with the naked eye. The earth—an innocent bystander—will suffer disturbances therefrom without precedent. There will be—according to Prof. Portia—hurricanes, lightning, colossal rains, gigantic lava eruptions, great earthquakes, floods, and fearful cold. Just how much of this woeful prediction may be realized, will be known accurately only after the day has come and gone. Meanwhile every trusting child of God may in full confidence say: "God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble."

A Cheerful Giver

An address was recently given at Celina, Ohio, by a representative of the American Committee for Relief in the Near East. The sufferings and the extreme distress of the unfortunate people were touchingly described—the audience being visibly impressed thereby. After the address, the speaker noticed a man trying to make his way to the platform. Judging by his garb, he was one of the world's toilers. When asked by the lecturer what he could do for him, the man replied: "I want to know whether it is a sure thing that all the money, contributed to the fund, actually reaches the starving Armenians." Assurances were thereupon given him, and ample proof furnished. Later developments showed that the inquirer, a railroad engineer, had already contributed $1,500 to the relief fund—perhaps more than could rightfully be expected from a man of his circumstances. But when fully convinced, by the statement of the lecturer, that "Bleeding Armenia" is in need of all that America can give, and more, he went home, sold his house for $3,500, and gave it to the fund for the establishment of an orphanage in Armenia. The custodians of the fund rather hesitated in taking the money, but the engineer insistingly replied: "Oh, that's nothing at all. I can't stand the idea of knowing that women and little children are going hungry. Why, I could sell and give away all I have, and still be a rich man. I have my work, my hands, my health, and I never know what it is to go hungry. Those Armenians have few opportunities to work; they are helpless. I deserve no credit for giving, as long as I am not depriving myself of anything." Here is an altogether new and wholly altruistic conception of real giving. Narrow souls, perhaps, might say that this munificent giver is not prudent and thrifty, but they lose sight of the most important factor of human nature at its best—the doing of something wholly unselfish and glorious. Need we wonder why God, in all ages, has blessed people of that sort? We are assured that he "loveth the cheerful giver."

HOME AND FAMILY

Grandma's Bible

The leaves are stained and yellow with the finger-marks of age,
And the print is growing dimmer on each familiar page;
But it holds the same sweet story, and we love it all the more,
Since she who read and loved it drifted slowly from our shore.

In the winter's shortened evenings, in the summer's noonday heat,
I can see the dear face bending o'er the stories old and sweet;
And through old-fashioned windows the fading daylight fair
Laid its hand in benediction on the silvery white hair.

I recall with joy those hours when, with the Book upon her knee,
She would show me all the pictures and explain them each to me;
And my eyes grew big with wonder, while her eyes would fill with tears,
As, with quivering voice, she told me of the Christ's few suffering years.

"Rewards of merit" often lay between the pages there;
Or a flower, grown dark with pressing; or a curl of baby hair;
Or book-marks made by friends of old, sent so many years before;
Or some treasure kept by Grandpa through the changing scenes of war.

I think I yet can see her, pondering slowly o'er each word;
Into my growing fancy burned each syllable I heard.
Can I e'er forget the promise, forget the messages so fond,
When the silver cord is breaking and my bark has sailed beyond?

Oh, memories, sweet and hallowed! as I turn each yellow leaf,
They banish care and sorrow, and brush back the tear of grief;
They give us peace and patience, as we mourn those gone before,
But smile to think that some glad day we'll meet to part no more.

The Manlys' Box

BY BESS BATES

EVERY fall the Komo Aid Society prepared a box of clothing for the Manlys. The Manlys were poor and unfortunate and perhaps a little shiftless. Sister Manly had never been strong at the best, and the constant bearing and raising of children had left her weak, and unable to handle her work. Bro. Manly was well-meaning, but was one of the kind of men who are always out of a job, but with good prospects in view. But Sister Manly had found out long ago that prospects were poor things to raise a family on, so the Manlys had drifted along until they were partly dependent on the church for aid. Therefore, with their accustomed energy, the Komo Aid took matters into their own hands and made a set of clothes around for the children each winter.

"Let's see, there's eight children altogether this year, and six in school," counted up Sister Brown, who always liked to know just how much work was ahead of her.

"It does seem to me," criticised Sister White, "that Sister Manly ought to get ahead with her work a little. That oldest girl is big enough to help quite a bit now. I was down there to see them, and they certainly do have things in a mess."

"It's awful," agreed Sister Brown, whose house was always immaculate, even if she had to stay up until midnight to make it so. "And I almost think it is a waste of time to sew for them. They do not take care of the things we make. The work of the Aid ought to go where it can do some good."

A murmur of agreement went up from several sisters. Sister Brown continued: "I took Sister Manly to task for the way she let the children wear out those good clothes we sent last year. You remember those gray flannelette dresses we sent. They were made so good and stout. I made 'em myself and I know. Those children wore them before and after school and racked them right through. Sister Manly said they didn't like the color, and she couldn't make them take care of them. I didn't say any more. I was afraid of what I might say," ended Sister Brown.

"They ought to be more grateful. That's certain," said Sister Potter. "Bro. Manly helps around the store some, and he always expects so much. We have given them quite a bit and the more we give, the more he expects. Saturday nights he always hangs around for all the fruit that is beginning to spoil, and seems to expect that we ought to give it to him outright."

And so the sisters talked, as they sewed away as fast as they could, on the clothes for the Manlys. Aunt Nancy Lovelock, President of the Aid, had been silent through nearly all of the talk. She rarely criticised anyone. Presently she began to talk, a little smile playing about her mouth as she did so: "'Judge not, that ye be not judged,'" quoted Aunt Nancy.

"Now, Nancy, you know it's the truth, every word of it," Sister Brown declared.

"'For with what judgment ye judge, ye shall be judged: and with what measure ye mete, it shall be measured unto you.'"

The room became silent, except for the whir of the busy sewing-machines, for who dares to question those matchless words?

Aunt Nancy continued in a quiet voice: "'It's more blessed to give than to receive' and lots pleasanter. It seems to me there is nothing quite so nice as to be able to give people things. It means that you have something for yourself and some over, and I always feel lots better when I help some one out of a tight place than the person that is helped feels. Most of us have always had all the pleasure of giving, and haven't had to receive so very much. I mean, have to receive—be in a position where you must have help, like the Manlys are. I never will forget the winter when Jim was a baby. We were awfully hard up. Crops had failed and we had no money and I wasn't well. We had to go to Jim's uncle to borrow some money to live on, that winter. My, that was hard on my pride. It just seemed as if I couldn't stand it at all. Jim's cousins sent over some of their cast-off dresses for me to wear out. I needed them and I wore them, but I hated them, and it was years before I really could like the girls who gave them to me, though they meant it all right. When they butchered, Jim's aunt always sent over meat, and lots of times she would send over things that she thought we needed. I was glad for them and yet, how I hated to take those things, because I knew I couldn't return the favor. It's the hardest thing in the world to be dependent on other people's charity. I have often thought of it when I am giving some poor person something, how much better I feel now than I used to feel when I was receiving charity, and so, when recipients of charity may not seem so very grateful, I just overlook it and try to make them feel just as easy about accepting it as I can.

"We all know that Alice Manly came from a good family that held their heads up. She hasn't been to blame for getting where she is, and, personally, I don't blame her one bit for letting those children wear out those gray dresses. I don't believe a single one of us would want any of our girls to wear dresses like those to school. I say, Let's make them just as good things as our children wear, and fix them up so a stranger couldn't say: 'That's a charity child.' And then, instead of criticising Mrs. Manly's gratitude, let's see that our giving is done from the heart."

An assenting murmur arose from the sisters, and the subject of conversation was diplomatically changed.

A Mother's Love

BY CLEMMA L. PEEBLER

WHAT is there, on this earth, that is so wonderfully potent as a true mother's love? There is nothing, absolutely nothing, that is so steadfast, immovable, tender and longsuffering as mother's love. As long as time lasts and the stars of heaven continue to shed their radiance, just so long will mother's love cling closely to her offspring.

We may think that love, in its fullest and richest degree, is ours, when we join hands with another and say: "Until death do us part." But just wait until some day a tiny mite of humanity is placed in our arms and we know that it is "bone of our bone and flesh of our flesh"! Then it is that the deepest, richest and most unfailing streams of love are tapped, and we drink of the rich draught which is known only by those that are mothers.

God must have selected the most wonderful spirits in all the spirit land and sent them to earth to be mothers.

What is it that mother won't do? No need to tell of the tender, loving care that is bestowed during the early stages of babyhood. No need to write about the many anxious hours when baby was fretful and feverish, nor of the long hours of nightly vigil, when rocked and soothed in mother's arms only, baby could rest. No, there's no need to tell of these. We know that too well.

Then, again, we see mother's love poured out with lavish hand as baby grows to childhood and she ties the little sunbonnet strings, or places the little cap on a mass of shining curls and with tender, tear-dimmed eyes, starts the little one on its way to school. Older and older as the child grows, more and more comes the need of a mother's love. After a while the adolescent stage is reached. Ah, then it is that mother's heart is often torn and bleeding, but just as beautiful roses yield their richest perfume, when bruised and crushed, so, when mother's heart is even broken and bleeding, yet, in the agony of the hour, the cry goes up from her lips: "It is my child."

Children or Poodle Dogs, Which?

BY LOTTIE HORNING

IN picking up the morning paper, I was horrified beyond measure at an advertisement which read: "Wanted, two or three rooms for light house-keeping; have two children that I neither want to drown nor trade for a poodle dog.—H. P. M." This man had come from another State and had been searching for rooms for three weeks and had been told by a number of landladies that while they had rooms to rent, they would not take children under any consideration. They said they did not object to couples with one or two dogs, but would have no children around. The man took the matter to officials, but they told him they could not compel people to take children into their homes unless they wished them there. The man said he would have to leave Dallas, as he did not wish to trade his children for poodle dogs.

What is this old world coming to, when people will go so far as to almost sell dear little innocent children for an ugly dog? We have moved quite a few times and experienced similar trouble. When inquiring about an empty house, often the first thing a landlord would ask was: "Have you any children?" Our hearts were often pierced to the core by this stinging question, as we almost felt at once that he had an objection to children, else he would not have asked it.

At one time I wanted to ask a party by phone concerning a house, which I had looked at, and the first question I asked him was if he had any objection to children. I told him that if he had, I would not wish to know anything more concerning the property. He said: "Why do you ask that?" Then I told him what trouble we had often experienced, and his answer was: "I wonder were they ever little children?" Sure enough, but they had forgotten that. They seemed to have forgotten that some one's house made a home and a shelter for them at one time. This landlord's home had never been blessed with children and he dearly loved them, and he said while he owned quite a few houses, none of them were too good or too fine for children. Matt. 18: 6-10 would better be painted on a large sign and hung where some people can see it daily until their very conscience would be seared. Wouldn't we grown-ups feel offended to be turned out the way some landlords want to turn out children? Then, why is it not an offense to the dear children? God has only loaned them to us and he expects us to train them to be of some use in his Kingdom, in such a way that they will be as flowers transplanted in his garden above, at any time he sees fit to call for them.

What is sweeter or more innocent and pure and more lovable than the dear little face of a baby when it smiles at us? God has created woman with a heart of mother love and it surely grieves him to see her cast aside that thought, love and respect of a sweet little child and put in its place an ugly poodle-dog. True, we are to show due respect to all dumb animals, and I would strongly advocate teaching children not to inflict any unnecessary punishment on them, yet God created them not in his own image, as he did man, and surely he never intended them to take the place of children.

Would a dog have been better fitted for the place when Christ took a little child and set it in their midst and said: "Except ye . . . become as little children ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven"? What more perfect type of purity and innocence could he have used than a child?

I was thoroughly disgusted one time, at the sight of a stylishly-dressed lady walking the streets of a city with an ugly bull-dog attached to a gold chain and fastened to a gold bracelet on her wrist. Surely such a sight was not pleasing in the sight of God.

Let us strive harder, as we tread day by day life's toilsome road, that we "offend not one of these little ones, for it were better that a mill stone were hanged about our necks and we were drowned in the depth of the sea."

Little Maggie's Gift

BY LULU R. TINKLE

It was noon when Silas Baker came in from the field, and a quick glance at the table told him that dinner was not ready. Turning to his wife he said in his usual grouchy manner: "I say, Lizzie, I want dinner right away. I ain't got no time to fool around here. Well, the hog market's up. I thought it would be. I'll make a good speck out of mine yet. Well, what's a goin' to happen! Raise a thousand dollars for missions! 'The Fall Creek will raise a thousand dollars for foreign missions this week. Will solicit members soon.'

"Now they don't need to solicit me. Some people get it into their heads to do something big. Lots of thanks them heathen give for sendin' them food, money and sich. I guess I've got a place for all my hard-earned cash. Tain't long since I paid three dollars to roof that meetin'house, when my granary needed it worse. I guess they'd better not come to me. I'll spend my money where I can see how it's used. If they come here this afternoon you tell them I'm busy on the back of the farm, and say that times is hard with us this year. Now, mind you, don't send them to me."

That afternoon the farmer spent on his farm, planning how he could make the most on next year's crops, and looking over his fine flock and herd. Occasionally he looked up, as if expecting some one, and once he stopped, took out his pocket-book and placed a roll of bills in his vest-pocket, saying to himself: "It's best to be a little careful. One might lose a pocket-book and, besides, a little loose change is sufficient."

Mrs. Baker soon forgot about the solicitors when her friend, Mrs. Morris, came rushing in out of breath.

"No, no, I can't stay long. Well, I will sit down. I just came in to tell you the news. Not heard it? Goodness only knows what'll happen next. That Sam Smith and his wife and children are all goin' to be missionaries. Yes, sir, they're a goin' clean across the ocean. I forget the name of the place. Is it Africa? Well, anyway, it's a heathen place. And he's a leavin' all his people here. Oh, we are all bound fer trouble, but I jest said last night, when Lou Emma was gone to the dance: 'I'd a heap rather have her there, in good society, than among the heathens.' But I must be going and finish my work, or I'll be late to church in the morning."

It was Sunday morning. The sermon was finished and the minister's eyes swept with intense searching the faces of his congregation. He had made a strong appeal for the support of missions and had hoped to inspire them with the spirit of giving, and make them feel that it was a privilege instead of a duty. Their faces told him he had failed. As he bowed his head on his hands he murmured: "God help me."

He did not see the bent figure of little crippled Maggie, in the rear of the church, a figure that was trembling under the fire of his appeal.

"Lord Jesus," the little one was saying brokenly, "I ain't got nothin' ter—" What was it that made the child catch her breath as though a cold hand had touched her?

"Yes, you have, Maggie," whispered a voice from somewhere. You've got your crutch. Your beautiful crutch that was given to you, it's worth lots of shining dollars. You can give your best friend, that helps you to get into the park and hear the birds sing, and takes you to preaching, and makes your life so happy."

"Oh, no, Lord," sobbed the child, choking and shivering. "Yes, yes—I will. He gave up more'n that for me." Blindly she extended the polished crutch and placed it in the hands of the deacon, who was taking up the scanty collection.

For a moment the man was puzzled, but the minister saw and understood. Rising, he asked her to tell why she made this gift.

Trembling she arose and in a timid, soft voice said: "You see, it's all I had. It's worth a hundred dollars, and that will carry the blessed Story of Jesus to some who are dying without his love. I can be happy without it, if you will carry me to the hospital where I can read and sing to the sick folks. Please, don't you think you can use my gift?"

Silas Baker arose slowly and stood a moment with bowed head. Then, trying to control his voice, he said: "Brethren, I move we pass the basket again."

"I second that motion," came from Mrs. Morris, in a choking voice.

"My Mother"—A Prayer

Selected by W. H. Lichty

The following prayer is credited to Tom Dillon, of Seattle, Wash. It is beautiful in sentiment, pleasing to the ear, and inspiring to the soul. It is good to read, fine to meditate upon, and worth preserving. He who loves his parents can not help but love this prayer:

I am thankful to God for the body you gave me, the bone and the sinew, the heart and the brain that are yours, my mother, I thank you. I thank you for the light in my eyes, the blood in my veins, for my speech, my life, for my being. All that I am is from you who bore me.

For all the love that you gave me, unmeasured from the beginning, my mother, I thank you. I thank you for the hand that led me, the voice that directed me, the breast that nestled me, the arm that shielded me, the lap that rested me. All that I am is by you who nursed me.

For your smile in the morning and your kiss at night, my mother, I thank you. I thank you for the tears you shed over me, the songs that you sang to me, the prayers you said for me, for your vigils and ministerings. All that I am is by you, who reared me.

For the faith you had in me, the hope you had for me, for your trust and your pride, my mother, I thank you. I thank you for your praise and chiding, for the justice you bred in me and the honor you made mine. All that I am you taught me.

For the sore travail that I caused you, for the visions and despairs, my mother, forgive me. Forgive me the peril I brought you to, the sobs and the moans I wrung from you, and for the strength I took from you, mother, forgive me. For the fears I gave you, for the alarms and the dreads, my mother, forgive me. Forgive me the joys of which I deprived you, the toils I made for you, for the hours, the days and the years I claimed from you, mother, forgive me. For the times I hurt you, the times I had no smile for you, the caresses I did not give you, my mother, forgive me.

Forgive me for my angers and revolts, for my deceits and evasions, for all the pangs and sorrows I brought you, mother, forgive me! For your lessons I did not learn, for your wishes I did not heed, for the counsels I did not obey, my mother, forgive me.

Forgive my pride in my youth, and my glory in my strength that forgot the holiness of your years and the veneration of your weakness, for my neglect, for my selfishness, for all the great debts of your love that I have not paid, mother, sweet mother, forgive me, and may the peace and joy that passeth all understanding be yours, my mother, forever and ever, Amen.

Men and women, boys and girls, wherever you are, cut this out and pass it on to your mother. It will help her. It is worth the while. Try it!

CORRESPONDENCE

"Write what thou seest, and send it unto the churches"

WANN, OKLAHOMA

Since our last writing we have received some very liberal responses to our appeal for aid—$17 in money and a nice lot of clothing. But as winter approaches and other needy ones hear of what we are doing, the demand is greater than the supply. We wish that the sisters, who have helped in this work, might see and know the pleasure and comfort that they have given. We thank them for their liberal response, and hope that we may be able to do much more good.

We now have our church building on the new location, which is a very desirable one, on First and Virginia. The Mission Board gave us permission to solicit funds to repair and move the church. Thanks to the untiring efforts of our minister, Bro. James Hardy, we have it moved and repaired, and more than half paid for.

The following will show something of our growth here: At the first services, August 24, 1918, there were four present besides Bro. Hardy. Eleven members have moved away. Since July 6, 1919, we have an average attendance of forty-two at Sunday-school, with collections avcraging $1.85, including birthday offerings. We attribute the increase largely to the aid that we have been able to give to the poor children, and anticipate a greater interest now in our new location. The above increase has been in the face of many discouragements.

We are at present a part of the Big Creek congregation, but as soon as our elder, Bro. Gripe, can be with us, we expect to become organized. H. M. Williams.

FREDERICK, MARYLAND

Our church met in regular council Nov. 1. We unanimously elected our pastor, Bro. J. Kurtz Miller, for another year. Our church had greatly run down while without a pastor, but under the efficient leadership of Bro. Miller we have raised about $1,400 this past year and all of our church activities have taken on new life.

Sunday-school officers were elected, with Bro. John Wolf as superintendent. The adjoining elders were called in to aid us in the election of a new board of trustees. We chose Brethren Geo. Gittings, John Wolf, Robert Jacobs, Elmer Brengle, Daniel Brunner, D. R. Grove and J. C. Garst.

Bro. A. L. B. Martin assisted our pastor in a three weeks' series of meetings, which resulted in sixteen being buried with Christ in baptism. Through the personal work of our pastor, six of these converts had decided for Christ prior to the revival. We closed with a large love feast, which was the best we have as yet attended here. Our house was packed to its utmost capacity. This would seem to indicate that we need a larger church in Frederick. Our efficient elder, Bro. A. P. Snader, is faithfully standing by our pastor, and through their untiring efforts we may hope for a prosperous year in the more abundant life. The writer was elected church correspondent.

PORTLAND, OREGON

Considerable having been said in the "Gospel Messenger," with regard to all the churches reporting efforts that are being made in promulgating the "Forward Movement," and having not had, as yet, a report from the Portland church, I will, as one of the committee, give a brief outline of what has been done, up to the present time.

Our last quarterly council appointed a committee of five—two brethren and three sisters—to visit all the members (especially those who have become cold and indifferent) with the object of inspiring them to renewed energy, and also to take a survey or inventory of the material that we have, with which to begin the "Forward Movement." Even though our membership is not large in this city, yet it is quite a task for those working daily, to get around to accomplish this work.

The committee met and organized. A letter of approximately 1,000 words was sent out, in order to reach those who had not been regular attendants at services, that they might be present at a get-together or homecoming meeting, that was held Nov. 2. This was an all-day meeting at the church, with a basket dinner in our large basement. It was greatly enjoyed by all who were interested enough in the Lord's work to attend.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL NORMAL

The Sunday-school Normal of Northwestern Ohio will be held in the Silver Creek church near Pioneer, Ohio, beginning on Friday evening, Dec. 19, at 7 o'clock, and continuing until Monday evening, Dec. 22. Brethren E. B. Hoff and Ezra Flory, of Bethany Bible School, will be the instructors.

Some of the subjects to be used by Bro. Hoff are as follows: "Faith, Hope and Love," "The Inspiration of the Bible," "Christian Stewardship," "The Challenge of the Hour," etc. Bro. Flory will speak on "Sources of Sunday-school Power," "The Training of the Emotions," "Religious Education in the Home," "The Sunday-school and the World's Reconstruction," and other subjects of vital interest.

Since the 1918 meeting had to be recalled, there should be more than ordinary interest taken in the program this year. Programs will be mailed to each Sunday-school.

Committee: N. I. Cool, C. W. Stutzman, Leo Lillian Wise.

A TWO-WEEKS' REVIVAL

The revival in the Mill Creek congregation, Virginia, conducted by Bro. Otho Winger and wife, closed Nov. 23, with sixteen additions by baptism and two—a husband and his wife—who were received from the Progressive Brethren without rebaptism. It is not a large addition in a membership of about six hundred, and yet it is a large addition when the fact is considered that practically all the Brethren's children, of an age capable of faith, are in the church already, and the same is true of the other churches in the community. Taking it all and in all, it is a fine addition; in fact, it is a great victory.

From the beginning the interest was good. The weather, for the most part, was very fine, and throngs of people of every class and denomination in the community attended time after time, and the attention paid the preaching, and the respect given the occasion, were never better in the history of the congregation. It was, indeed, the gate of heaven to many waiting souls.

The preaching during the first week was largely doctrinal. The fundamental doctrines of salvation were discussed strictly from the Bible point of view, and at the same time the distinctive position of the Church of the Brethren was made plain and strong, yet without the least showing of partisan spirit. During the second week the sermons were given an evangelistic turn, though none were of the soft, emotional kind. The preaching was sound and sensible all the way through, intensely practical, addressed to the understanding. The appeal was made from the standpoint of intelligent conviction.

One of the outstanding features of the preaching was its simplicity. Brother Winger is a marvel of simplicity. His crowning ability is to deal with great truths in a simple, clear manner. Almost any child can follow him and understand him. His simplicity, coupled with complete naturalness, ease and earnestness, makes him most acceptable to the masses.

Dr. John A. Broadus, probably the greatest man the Baptists of the South ever produced, once preached to a mixed audience at a camp-meeting in the pine woods of Georgia. After the sermon an old colored woman said she could understand every word that was said. Dr. Broadus said he regarded this as the greatest compliment ever paid him. After all, nothing counts like simplicity and naturalness in preaching, from the human side.

It was generally felt that the meeting should have continued longer, for it closed in the midst of great interest. It is probable that still others would have been added; yet not a great number could have been expected, it seemed, for the field has been gone over again and again. So, one of the most effective meetings in the history of the congregation was declared closed, good wishes and good-byes were said, and all withdrew with memories that shall remain.

This is to be the last meeting of the kind in the old church. A large new church is to be built next summer, with modern equipment and planned to meet the needs of the congregation for some years to come.

NOTES FROM INDIA

Vyara.—In the July Sunday-school Examination, seventy-five wrote, of whom seventy-two passed. These won, through good marks, twenty-two New Testaments and four Bibles. In the oral department, 278 sat and 223 passed. These latter are village people, for the most part.

The evangelistic work at Vyara is dragging, for lack of competent workers. Many are in training for better service, for which we are glad. But seeing village Christians remain untaught and grow cold is very trying.

The other day we had a small fair in Vyara. It was the work of the Deputy Educational Inspector. Our boarding boys and girls, though from the backward classes, performed their part quite as well as the children from the high castes, taught in the Government schools in town. It seems to us as if our teachers in the boarding-schools are doing as good work as we can expect. If trained, we might expect better work, of course.

This week there is a great stir in town. A wandering Sanyasi came to town. He was very ill indeed, for the top of his head seems eaten off. On the top of the skull and inside were hundreds of little worms. He was so holy, it was said, that when he stooped over, the worms fell out of his head and then he would stoop over, pick up the worms and put them back in the cavity of his head. The Deputy Educational Inspector denies this, saying: "I saw worms fall out into the fire, as he stooped over to warm. He could not put them back." Against his will, the town doctor removed the worms and tied up his head, doing for him what he could. But the report got out that he was what the natives call an Ashwatthama (one who fought on horseback in the time of the Mahabharata story, the top of whose head was cut off in battle, and yet he lived, for his foe said: "Go, you are immortal"). The Mahabharata is supposed to have been written about 5,000 years ago and here this man, a little fellow, about thirty years of age, his hair still black, is supposed to be one of those immortal Ashwatthama, living these 5,000 years already. The town people in bands, one after another, of all castes, came out to see him. They came in droves from Bulsar, Surat, etc., to see him. The women who had no interest in the educational fair, also came out, and they would bow before this pigmy of a man and call him "God." They would worship him and give him plenty of money and other offerings. The first day the man was so ill that he only mumbled when talked to. No one understood him, but the more he failed to be understood, the more mystery hung about him. The next day, after his fever had gone down, he was found to have come from North India and spoke Hindustani, but he is a man of no intelligence. The doctor waits upon him daily, charging six annas (twelve cents) a trip. Since his head has been cleansed, it is recovering.

These same caste people are not all ready to hear the story of Christ from a missionary. They much prefer the mystery that clouds the life of an ignorant and filthy (of body, if not of mind) Sanyasi (wandering mendicant). This makes a sad story but it is true to life. Christianity is not popular among the caste people of India, as yet. They fancy that to become Christian is unpatriotic. But the common people hear the Gospel message gladly, even as in the time when Christ was on the earth. For this we rejoice and take courage.

I will yet add that this is a time of much fever amongst us. Our men complain much. I. S. Long.

Anklesvar.—Two or three months ago a request came for a teacher from a village where a number wished to become Christians. A teacher of a near village went to them regularly for several weeks. A few weeks ago Bro. Stover went to this village and twenty were baptized. May they grow in the grace and knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ!

Two weeks ago Bro. Stover and family spent a few days at Vali. Last Sunday, Oct. 19, they were at Jalalpor. Their visits are always a help and inspiration to the work. During the past month, while the Arnold family has been at Bulsar, Sister Himmelsbaugh has been alone at Vali. Things have been very trying for the sisters at Jalalpor, owing to the opposition of the town people to a class of Christian boys entering the Jalalpor public schools. Their protests have been fruitless, for the Government refused to yield to the caste prejudices of the people. In those trying times the visits of Brethren Long and Eby, and later of Brother and Sister Stover, were especially helpful to both the Indian Christians and the missionaries of Jalalpor. Pray that the cause of Christ may triumph at this place, where the conflict is sharp between Hinduism and Christianity!

Bulsar.—In the absence of Bro. Ross and family, who are at Naini Tal for a two months' vacation, Bro. E. H. Eby has been carrying added burdens. To assist him, the writer came from Anklesvar and will remain until after the Committee Meeting of next month. The sisters at Landour and Bro. Ross and family will return to their work the last of October. The Bible School has been in progress for over four months. Bro. Eby teaches two classes daily, and Bro. Govindji Khengar teaches two periods. Twelve men and five women are taking the regular class work. It will be of interest to note that the families who are here for Bible School work, are blessed with thirty-six children. It promises well for a larger school in the future! Some are receiving great blessings through the class work; others fail to respond to the truths as they are pressed upon their hearts. Such, especially, need your prayers, dear reader, that their response to the truth might be genuine and whole-hearted!

One of the men here recently had business at Taropa, a village near the Amlitha church of the Raj Pipla State. He asked one of the Bible students to go with him to help him. This man also paid his expenses. In the evening the Bible student was impressed to give a message on "Pray without ceasing," to the people at Taropa. The Spirit was upon him, for he talked for an hour on that verse with great ease and earnestness. The next day he gave a different message, from the same text, to the people at Amlitha. The words came as fast as he could speak them for an hour. The man failed to get his business done but he was so pleased with the way the Lord used his brother, that he did not regret the expense that the trip was to him, and both men came home rejoicing!

In the absence of Sister Ross, Sister Anetta Mow had been housekeeper of the Ross bungalow, for a household of from four to eight, and has had charge of the Widows' Home, along with her language study. Mr. and Mrs. Morris, new workers of the American Wesleyan Mission, whose field is between here and Dahanu, have been here for several months in language study. They, with their two boys, returned to their station at Pardi Oct. 21. The past two Sundays he preached for us at the English services.

Two weeks ago morning prayer services between 7:30 and 8 began to be held at the church. They are well attended and, we believe, will do much to enrich the spiritual life of the membership, and to prepare them for the Tamil David meetings, to begin here Nov. 22, and to continue six days. Arrangements are being made for all our workers of Gujerat to be present for these meetings. Previous to the meetings here, he will hold a four days' meeting for our Marathi workers at Dahanu. Tamil David has had wide experience in addressing large meetings in different parts of India, and we are praying much that his messages may be inspired of the Spirit, and may help our workers to win many to Christ during the coming evangelistic season. The prayers of God's people are coveted, in a special way, for our missionaries and Indian workers in the great soul-saving campaign just ahead of us!

Bulsar, Oct. 23. A. T. Hoffert.

it be called a new earth, because the old things have passed away.

"There shall be no more sea." The sea has been a great terror to the people of every age because of the difficult barrier it interposed between lands, and because of the danger of crossing that barrier. Soon ocean travel will be as safe as travel on the land, and, perhaps, ere long air crafts will safely sweep over the broad sea, entirely ignoring its waves. Then it may well be said: "There is no more sea."

The coming of Christ to earth to reign as King of kings and Lord of lords will bring about wonderful changes, some of which we can learn from the prophecies which foretell that event. When first every eye is attracted by the brightness of his coming, "all the tribes of the earth shall mourn." This is because in every tribe a large proportion of the people are not prepared for that coming. When he descends with the shout of the archangel and the trump of God, the dead in Christ shall rise, and the saints who are still living in the flesh shall be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, and shall meet the Lord in the air. Instantaneous as is the change of the living saints, those who have long been asleep are resurrected just as quick and reach the Lord in the air just as soon. This first resurrection is as instantaneous as the twinkling of an eye. Then the Lord, without further delaying his coming, brings with him these resurrected saints to earth, and so shall they ever be with the Lord.

Then shall come to pass the saying of the Savior: "But those mine enemies, who would not that I should reign over them, bring hither, and slay them before me" (Luke 19:27). Those who, when they see him come, are willing to accept him as their Lord and have him reign over them, are to be spared in this natural life, and be permitted to enjoy the blessings of the new earth, and have Christ as their Personal King. Those, who accept him at this late hour, may be the nations who still need to be healed by the leaves which grow on the trees by the river of the water of life.

Satan shall be bound with a great chain and sealed in the bottomless pit, where he can deceive the nations no more for a thousand years. Thus temptation is to be removed from the people of this new earth, and with it most of the sin and suffering and death. The child, we are told, shall die a hundred years old. Everywhere, in the realm of this "Prince of Peace," mercy and peace shall prevail, and the lion shall lie down with the lamb.

The prophet Zechariah tells of Christ's coming, and of its immediate effect on that one part of the earth. "And his feet shall stand in that day upon the mount of Olives, which is before Jerusalem on the east [the place from which he ascended to heaven], and the mount of Olives shall cleave in the midst thereof toward the east and toward the west, and there shall be a very great valley; and half of the mountain shall remove toward the north, and half of it toward the south" (Zech. 14: 5).

An earthly monarch is always expected to have a house to dwell in—a house somewhat befitting his power and glory. The Lord Jesus, who is now seated on the right hand of the Majesty on high, would not be expected, when he comes in power and glory, to reign over the whole earth, to dwell in a perishable house made by human hands. When he left his disciples he said: "I go to prepare a place for you. I will come again and take you unto myself, that where I am there ye may be also." This gave them to understand that they should dwell with him in those mansions he was preparing for them. The New Jerusalem is that mansion he has prepared for them, and nothing could be more suitable and fitting than that this New Jerusalem should now come out of heaven, and settle down on that "very great valley" which was prepared by his feet touching the Mount of Olives. This glorious city, the New Jerusalem, will then be the capital of the whole earth, the mansion in which Christ and his saints are to dwell during his reign on earth. The saints are to be "priests of God and of Christ, and shall reign with him a thousand years."

It would then appear that the time of the coming of the New Jerusalem to earth is immediately after the coming of Christ in power and glory, and that the mission of this heaven-built city is to be the capital or house-royal of all the earth during the millennial age—that blessed and happy time which elapses between the resurrection of the saints, the first resurrection, and the second resurrection—when all mankind shall be brought forth to stand before the judgment bar of God, when the books shall be opened and when each one shall be judged justly, according to the things written in the books, as his works have been.

Notes From Our Correspondents

As cold water to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country

COLORADO

First Grand Valley.—Bro. John Mitchel, of Yoder, gave us a fine sermon Oct. 26. Bro. David Bowman, of Empire, Colil., stopped on his way home from Kansas and gave us two spiritual sermons. Our elder, Bro. J. E. Bryan, has been confined to the house with a broken limb for the past six weeks, and we miss him in the services. Sister Katie Smith's class, composed of twelve girls from eleven to fourteen years of age, conducted the Sunday-school a week ago, and it was very encouraging to see them take such an active part.—Mrs. Minerva Hixson, Grand Junction, Colo., Nov. 19.

IDAHO

Neaperce church met in council Sept. 30, with Bro. B. J. Fike presiding. Our love feast will be held Nov. 29. Our series of meetings, conducted by Bro. Long, of Weiser, closed Nov. 2. Much good was done and three were baptized. Since our last report eight letters have been granted and one applicant has been baptized.—Mattie E. Thomas, Nezperce, Idaho, Nov. 19.

ILLINOIS

Chicago.—At the regular council of the Chicago congregation, held Nov. 11, Bro. John W. Lear was chosen presiding elder for the ensuing year. A large volume of business came before the meeting. On Sunday afternoon, Nov. 23, Brethren J. H. B. Williams and J. E. Miller were with us and a Sunday-school Committee, to consult the church regarding several ordinations which had been recommended. As a result Brethren Otto E. Mossamer, H. A. Clayhaugh, Roy Dilling, J. Edwin Keller, Elgin S. Keller, Homer G. Shull and J. Elmer Wagoner were unanimously approved for the eldership. Bro. Keller was not present and will be inducted into office later. The other six brethren, with their companions, were impressively ordained. The Spirit of the Lord was present, and all came away with a new sense of responsibility for the church and her Forward Movement.—J. Hugh Heckman, 836 S. Humphrey Avenue, Oak Park, Ill., Nov. 23.

Virden.—On Sunday morning, Nov. 16, Bro. Albert Smith, of Bethany Bible School, gave us a very spiritual address. In the evening Bro. H. A. Clayhaugh took us on a tour through Chicago with his stereopticon views. The lecture, along with the pictures, was not only entertaining but highly spiritual. An offering of $110.49 was lifted to help the Douglas Park and Hastings Street Missions at the Thanksgiving season. We have decided to hold a love feast Dec. 6, at 6:30 P. M.—Stella Brubaker, Virdco, Ill., Nov. 22.

INDIANA

Flora.—At our council meeting, Nov. 14, we elected Sunday-school officers, Bro. Irvin Blum, superintendent. Our series of meetings commences Nov. 23, with Bro. I. R. Berry in charge. Sister Alma Stump, a student of Bethany Bible School, will conduct the song service. We will hold our love feast at the close of the meetings.—Mattie Welty, Flora, Ind., Nov. 24.

Ft. Wayne.—Since our last report three have been received by letter and still others are coming. We are enjoying the help of two earnest workers—Sisters Eldridge and Sherman. They are taking a three-year course in nurse training. Others are contemplating moving here, which is very encouraging to the work. A number of repairs have been made on the church property by the assistance of the Mission Board of Northern Indiana. The interior of the house has been put in first-class condition, a new furnace has been installed and we now have a very commodious house of worship. Further improvements will be made later. We earnestly invite any members passing through the city, to stop over to worship with us, especially ministers. The church is located on the corner of Green and Smith Streets, one block north on Smith Street from East Creighton Avenue car line.—J. Almer, Ft. Wayne, Ind., Nov. 24.

Goshen City.—Nov. 23 Prof. F. W. Schwaim, of Manchester College, talked to the Men's Bible Class during the Sunday-school period. They are having a contest for new members and reported an attendance on that day of 136. The total school attendance was 327. Bro. Schwaim preached an inspiring sermon at the morning worship on the subject, "Jesus Christ the Hope of the World." In the evening he gave a lecture on "The Challenge of Africa," which opened our eyes to the need for missionaries in that field. This lecture followed a Thanksgiving program by the Christian Workers' Society, at which an offering of over $27 was lifted in response to the call of the General Mission Board.—Beulah Manahan, Goshen, Ind., Nov. 24.

New Bethel church enjoyed a two weeks' series of meetings, conducted by Bro. E. O. Norris, of Pendleton, Ind. Sister Bertha Dilling led the singing. The interest and attendance were not as good as we would like to have had. Several members from adjoining congregations were with us at different services. The members were strengthened, and one was baptized; one awaits the rite.—Mrs. Omer White, Connersville, Ind., Nov. 25.

Nubleaville church met in council Saturday evening, with Eld. M. Smeltzer in charge. The majority of officers for Sunday-school and church were reelected. Our present elder was retained for the coming year and Bro. John Smeltzer was chosen superintendent for the Sunday-school. We decided to hold a series of meetings some time within the next year.—Dewey Bailiff, Indianapolis, Ind., Nov. 22.

Pipe Creek.—We had with us Saturday and Sunday, Bro. Meg Gwong, of Manchester College. Sunday morning he talked to the children, which was greatly enjoyed by all. Afterward he preached a sermon on "The Abundant Life." In the evening he talked to a large crowd on the subject of "China," his native land.—Ruth Dailey, Peru, Ind., Nov. 26.

Rock Run congregation had Donation Day Nov. 16, for the benefit of the Aid Society. Sister Mary Overbright, of the Solomon's Creek congregation, gave a talk on "The Forward Movement of the Aid Society." Sister Myrtis Weaver gave a reading. An offering of $17.50 was received; also fruit, vegetables and groceries. Nov. 23 the Aid Society had a box supper in the Good Intent Church, Grand Rapids, Ala. A box was sent to Chicago for Thanksgiving for the poor. We have about 100 members at Rock Run, with a wide-awake Sunday-school and Christian Workers' Society. Our church is located in a good religious community, as we have two other churches of other denominations two and three miles from our own. Our greatest need is ministerial help. Our elder, Bro. I. L. Berkey, is now in his eighty-first year and needs help, as he was getting Mission Board for him. There are several farms for sale within two miles from our church, also three small homes; there are a few farms for rent. Any members who are thinking of changing locations are invited to come to Rock Run.—Mrs. Clarence R. Cripe, Goshen, Ind., Nov. 23.

Santa Fe church held an interesting and very helpful series of meetings, beginning Oct. 12, with Bro. Ira Long, of Andrews, Ind., in charge. The weather was very rainy, part of the time, but the attendance was good. Effective work was done and three were received into the church by baptism. Both the minister and Bro. Floyd Sonafrank, who had charge of the song service, with the faithful ones in the congregation are to be congratulated upon this success. The meetings closed Nov. 2 with splendid interest.—Dossie M. Webb, Bunker Hill, Ind., Nov. 22.

Walnut congregation held Rally Day exercises Nov. 16, which began on Saturday evening, with a missionary program on "The Power of Ideals," by Bro. Ezra Flory. On Sunday morning we had Sunday-school, with 204 present. Another address was given by Bro. Flory on "The Sources of Power of the Sunday-school." At 2:30 the children gave us a splendid program. Bro. Flory talked to the children and Christian Workers' hour and later preached on "The Power of a Christian Home." We had a large attendance at each of these meetings and all feel greatly blessed.—Helen Mowizer, Tippecanoe, Ind., Nov. 22.

IOWA

Greene.—Oct. 26 we were favored with two good talks, given by Bro. Arthur Miller, an outgoing missionary to the India field. In the morning his theme was "Challenge to Young Men," and in the evening he told us of the India field, as he sees the great need. An offering of $9 was lifted. Nov. 2, in the absence of our pastor, Bro. W. H. Pyle gave an illustrated temperance talk to the children, which they seemed to appreciate very much. Sister Ella Eikenberry and Bro. Luther Hodgden represented our Christian Workers' Society at the Young People's Conference of Northern Iowa, South Dakota and South Dakota, at Ivester, Iowa, Nov. 1 and 2. The churches of the town are going to have union services at the Methodist church on Thanksgiving morning, when Bro. Pyle will preach and deliver the sermon. The church, through the Aid Society, is sending a box of catables for the Thanksgiving dinner at the Ogden Mission in Chicago.—Elsie A. Pyle, Greene, Iowa, Nov. 24.

South Keokuk.—Nov. 9 Bro. Miller was to us Nov. 17 and gave six of his illustrated lectures on the Bible Lands. They were intensely interesting and a rare treat. On Sunday morning he gave his thrilling experiences with the Arabs. Our love feast, which was postponed, was held Saturday evening, with Visiting ministers, Eld. M. J. Miller, who officiated, and Bro. John Price, of the Libertyville congregation. Our Christian Workers' Society has taken a share in the Mission Band, Bro. Miller's former Station, India.—Mrs. Glennie Williams, Richland, Iowa, Nov. 25.

KANSAS

Hutchinson (First Church).—Our Thanksgiving program was given Nov. 23 by the young people to a well-filled house. Sisters Mary Hollinger and Sina Keckler had charge. The program was well given and appreciated very much by those present. Bro. O. H. Peifer, one pastor, is at Stretling, Colo., attending a revival meeting. In his absence we have had with us Bro. Andrew Miller, of Colorado, Eld. A. F. Miller, of our home congregation, Bro. Luckett, of McPherson, and Bro. Wolfenbarger, a Baptist minister. We appreciated the spiritual services of these brethren very much. The fifth number of our lecture course occurred Nov. 14, when Dr. D. W. Kurtz, of McPherson College, gave us a splendid lecture. Under the efficient leadership of our pastor, with the cooperation of the congregation, the song service is very nicely at this place.—Alice Kint, Hutchinson, Kans., Nov. 25.

Kansas City (Armourdale Mission).—On the evening of Nov. 10, at our regular Sunday evening service, a lady came forward for baptism. She has been attending our services for some time, as have other members of her family. The latter we expect to come soon. Our revival meetings began on the evening of Nov. 17, and have been growing in interest. Several more have expressed a desire to make application for membership. Our love feast will be held on the evening of Nov. 29. A union service will be held at our mission on Thanksgiving Day, at 10:30 A. M.—the Central Avenue and the First Church on the Missouri side, participating.—Chas. A. Miller, Kansas City, Kans., Nov. 23.

Newton City church had a very pleasant and spiritual love feast Nov. 2. Eld. J. J. Yoder, of McPherson, preached the preparatory sermon and officiated at the communion service in the evening, assisted by Bro. Wilmer Keedy, of Darlow, Kans. About sixty members were present, including several visiting members from near by congregations. Our mid-week meeting is growing in interest and attendance. A few weeks ago, at one of these services, two were received into the church by baptism. An Aid Society has been organized since our last report, with Sister Mary Mishler, president, and is to be commended for the splendid work it is doing.—Mrs. Lizzie A. Lehman, Newton, Kans., Nov. 14.

Wade Branch church met in council Nov. 8, with Eld. G. M. Throne in charge. Church and Sunday-school officers were elected for the ensuing year, as follows: Bro. Ed. Wallace, elder; Sister R. W. Myers, clerk; Bro. Frank Sanger and Bro. F. S. Royer, trustees; Sister R. W. Myers, correspondent and "Messenger" agent; Bro. F. P. Sanger, Sunday-school superintendent.—Mrs. R. W. Myers, Paola, Kans., Nov. 24.

MICHIGAN

Elmdale.—Nov. 2 we had our Sunday-school Rally Day and in the evening we began our series of meetings, conducted by Eld. S. J. Burger, of Howe, Ind., closing Nov. 16. He gave us nineteen interesting and helpful sermons. We also enjoyed the presence and help of Sister Burger. Five were baptized. Our love feast was held Nov. 17, with Eld. Burger officiating, assisted by Eld. I. F. Rairigh, of Woodland, Mich.—Emma Weaver, Alto, Mich., Nov. 24.

Notice.—To the Aid Societies of Michigan and others who desire to help in the good work: Winter is coming on and there are a number of families that will need help in various ways. Perhaps you have clothing which the children have outgrown, or shoes which are still good. Then we have a poor fund which we draw from in case of emergency. Perhaps some would like to help to swell that fund. Please send all clothing and funds to the writer.—C. L. Wilkins, 1914 Gardner Avenue, Grand Rapids, Mich., Nov. 24.

MINNESOTA

Monticello.—Nov. 16 Bro. Hugh Heckman closed a two weeks' series of meetings and Bible Study. Two accepted Christ. Our communion was held Nov. 15, with forty present. Bro. Heckman officiated, assisted by Bro. Leatherman, of the Minneapolis Mission. We appreciated having with us visiting members from other congregations. We were filled with sorrow when one of our coworkers, Sister Ira Shank, was called to the great beyond Oct. 28. She was the first of our number to go since this congregation was organized. We greatly appreciated the visit and lecture given Oct. 14 by Sister Anna Blough, returned missionary from China.—Mrs. W. S. Sink, Monticello, Minn., Nov. 19.

MISSOURI

Kansas City (First Church).—We met in council Nov. 15, with Bro. Jesse D. Mohler presiding. Two letters were granted. The following officers were elected for the coming year: Sunday-school superintendent, Sister Prudence Miller; Christian Workers' president, Sister Adelle Long; church clerk, Bro. M. F. Hale. Bro. Mohler also gave us a most helpful and interesting address on Sunday morning. Our Sunday-school is growing nicely, and the interest in all our services has been very good. Sunday evening, Nov. 23, we enjoyed a real spiritual love feast, with Bro. Oren McCune, of Kansas City, Kans., officiating. Our Sunday-school is planning a Christmas program, to be given on the evening of Dec. 24. We are exceedingly anxious to become acquainted with members and brethren in Kansas City, for we can assure them a warm welcome into our church family, and also find their place among the activities of the church.—J. A. Wyatt, Kansas City, Mo., Nov. 25.

NORTH DAKOTA

Minot church met in council Nov. 13, having all the members of the District Mission Board present. Bro. Leander Smith presided and we had a fine "Get-together Meeting," it being the first council since Brother and Sister Smith have taken charge of the work. Three members were received by letter. Bro. Geo. Snyder remained with us over Sunday, giving a touching discourse in the morning. In the evening we had a striking message by Bro. Smith.—Beulah Steele, Minot, N. Dak., Nov. 19.

OHIO

Circleville.—Nov. 9 our series of meetings began, with Bro. B. F. Petry, of Eaton, Ohio, in charge. Sister Emma Rankopple conducted the song service and proved to be an efficient leader. The attendance was not as large as usual, on account of health conditions, but the meetings were very spiritual and much good was done.—Oliver Royer, Circleville, Ohio, Nov. 24.

Covington church enjoyed a banner day in her Sunday-school Nov. 9, with 242 present. Bro. M. G. Brumbaugh, Ex-Governor of Pennsylvania, gave a message that will be long remembered by the audience of about 1,200 people. The young ladies' class received pledged themselves to furnish a room in the new hospital in China. During the Sunday-school hour, several weeks ago, the class with their teacher, Sister G. W. Flory, set aside a missionary box with a service of prayer. This box is to receive the freewill offerings until a sufficient amount is raised to furnish the room.—Mrs. Forrest M. Honeyman, Covington, Ohio, Nov. 21.

Mac Hill church met in council, with Bro. Van B. Wright in charge. Matters pertaining to the repair of our churchhouse were attended to. Bro. Geo. S. Gorman was appointed to complete the term of one of the trustees. We are glad for the interest which our neighbors and friends are taking in the work here.—Mrs. M. F. Gorman, May Hill, Ohio, Nov. 24.

Marble Furnace church met in council, with a large number present. Bro. Van B. Wright officiated. Immediately after services one was reclaimed and three received by letter Nov. 16. Bro. J. M. Didier, of Brookville, came to us to give his lecture-sermon on "The Second Coming of Christ." At this service four indicated their willingness to walk in newness of life. We have improved our churchhouse by new concrete steps and platforms. We have a live people. Our pastor and wife will leave for Springfield Dec. 2, for a series of meetings. On Thanksgiving night we will have a sermon by Bro. Wright. Our preaching services are held every second and third Sunday.—L. C. Ramsey, Peebles, Ohio, Nov. 20.

Oakland church has just closed a very interesting three weeks' revival meeting, conducted by Bro. M. J. Brougher, of Greensburg, Pa. He visited the members in their homes and preached twenty-four powerful sermons to well-filled houses. Several nights of our meetings were delegations from other congregations on special nights. Our people have certainly been encouraged and built up in the Lord's cause. Bro. Brougher also assisted in our communion at the close of the meeting. Forty were baptized and two reclaimed.—Mrs. B. T. Waggoner, Bradford, Ohio, Nov. 24.

Strait Creek church met in council Nov. 22, with Bro. Van B. Wright presiding. Two letters were granted and some other business came before the council. Our love feast, formerly announced for Nov. 1, being postponed, has been set for Jan. 1.—S. R. Setty, Sinking Spring, Ohio, Nov. 23.

West Milton.—Nov. 20 our church met in special council, preparatory to our love feast, to be held Nov. 27—Thanksgiving Day. Nov. 24-27 we expect to have with us Bro. Norris, in a series of special meetings. Encouraging reports were given by the visiting brethren. Eld. Wm. Minnich was present and gave us a very helpful and excellent admonition. The letters of Bro. Granville Minnich (minister) and wife were received and a hearty welcome was extended to them by the church.—J. Elmer Showalter, West Milton, Ohio, Nov. 22.

Wooster church held her love feast and communion Oct. 11. Bro. S. S. Shoemaker, from Hartville, who held our series of meetings this summer, and Bro. D. R. McFadden, of the Chippewa congregation, preached for us. Nov. 22 we met in council, with Bro. A. I. Heestand presiding. Bro. R. M. Moomaw was elected elder for the coming year; Bro. S. R. Garver, church trustee; Bro. A. S. Halteman, clerk. A finance committee, to secure funds for remunerating our ministering brethren for their services, was appointed. Our Thanksgiving service will not be held here this year, because of the communion which will be held in the neighboring congregation at Beech Grove. Mary may be interested to know that Sister Ella Hoover, who underwent a very serious operation several weeks ago, is now at her home and is much improved in health.—Miriam Hoff Petter, Wellersville, Ohio, Nov. 23.

OREGON

Portland.—Eld. S. F. Sanger, who has been holding meetings here for two weeks, preached his last sermon Nov. 21. The meetings were well attended, and at the close our love feast was held, with Bro. Sanger officiating. He goes from here to Newberg, Oregon, to conduct meetings for the brethren there. One of our Sunday-school boys was baptized.—Grace W. Hewitt, Portland, Oregon, Nov. 22.

OKLAHOMA

Monitor.—Our love feast was held Nov. 15, with Bro. Bro. Prentice, of Aline, Okla., officiating. A goodly number were present and we feel we were spiritually blessed. Four letters of membership were received and we are glad for the presence of these new members.—Sarah Miller Logsdon, Nash, Okla., Nov. 18.

PENNSYLVANIA

Beachdale church enjoyed a love feast Nov. 16, with Bro. T. R. Coffman, of Meyersdale, officiating. About fifty members were present. Preceding our love feast, Bro. Coffman preached three nights,

Nov. 5 Bro. S. F. Sanger, of Empire, Calif., commenced a revival effort. This halted the home-visiting, but it will be resumed at the close of the meetings, which will end with a love feast Nov. 22.

Bro. Sanger is giving us soul-inspiring sermons, which are food for the spiritually-minded. Nov. 18 he gave an exceedingly fine exposition of the second coming nf our Lord.

We are looking forward to an advance in the spiritual life of the Portland church, and would like to have the coöperation of every member in the Brotherhood who can furnish us with the names and addresses of members, ex-members or the children or relatives of members, or others, living within the confines of the Portland church (or the city), that we might look them up aod make an effort to arouse them to a sense of their condition. "The night is far spent and the day is at hand."

Many such people are in our city. They enter the busy marts of trade aod are swallowed up by the world and lost to the church and Christ. We must go after them, as they do not, as a rule, look up the church. Brethren and sisters, if any of you bave loved ones in our city, whom you want identified with the church, please seod full name and address to Eld. Geo. C. Carl, 1125 Albina Avenue, Portland, Oregon, and we will do all in our power to awaken an interest within those who have neglected to connect themselves with us.

Our churchbouse is located at Borthwick and Brainard Streets. W. T. Pratt.

1184 Omaha Avenue.

LOS ANGELES MISSION, CALIFORNIA

Sunday, Nov. 16, was a day of rejoicing, when we dedicated our new church at the Boyle Heights Mission, 116 North Hollenbeck Street. The dedicatory sermon was preached by Eld. G. H. Bashor, of Glendora. The church was packed to its limits with interested hearers, who listeoed to the impressive message with the best of attention.

The new granite-faced cement block building is 38x44 feet in size, and bas six Sunday-school rooms which, by means of the twenty-seven movable accordion and lifting doors, can be thrown into the main auditorium. The building cost, approximately, $3,500, and is deeded to the trustees of the District. Over $600 of this amount was donated by the churches of the District. One church is yet to report which, we believe, will give us sufficient funds to meet all unpaid bills. An offering of $250 was taken on dedication day, to meet any deficit and to apply on oew scats. We feel most grateful to our Heavenly Father, the members of the First Church, the missioo workers, and the churcbes of the District that have made our much needed oew church possible.

Since our last report, our pastor, Eld. C. W. Guthrie, and our superintendents, Brethren L. M. Davenport and Callo F. Smith, were elected for another year.

Taught by our pastor, we bave just finished a most interestiog aod inspiring eight months' study of the Bnok nf Revelation at our midweek services.

Bro. Finnell is to be at our mission several days next week with his illustrated lectures in the interest of the Forward Movement. Jeonetta E. Bryant.

THE PETER BECKER BICENTENNIAL

The Old Mother church in Germantown held appropriate anniversary services Nov. 14-16, in commemoration of Peter Becker and the others, who came from Europe and settled in Germantown and vicinity in 1719.

We began our services on Wednesday evening, with our midweek prayer meeting. Thursday evening our love feast was held. About 200 communed. Bro. C. F. McKee, of the Greentree church, officiated.

Friday evening, Nov. 14, we started our bicentennial services with messages from four of our neighboring pastors: Baptist, Lutheran, Methodist and Presbyterian. The Lutheran pastor's church is two years older than ours and in his address we had some of the earlier experiences of our neighbor presented to us. The Methodist pastor told of having celebrated their one hundred and twenty-third anniversary several years ago, and he mentioned how proud he was of that age, but when he learned that the Church of the Brethren was two hundred years old, he said he dropped his head a bit. We had many felicitations from these men, among which, the simplicity of our worship and life was approvingly referred to.

Saturday afternoon we had greetings from the different churches of our own District. Nine different churches responded, all being either a child or grandchild of the Germantown church. In the evening Bro. T. T. Myers, of Juniata College, gave an address on "The Work of Faithful Workers," reviewing briefly the movement and causes which led up to the organization of our church in 1708, and the first coming to America in 1719.

On Sunday morning the house was filled to its capacity. Bro. M. G. Brumbaugh was unable to be present, and Bro. T. T. Myers became the substitute. He gave an account nf Peter Becker and the early history of our church, which was very interesting and helpful.

In the afternoon the house was again filled. We had a representation from each of the three denominations that stood together oo some moral questions in the early history of our country—the Friends, the Mennonites and the Brethren.

Bro. J. S. Noffsinger, nf Brooklyn, N. Y., gave a masterly address on "Real Service fnr the Master." He touched the hearts of men and women to live more loyal lives and to be of greater service to the church and to humanity.

Rev. Silas M. Grubb, a direct descendant of Peter Becker, and pastor of a Menoonite church in the city, gave the second address of the afternoon. He pointed out the likeness between us and some of the principles that made us a protesting church.

The third speaker was William I. Hull, Professor nf International Law at Swarthmore College and a member of the Peace Conference in Paris this year. He, too, gave a splendid address and read an extract from an old book of his father's, in which a comment was made on the character and industry of the Brethren in Germantown, many years ago.

At six o'clock, on Sunday evening, Bro. H. K. Ober, of Elizabethtown College, met a combined meeting of our juniors and intermediates. We had 105 children present. He gave them one of his characteristic messages. At 7:30 our church was for the third time filled, when Bro. Ober gave his masterful message on "Child Rights." At 8:30 Bro. C. C. Ellis gave his thrilling message on "The Call of the World tn the Christian Yoong Man."

We had special music at each service. The weather was ideal. Thus ended the two hundredth anniversary of the coming to America of our Brethren. The meeting was one to go down in our history, long to be remembered. The old sandstone marker of Peter Becker's grave was on exhibition in the vestibule of the church during these services and viewed with interest by all. Its simple inscription, "Anno 1758 P. B.," tells the silent story.

Germantown, Pa. M. C. Swigart.

EMPIRE CHURCH, CALIFORNIA

This church has had a season of rejoicing and spiritual upliftiog during the last two weeks, the like of which she has never had in her history. Nov. 2 Bro. R. H. Miller, of La Veroe, came to us for a series of meetings. The church, in anticipation of his coming, had been holding special prayer meetings for several weeks prior to his arrival. The young men's and the young women's classes had been making special efforts in behalf of the meetings. All during the meetings these two organizations held special workers and consecration meetings.

Bro. Miller confined his sermons to the ethics of Christian living, and in short, clear, concise sermons, the like of which the writer has never heard, drove home the Gospel teaching in a manner that not only convinced but convicted both professor and nonprofessor, with the result that the interest grew from the first night. We had record crowds in attendance almost every night. As a result we had twenty-four accessions to the church.

Our brother certainly confines himself to the Gospel in its purity and does not hesitate to declare the whole truth. Any church that may secure his services can certainly congratulate herself. The good these meetings have done the Empire church can only be measured by time.

On Saturday, Nov. 15, at two o'clock we met for baptism, which was administered by Bro. Garfield Nine, of this church. It was a most impressive service, made so all the more as one saw young and old gn down into the baptismal font.

At night we held our love feast, at which Bro. Miller officiated, assisted by Brethren P. H. Beery, A. Blickenstaff, J. W. Deardorff, and other visiting brethren. We expect to hold an institute during the holidays, to study the distinctive doctrines of the church, if we can secure a competent teacher. W. H. Johnson.

Empire, Calif.

FROM THE WEST MANCHESTER CHURCH, INDIANA

Our church has recently enjoyed a spiritual feast. Nov. 1 our church was favored with an old-fashioned all-day love feast. In the forenoon Bro. George Deaton, of Eel River, and Bro. G. E. Swihart, of the Roann church, preached sound doctrine to us. Bro. J. H. B. Williams, of Elgin, Ill., was present in the afternoon and gave us another good sermon. Elders J. H. Wright and Amos Freed were present as an ordination committee, and took the voice of the church in favor of ordaining Bro. S. L. Young to the eldership.

In the evening a large membership, both home and visiting, surrounded the tables and enjoyed a very quiet and spiritual love feast, with Bro. Williams officiating. Next morning a large crowd was present for morning worship and breakfast.

At the Sunday-school hour the juvenile classes gathered in the basement for the lesson, while Bro. Williams gave us a stirring missionary address in the audience room, after which Bro. S. L. Young and wife were received into the office of elder.

By this time Bro. R. H. Nicodemus, nf Betbany Bible School, Chicago, was present to begin a series of meetings. He preached a powerful sermon. Many were the expressions of appreciation by brethren and sisters, because of the privilege of attending such a "good, old-fashioned meeting." Bro. Williams also voiced his approval from the pulpit, stating that such meetings were doubtless conducive to the social and spiritual interest nf the church. Bro. Nicodemus cnotinued his meetings until the evening of the 16th, with an interest and attendance that expressed a hungering and thirsting for such spiritual and heart-to-heart sermons.

The meetings closed with an excellent ioterest and would have continued another week, had not Bro. Nicodemus' work at home required his presence before going to other fields of labor.

As a tangible result of the meetings the church has been greatly edified. One was received by baptism.

Bro. Nicodemus gave an address to a men's meeting last Sunday afternoon, in Laketon, on the subject: "The Need of More Man Power in the Home, in the Church and in the Community." He showed that man was created as the head or leader of the race, but that, in these days of strenuous business relations, he is neglecting his duties, and that the gentler sex must take the initiative in many of the moral and religious lines of work. His address was received with much enthusiasm.

North Manchester, Ind., Nov. 23. Calvin F. Eiler.

giving us very inspiring sermons. At the close of the love feast Bro. Waltz, our pastor, who has served us so faithfully for the last five years, handed in his resignation.—Mrs. Fred Brunt, Garrett, Pa., Nov. 23.

Conewago.—The series of revival meetings, which were in progress in the Bachmanville church for two weeks, closed on Sunday evening. The services, conducted by Bro. Jacob Miller, of Mechanicsburg, were very interesting and were a spiritual uplift to us all. Five accepted Christ, one of whom has been baptized. Our love feast will be held in the Bachmanville house next Wednesday and Thursday, Nov. 26 and 27.—Lena H. Gruber, Bachmanville, Pa., Nov. 19.

Hanover church held her love feast Oct. 19, with Bro. B. F. Lightner officiating. He also preached for us in the morning. The meeting was well attended. About thirteen ministers were present from adjoining congregations. One has been baptized since our last report. The Teacher-training Class, instructed by Bro. Jacob E. Myers, held their exercises Sunday evening, Nov. 16. Nine completed book No. 1 and are now studying the second. Our elder, Bro. Daniel Bowser, gave an address.—Mary A. Rhinehart, Hanover, Pa., Nov. 21.

Harrisburg.—Nov. 9, at 9 A. M., there were services at the prison, conducted by Bro. Beachley. The next Sunday a number of people again met at the prison for services, with Bro. Chas. D. Bonsack in charge. Nov. 19 we closed an interesting revival, with Bro. Bonsack, evangelist. Five accepted Christ. Nov. 23 Bro. Conner preached two powerful sermons. His subject in the morning was: "They Will Be Done"; in the evening, "Ye Must Be Boro Again." We will have services on Thanksgiving eve. Dec. 14 some of the Volnuteer Mission Band, of Elizabethtown College, will have charge in the evening.—Sallie E. Schaffeer, Harrisburg, Pa., Nov. 23.

Neffsville.—Nov. 15 we held our love feast at the Home, with eight communicants present. We had one applicant for baptism, who was baptized before services. Elders Amos Hottenstein, who officiated, Cyrus Gibbel, Amos Kuhns and Wm. Zohler were with us.—Mrs. A. H. Hoffer, Neffsville, Pa., Nov. 22.

Norristown.—Nov. 16 we had enrolled in Sunday-school 155, with 109 present. Bro. Hesse taught the Men's Bible Class, which is growing in numbers and interest. We have arranged with Bro. Hesse to give three illustrated lectures as follows: Dec. 7, "The Five-Year Forward Movement; Dec. 14, India; Dec. 21, China. In connection with the latter, we will render the cantata "Redeemer and King." We expect to have Bro. J. H. Cassady, of Huntingdon, Pa., hold a series of meetings for us in April.—J. Howard Ellis, Norristowu, Pa., Nov. 21.

Philadelphia (First Church).—Our fall love feast was held Nov. 6, with the following ministers present: P. J. Blough, M. C. Swigart, C. F. McKee, C. C. Ellis, Stover Kulp, W. I. Book, L. M. Keim, J. A. Bricker. Bro. Blough officiated, assisted by Bro. Swigart. Nov. 16 Bro. T. T. Myers, of Juniata College, preached to an appreciative audience. We have started a live Mission Study Class, with our pastor, Bro. Stover Kulp, in charge.—Mrs. Wm. H. B. Schoell, Philadelphia, Pa., Nov. 21.

Pittsburgh.—Our fall communion was held Nov. 9, with a record attendance. Bro. Ober was unable to comply with his tentative engagement, to be with us before and during communion and, therefore, our pastor, Bro. C. Walter Warstler, preached a very thorough examination sermon in the morning, and a love feast and communion followed in the evening. Two were taken into the church by baptism in the afternoon. The day was somewhat saddened by the burial of Brother and Sister Farraro's baby girl, Sarathena. Services were conducted by Bro. Warstler in the home during the afternoon, followed by burial in the Homestead cemetery. Bro. Galen B. Royer, well known in the Brotherhood, was with us Nov. 21, 22 and 23. He lectured on Friday and Sunday nights on Russia, and her great need of missionaries, and help in all things. To make these lectures more comprehensive, Bro. Royer allowed many photographs of Rnasia, which he had collected during his tour through that region. The lectures were wonderfully interesting, and were well attended. On Sunday morning Bro. Royer preached on "The Three Crosses," discussing Christ on the cross and the two malefactors, nailed to the cross. By coming to Pittsburgh at this time, Bro. Royer had occasion to attend the reunion of Juniata graduates, held on Saturday evening. We expect to have him with us soon again, for further lectures. The last council meeting of this year will be held Dec. 4.—Nelle Forney, 5878 Burchfield Avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa., Nov. 25.

Pottstown.—Since the last report our work here has been very encouraging. Nov. 23 our love feast was held, being the second since our church was established. Eight were recently received into the church by baptism. The membership has been nearly doubled since we have had Brother and Sister G. K. Walker with us. We are contemplating holding evangelistic meetings very soon. Nov. 30 a special musical program has been arranged by our director, Bro. J. A. Cannell. It is the intention of the members to install a baptistry and remodel the basement, providing Sunday-school rooms, as soon as financial conditions will permit. Our Sunday-school has steadily increased, not only in numbers but in spirit as well. At the present time we have an enrollment of 105, with an average attendance of nearly 70 per cent. We are glad for this increase in membership and also the increase in spirituality and interest in the work.—Evelyn R. Kulp, Pottstown, Pa., Nov. 25.

TEXAS

Pleasant Grove.—We enjoyed our regular services Nov. 16, when Bro. J. A. Miller gave us three inspiring sermons. The weather being fine, we had very good attendance and much interest was manifested. The closing sermon was an exhortatiou to the knowledge and belief of a real Savior in Christ Jesus.—Jessie Mahaffey, Hnlsmith, Texas, Nov. 20.

VIRGINIA

Cloverdale.—Oct. 26 Bro. Levi Garst, of Salem, Va., began a series of meetings at the Bethesda church, closing Nov. 10. Bro. Garst preached some excellent sermons. Eighteen came forward, five of whom were baptized. The meeting closed with a love feast, at which Bro. Garst officiated. Bro. B. B. Garber and wife were with us. Bro. Garber gave an able examination sermon, for which we were very grateful.—Mrs. E. L. Showalter, Roanoke, Va., Nov. 22.

Cook's Creek.—Eld. W. H. Zigler, of Churchville, Va., begau a series of meetings in the Pleasant Run church, Nov. 2, continuing until Nov. 16. We had good attendance during the meetings, and the interest was fine. Seventeen interesting and very helpful discourses were delivered. Nine were baptized, the members very much encouraged, and the chorch strengthened.—S. J. Bowman, Harrisonburg, Va., Nov. 21.

Mt. Zion.—Nov. 6 we closed one of the most interesting and instructive revivals ever held at this place. Bro. A. E. Miller, of Weyers Cave., Va., was the evangeliat, and all his sermons were very spiritual and uplifting. We feel that the church has been helped. The interest and attention were especially good. Bro. Miller has done a wonderful work for the community and has helped us to seek for a higher aim in life. Six were baptized and others await the rite.—Anna M. Kline, Broadway, Va., Nov. 20.

Where Christ's Glory Is Revealed

THAT was a wonderful manifestation of Christ's glory on the Mount of Transfiguration, but was it really greater than that which shone forth in his daily life? Why was Jesus unwilling to prolong it, at the request of Peter? And how could Peter, having seen and heard such things, deny his Master?

A sudden and striking demonstration may be useful in an emergency—and there was an emergency just then in the training of these men—but it can not take the place of the slower processes in spiritual education. There is no substitute for time and experience in acquiring a new and broader and better view of truth.

The knowledge of their Lord which came to Peter and the rest in their day-after-day contact with him, as he ministered and taught, and disappointed their expectations, was a much greater disclosure of the Messianic glory than that brief but more brilliant revelation on the slopes of Hermon.

When our eyes can see the path but dimly, our feet may require the reassurance of an occasional flashlight. But how much more glorious are the beauties of the landscape, as revealed by the softer, mellower, more constant light of even a cloudy day, if only we have eyes to see!

Lord, open our eyes to the everyday manifestations of thy glory!

The Commercial Instinct at Its Best

THE merchant seeking goodly pearls had sound business sense. He was in the business for profit. He was looking for goods of high quality. When he found a pearl that he knew would command a higher price than all the others he had, he wisely exchanged them for the one of such unusual worth.

The Kingdom of heaven is made up of that kind of people. That is, people who know the worth of things. People who know that it is good spiritual business to exchange inferior goods for what gives more solid satisfaction. People who understand that no cost can be too great if the margin between cost and value is satisfactory.

The Kingdom of heaven is made up of those who consider citizenship in it the pearl of greatest worth because they understand and appreciate the high quality of the life which its citizens enjoy.

"Awake, Awake, Put On Thy Strength, O Zion"

WAS any preacher, ancient or modern, ever up against a harder situation than that which lay back of these ringing words? Zion was in a strange land, an exile and—could you believe it?—on the point of becoming contented with her lot. She was entering the last stages of "sleeping sickness." She was freezing to death and, having passed beyond sensibility to pain and suffering, was enjoying that delightful numbness which precedes the final lapse into unconsciousness.

Some of the relief workers in war-stricken lands have had experiences which help one to understand the feelings of this prophet. When such a worker, after long and difficult and dangerous search has at last found one of those unfortunate young women who were torn from their homes and friends, and driven off like cattle and finally imprisoned in Turkish harems, imagine the disappointment, the heart-anguish of the would-be rescuer as she discovers that the object of her search refuses to be rescued! Such cases are exceptional, but they have happened. And something akin to this has even happened in American cities. But with what unspeakable sorrow of heart to fathers and mothers is known only to those who have felt it.

The experience of our prophet was like that. His own soul aflame with love for his people and his homeland and fired by an unconquerable faith in Jehovah's love for them and in his ability to redeem them, he was pleading with his cold-hearted countrymen to rouse themselves from their stupor. But they were hard to move. They were comfortable. Why should they listen to the ravings of this fanatic?

To appreciate the situation we must refresh our memories a little, as to the meaning of the exile. This was not slavery in the ordinary sense. It was enforced transmigration. The little kingdoms of Israel and Judah were not the only ones which experienced it. It was the usual policy of the oriental empires in dealing with conquered peoples. Its purpose was to destroy their national spirit and make it easier to hold them in subjection. Large portions of the population were deported from their native lands and compelled to live in other parts of the empire. There were individual cases of physical hardship, but this was not true in general. For the masses of the people the material conditions were probably no worse than those in which they had lived before. In many instances they were even better. The suffering of exile was chiefly mental. It consisted in the forced abandonment of lifelong associations and cherished ideals, and in being compelled to take up life again in new and strange surroundings.

But for a nation with such hopes and ideals as Judah had, such a punishment was especially severe. Was that bright picture of the future they had been painting for so long, after all only an illusion? Their sacred city which they had held to be inviolate, had been profaned and overthrown. The temple, Jehovah's temple, had actually been leveled to the ground. No more the annual festivals and the daily sacrifices. Not only were they deprived of participation in them but—worst of all—these holy rites could not be performed at all. For the only place where this could rightfully be done had been destroyed. Can you imagine what such a calamity would mean to these Judean exiles? With what bitterness of despair they would turn from their memories of the past in a vain effort to sing the songs of Zion in a strange land?

But are you noting carefully that the depth of this bitterness would be in exact proportion to their faithfulness to the old ideals? It was the loyal ones who suffered. As for the many who had little religious interest, why, it was comparatively easy for them to forget the old associations and form new ones just as satisfactory, especially as they began to prosper in material things. Babylon was a rich and fertile country.

Consider now, how this environment would affect the hopes and feelings of those who tried to keep alive their ancient faith. Is it any wonder that, as the years wore on, the number of those increased who thought it foolish and useless to cherish the old hopes longer? Was it not the part of wisdom to accept the inevitable, to recognize the fact that there was no future for Jerusalem, to reconcile themselves to the changed conditions and make up their minds to stay where they were and be content? Was not the evidence conclusive anyway that Jehovah had abandoned them, as their brethren said? Why worry over the impossible utopian scheme of rebuilding Jerusalem and reëstablishing the religion of their fathers, especially when they could be perfectly comfortable in Babylon?

Such were the seductive influences the prophet had to fight. While others were denouncing his program as visionary and impossible and counseling contentment with their lot, he was working with all his God-given might to rekindle in the breasts of his brethren the fires of patriotism and religious faith. He was not disheartened by anything that had occurred or by anything in the existing circumstances. On the contrary, he said that even then conditions were taking shape which would soon make it possible for them to return to the Judean hills and build the nation up again. The only real obstacle that he could see was the indifference of the exiles. That was the one, therefore, which he was striving to overcome. He made no pretense that carrying out his program was an easy job. But he said it could be done. He said there was plenty of strength available if Zion would only put it on.

Was this preacher right? Does his doctrine have any fitness for our times? Is there any need of it?

AWAKE, AWAKE, PUT ON THY STRENGTH, O ZION.

The Religion of Ex-President Roosevelt

The Literary Digest of Oct. 16 refers to Ex-President Roosevelt's deep religious faith and activity in these words:

"One of the most profoundly religious men this nation or any other nation ever had" was Theodore Roosevelt. "A powerful believer" and a "prodigious religious actor" are the phrases Dr. Ferdinand C. Iglehart applies to him in his recently-published biography. Explaining religion as a science, in that it presents a "system of doctrines to be believed" and as an art in formulating a "system of duties to be performed," Dr. Iglehart declares "Mr. Roosevelt had the science of religion down to a perfection in the most simple and sincere faith in the cardinal doctrines of our religion, and he practiced it vigorously, as an art, in the multitude of secular acts."

The universality of Roosevelt's view of religious life appeared in his comment when he was told that Dr. Iglehart's son was about to start as a missionary to Japan. After a hearty "God bless him and bless you," he said: "I have told you so many times that I consider the Christian ministry as the highest calling in the world, most intimately related to the most exalted life and service here and destiny beyond, and I consider it my greatest joy and glory that, occupying a most exalted position in the nation, I am enabled, simply and sincerely, to preach the practical moralities of the Bible to my fellow-countrymen and to hold up Christ as the Hope and Savior of the world. I believe, down deep in my soul, as you know, my friend, that I have preached the same Gospel that you and your boy are called to preach.

"As high an estimate as I have of the ministry, I consider that the climax of that calling is to go out in missionary service, as your son is doing. It takes mighty good stuff to be a missionary of the right type, the best stuff there is in this world. It takes a deal of courage to break the shell and go twelve thousand miles away to risk an unfriendly climate, to master a foreign language, perhaps the most difficult one on earth to learn; to adopt strange customs, to turn aside from earthly fame and emolument and, most of all, to say good-bye to home and the faces of the loved ones virtually forever."

The foregoing sentences will show conclusively how deep were our Ex-President's religious convictions. In his usual manner, he sets them forth in strong and unmistakable words. He was a man who had the courage of his convictions of right. The last paragraph appeals to our missionaries, of whom we now have almost one hundred in the field and prepared to go. He was well acquainted with a great number of missionaries whom he met in his extended travels around and about the world. He held them in the highest possible esteem, respect and good will. We do not all see just alike in our religious convictions, but it does one good to know that such a great man, as was our Ex-President, had such strong and deep convictions, and an abiding faith in the religion of Jesus Christ.

An Inquiry and Answer

BY CLEMMA L. PEEBLER

O, wonderful monarch! O'er all the earth,
So faithful thy trust thou hast kept;
Not once, since the dawn of creation's first morn
Hast thou at thy post ever slept.

Each morn, from thy chambers, thou issuest forth
And mountest thy chariots of fire;
Then, sweeping through space in thy onrushing pace,
Thou mountest still higher and higher.

Tell me, oh, monarch, as onward you speed,
Dispelling the shadows of woe;
What is the saddest, most heart-broken thing
Thou hast seen on this earth here below?

Many things sad, and many things glad
I have seen in my race 'cross the skies,
Oh, many hearts bleeding and rent in twain,
While streaming tears fell from the eyes;

But of all things in heaven or earth beneath,
Or the waters which e'er ebb and flow,
A mother's heart, rent for her own daughter's sin
Is the saddest, most wretched I know.

The Moving Pastor

BY M. W. EMMERT

Either the lure of better conditions in the church just across the State line, or the drudgery and humdrum of church work in the present location, or both, seems to have created an unrest among the pastors of the rural churches of the Brotherhood. We frequently hear the farmer remark that his cattle like the pasture in his neighbor's field better than they do the pasture on their own side of the fence. May that remark apply to many of the pastors of rural and village churches?

It is difficult to see why a pastor should move every two or three years. May it be because he is looking for an easier job? Or is it because churches are looking for better pastors? In either case we question the advisability of the change. Should not the pastor and the church seek to adapt themselves to each other, rather than to try to remedy their difficulties by separation?

Notice, for a moment, the folly of a pastor looking for an easier place. In any profession the man who is always looking for the easy place never accomplishes much. He is the man who never surmounts great difficulties, because he is afraid to undertake them, or is too indifferent to surmount them. The great successes of life are made in the presence of great dangers and difficulties. The great victories of the battle-field are lauded because of the greatness of the opposing forces. Perhaps pastors would better look for the hard places, rather than the easy ones. If the pastor and God are working together, why should the pastor shrink from any task?

Recently I talked with a successful pastor, who accepted his present charge because it seemed that no one else wanted to undertake the work. Some very hard problems needed solution in that particular church, but this brave pastor took God into his confidence, answering his call, to go in the face of seemingly insurmountable difficulties. He sacrificed a good position, in which there was a wide field for service, for the narrower but much more difficult field of the Gospel ministry. God has marvelously blessed his work. It could not be otherwise. The promise of the Lord was his.

Real success in religious work is always based on sacrifice. The man hunting for the easy job is shrinking from the very basic element of successful service. The school-teacher who shrinks from applying for a school where the previous teacher failed, acknowledges thereby that he is not a complete success in the teaching profession.

A recent editorial, in a well-known weekly religious paper, recites the case of a railroad official who, when he began working for the railroad company, looked up to the higher offices of the company, aspiring to fill one of them some time. In one of the offices he discovered there were more perplexing problems than there were in any other. He said: "I am going to have that office." It is needless to say that he got the office and honored it.

If a pastor finds he has the hardest place among all the charges of the Brotherhood, he should congratulate himself. He has the opportunity to accomplish greater things than any other pastor of the Brotherhood. He and the Lord, working together on the biggest job in the church! O what a privilege, what an opportunity! The last line of this little poem by Helen Rowland fits well in this connection:

"There is nothing in life but the joy of the minute.
There is nothing in love that we do not put in it.
There is nothing can happen unless we begin it.
There is nothing worth winning, but what we can win it."

There is no excuse for a pastor looking across the State line and envying the man in another State District. Perhaps the pasture over there is not as inviting as it looks.

The country pastorate, in particular, demands a long period of time really to accomplish anything. The problems of any country community may not all be understood in a few years of hurried work. Then the solution of the problems, after they have been discovered, requires even more time. Several years may be necessary for a pastor to survey his field before he is really ready to set himself definitely and methodically to the task of laying deep foundations for community betterment. Every community has a distinct character, just as each person has a distinct personality. This community character must be studied and dealt with as a parent deals with a child. No two children are alike. The parent is wise, if he recognizes this and adapts his training and discipline to the peculiar disposition of the child. In the same way the disposition of a community must be handled by the pastor, if he would be successful in community improvement. Every program for community betterment must spring from local conditions and be fitted up to meet them. This requires years of time and study. The moving pastor lacks vision. He misses, pretty largely, the real purpose of his calling.

I think I hear some one say: "You are considering the pastor's chief business to be social reformation. Is that not a mistake? Is it not his business, first and last, to work for the regeneration of the individual?" I have not forgotten the pastor's duty of leading souls into the Kingdom. But usually community betterment goes hand in hand with regeneration. A regenerated person must have good social conditions, in which to develop his regenerated life. So, while the pastor is seeking the conversion of men, he is, at the same time, seeking to provide the best possible environments in which men may live and labor.

The moving pastor makes the mistake of planning, in mushroom style, great reforms in a new field. He rushes in with new ideas and new methods which, in themselves, may be very good, but which are not adapted to that particular church at that particular time. His efforts are, accordingly, not appreciated, and for the most part prove futile. After a year of strenuous but fruitless toil, to put into operation his pet ideas, he sinks back in despair. Then comes a year of miserable drudgery, at the end of which the pastor leaps the fence in quest for new pasture. What folly!

The Aged Minister and His Work

BY J. H. MOORE

Not long since we spent an hour with an aged minister. He had preached for more than forty years, and had been instrumental in building up three congregations, to say nothing of the help he had rendered a full half dozen of others. During all these years he had lived on his farms, was a hard-working man, yet he never permitted his secular duties to interfere with his church work. He made the Master's interest the first consideration, and his own second. Yet he prospered financially as well as spiritually. When money for any purpose was needed, he willingly contributed his full part, and now and then even more. No one gave more towards the erection of a needed church building than he. In fact, when it came to giving he was right up to the front, or a bit ahead with his offering.

The churches he served often sent him as their delegate to District and Annual Meetings. He was never too busy to go, and always remained until the business was completed. Not only so, but he paid his own expenses. He was never asked for his bill, and never presented one. He put in forty years of hard work for the church without a salary, or even the shadow of a support. Practically every Sunday he preached. Men and women, young and old, were converted and he baptized them. He buried their dead and for the young people solemnized marriages by the score. For the two last services he now and then received fees, but aside from this he served his people absolutely free.

Do you say that he should not have trained his people in this manner? This may be true, but that is not the point that we wish to emphasize in this article. However, he trained them to give liberally in other ways. Even now they are liberal and cheerful givers, but they have never done anything towards the support of their faithful pastor, who served them so many years. He fed and cared for himself and family wholly at his own expense, and then, spiritually speaking, fed his large congregation free.

Was he an aggressive, efficient and successful preacher? At his own expense he built up and put into good running condition several congregations. Had it not been for his self-sacrificing efforts, we would have fewer congregations in the Brotherhood than we now have. He surely made a success of his work. While he did not get the fruit of the vineyards he planted, he planted and cultivated the vineyards all the same. Others will partake of the fruits of his planting, and so the work of the Lord goes on, all because this earnest preacher, and a lot more just like him, have given their time, strength and money to the interest of God's Kingdom on earth.

But how about the honor due this class of preachers? Their number runs up into the thousands. They not only helped to clear up and to settle up the great country in which we live, but they built up and nourished hundreds of churches. We talk about the consecrated efforts of missionaries—and they deserve honor for what they are doing—but have not the preachers, who, at their own expense built up hundreds of prosperous churches, also sacrificed? While singing the praises of others, should we not also give expression of our gratitude for what has been accomplished by the fathers?

Think of a man laboring forty years for the church, all at his own expense! It is not a matter of one or two men thus giving their lives and means for the cause they love. Men of this type—or the graves of those who have passed beyond—may be found in every State where we have Brethren churches. And it is because they lived and labored that a hundred thousand members, constituting the Church of the Brethren, can engage in the grand work they have before them. True, some of them may not have looked with favor on most of our present church activities, but they kept right on with their work all the same. They saw to it that the Gospel was preached in the communities in which they lived, and often in the regions beyond. They were not slackers.

To tell the story of their travels, their labor, sacri-fice and achievements, would fill volumes. Many of them made their way to their appointments on horse-back, some on foot. Later they used the buggy and now not a few of them are making use of the automo-bile. But it has been done largely at a personal sacri-fice, and yet without complaint. It was, and is yet, all a labor of love for the salvation of souls and the wel-fare of the church. A more noble set of men never lived and too much can not be said in their praise.

As the generations come and go, the church may produce a finer body of efficient and educated preach-ers, but she is never to excel, in faithfulness and ear-nestness, those who have gone to their reward, or those who are waiting for the call to come to the joys of their Lord. They broke up the fallow ground, planted vineyard after vineyard, watered the Master's plants, and now another generation is enjoying the fruits of their labors. We honor the man or the woman who can, in gratitude, place wreaths upon their graves, or speak of them in terms of praise, but the Lord pity those who would be so inconsiderate as to speak reproachfully of their efforts, or to underrate the value of their achievements.

If I Am Ever to Be a Christian—When?

BY W. G. NYCE

You have a feeling—more or less dim, perhaps—that you intend to be a Christian sometime.

No hope for eternity, otherwise!

No other prospect of seeing again those dear in memory who have gone forth from your heart and your home to that home beyond.

All the impressions of youth have crystallized some-how in a bottom-of-the-heart desire that sometime you may be a Christian.

But when?

You feel that you would like it settled before you die.

You have a feeling that when old age is upon you it would be consoling indeed that you should be a Chris-tian.

And you have a feeling—most people have—that you will live many years, and somewhere along the line, when age comes creeping on, it will be easy to step over into the family of God, and being a Christian will then come natural.

Did you ever hear of any old person doing so? Once or twice in a lifetime you hear of such things, but it is a RARE OCCURRENCE. Satan's leadership is never in that direction.

The longer this great necessity is put off, the harder it becomes. Now is the time—this very day—this very hour. Hurry off, and hunt a friend in Christ, and let him help you. Or throw yourself down before the great, saving, sympathetic Friend himself, and he will receive you. "Him that cometh to me I will in no wise cast out."

"It's taking all my time to get a start in life." Later, "My business is so heavy now I can not attend to any-thing else."

"I'm having a good time in society. Can't give up all my fun just yet."

"I must get rid of my bad habits. When I join the church I want to be the right kind of a church-mem-ber. I might not hold out."

There was a man named Felix, a long time ago. He trembled when he heard about the judgment. He knew he ought to join the church then and there—but he said: "When I have a convenient season, I will call for thee." But the convenient season never came for him. Read about it in Acts 24.

If you are sincere, the Word of God will convi you. Hear what the Word and experience toget teach:

If you give God a chance to help you he will H YOU TO START IN LIFE—and in the right direction. is the superior wisdom of Jesus Christ which sa "Seek ye first the Kingdom of God, and his righteo ness, and all these things SHALL BE ADDED unto yo That means prosperity, in greater measure than can ever hope to achieve without him.

Society—get ready for the SOCIETY OF HEAVEN. is choicer and will last longer. The cup of pleas has bitter dregs. "The blessing of the Lord, it mak rich, and he addeth no sorrow with it." Try the friendliness that the church has to offer. It is sa fying, and follies, and frolics, and dissipations NOT. Now, are they?

As to your character—Jesus wants you; th enough. Your Father wants you back home. Spirit of God wants you, which is why he is stil your heart. All these of the Heavenly Trinity w you, for the very reason that you are a sinner, recognize that you have faults. Faults never g less out of Christ. "The Son of Man came to and to save that which is lost."

You may be one of those good friends of church—doing many things to help along, a neighbor with a kind heart, for whom many Chris friends are praying. You may be an unsaved fa or mother of a young Christian, or an unsaved so daughter or brother or sister, for whose heart Holy Spirit is pleading.

But O, dear friend, whoever you are, come to C TODAY—now, this moment, the only time you are of, the most convenient season you will ever have, make the angels in heaven rejoice, and your loved glad upon earth. DO IT NOW!

Americanizing Americans

It has become customary to charge our labor t bles to the foreign element. We do this without th ing, and for that reason it is a good thing to have tistics, to set us right occasionally.

Whatever may be said of the leaders of the re strike movements, it is stated, on good authority, sixty-three per cent of the striking coal miners native-born Americans.

One of the greatest difficulties, in the way c settlement of these questions, is the lack of infor tion coming directly from Government bureaus. U Sam himself is the only person who can give all ne sary information, and give it accurately to the pu When strikes occur, we get a very small part, ra than the great mass of facts. Then we jump at clusions, our emotions run riot, and the difficult settlement is increased by conditions of the pu mind which are not true, because they are based a small portion of the truth to be considered.

At the recent State Convention of Kansas teach a representative of a certain school system had plac to make an address, and enlist the members of association—thirteen thousand strong—in the u labor cause. He was forced to return home wit a hearing. From the opening hour of that great m ing, it was made plain, by speakers and auditors a that Kansas teachers were insulted at the very that they would be guilty of hoisting their pers grievances before the public at this time. They sta these years, laying up a substantial basis of right purpose and earnest effort which have gone into the making of true character, dominated by right ideals. That young man today is a deacon in the church, a progressive farmer, a substantial citizen of the community, respected and honored by everybody. There are certainly few less promising students than he was, and yet he is making a splendid success in life. What he almost unconsciously absorbed from his surroundings, has made him the useful man into which he has developed.

I recall another who came from the West Virginia mountains, a tall, ungainly youth, with his rude manners and his mountaineer ways. For two years he swept halls and dusted rooms. All the while he attended classes, and showed much more promise of developing into a janitor than into a scholar. If, at the end of the second year, anybody would have pointed him out as promising anything more than the most ordinary talent in future life, it would have been remarkable. But he plodded along and today he has taken his doctor's degree and is a professor in one of the best known educational institutions in this country.

Another, whose career has been no less useful, came with the thought of taking one year's work. He wanted a business course. After putting in the year, he had scarcely half finished the work required for the certificate. He managed to get back the next year and succeeded in finishing the one-year course at the end of the second session. He had acquired early in life the very unfortunate habit of smoking, and while he observed the college regulations of not smoking in the buildings or on the grounds, he could not break away from his slavery to the pipe. When he had handed in his last examination paper, and it was found that he would make passing grades on all his subjects, his teachers were somewhat humiliated at the thought of issuing him a certificate, but this was done. He soon got a business position, made good in his work, received promotion after promotion and, inside of a few years, was at the head of a large commercial school, giving training and inspiration to many young men and women. Even when he graduated, none of his teachers believed that anything except the most ordinary success could possibly come to him.

If possible, a student of even less promise than any of these appeared at the opening of the session some years ago, and applied for admission. He was more than thirty years of age, married, and with scarcely sufficient ability to read intelligently. He had only been at the elementary country schools and that a good many years before. There was nothing prepossessing in his appearance or promising in his talents. He was not even able to enter the regular classes in the academy, but was provided with a tutor. He made slow progress in his work. He plodded on for several years in what seemed to be the most desultory manner, without apparently having accomplished much. He went back to the country section from which he came. Here he organized a Sunday-school. He was later elected to the ministry. In his honest, simple way he began to minister to the spiritual needs of the people. Men and women, boys and girls were led to Christ through his ministrations. He later moved to the Far West where he became the pastor of a prominent church.

Other similar cases present themselves to my mind, since thinking of these, but I shall not speak of others at this time. I have to wonder who of us could be wise enough to forbid entrance to those who seem unpromising, and yet who may have the ability for great usefulness. Some of these most unpromising ones have far surpassed, in useful work, many of those who seemed, during their school days, much more likely to win large success.

But this has always been the case. The lovable Oliver Goldsmith, whom we have all learned to love as a brother, by simply reading his books, was so stupid and ungainly and unpromising that his teacher decided to persuade his family to take him out of school. But how much the poorer we would be, in a literary way, without his delightful essays, his beautiful poems and his charming "Vicar." And such masters as Swift and Wordsworth, among our greatest writers, have been wholly unpromising as students.

We will do well if we direct the lives of all who come to us with the honest purpose of being improved and trained, and give them the benefit of the educational advantages we possess. Even the most unpromising may, by the domination of right ideals, be developed into great usefulness.

"If You Can Get Along Without It"

BY R. A. MONTZ

THE words of our caption were given to the writer while in conversation with a young brother on the "tobacco question." He gave, as his reason for continuing its use, the fact that at his entrance into the church he was not instructed against its use other than advised (?) in the words of the above caption—the examining minister himself being a devotee of the weed. Accordingly, as a result of his prebaptismal instructions and the examples of other leading men in the church, the noxious weed is still indispensable (?). His reasoning was something like this: "If those brethren need not abstain from its use, why should I? If it is only a question of convenience, it is inconvenient to give it up. I am still using it." While such reasoning does not justify indulgence, yet it is logical.

Can we expect the "new life" to be above the example in the church? Can we hope for the "new birth" to be more wholesome than the teaching was thorough? The "new birth" is a transformation from death unto life wrought by the "Gospel," which "is the power of God" through his Spirit. Little more does the Gospel mean to the newborn child of God than the interpretation which he gleans from the lives and teachings of the witnessing minister or teacher.

The Spirit operates on the whole Gospel, "the Sword of the Spirit," and it can not bring death to the old man effectively with its edge blunted and nicked by prejudiced interpretation. The "new life" is not a composition of the carnal and the spiritual (Rom. 8: 5-8), but it is the transformed being: "He is a new creature: old things are passed away; behold, all things are become new" (2 Cor. 5: 17). The "old man was crucified." "We were buried therefore with him through baptism into death; . . . so we might walk in newness of life" (Rom. 6: 4). And Paul says further: "Let not sin therefore reign in your mortal body, that ye should obey it in the lusts thereof" (Rom. 6: 12). Jesus says that the first step in discipleship is denial of self: "If any man would come after me, let him DENY HIMSELF, and take up his cross, and follow me" (Matt. 16: 24).

Sharp and deep cutting are these statements, and painful, indeed, is their application to the carnal self, unless the thrust be thwarted, or the edge be dulled through the lenience of the carnal mind: "Just apply until it becomes painful to self; deny self of its lusts [carnal desires], 'if you can get along without them.'" Paul's great rule of life: "Whether therefore ye eat or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God" (1 Cor. 10: 31), provides not for self, but for the glory of God. Our caption suggests the comfort of SELF, whether or not God is glorified. If this be the ruling principle of the "new life," the words of the editor of these pages, some weeks ago, suggest themselves: "What did your baptism bury?" As a matter of fact, for what does our "new life" stand? Convenience?

Pernicious, indeed, is such teaching, and exceedingly dangerous to the "faith once for all delivered to the saints" at such tremendous cost. It is a deep thrust at the principle for which Jesus' life stood—SACRIFICE. It fails to establish the newborn child of God in the faith, and against the "powers—the hosts of darkness" at the very time when he should take "the whole armor of God" to thwart their baneful thrusts. When Satan approached Jesus, in his masterly attack, we do not hear Jesus saying: "If I can get along without this bread," after fasting forty long days. No! he does not yield to the cravings (and natural, too) of the carnal self, at the suggestion of the evil one. He says: "Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God," neither does he interpret them in favor of the fleshly longing.

Is it not sadly misleading, for one, entrusted with the Sacred Oracles, to direct the young babes in Christ as to their progress on the highway of life, teeming with evils of every form and description, to be content with this feeble admonition: "Shun them—refrain from them—'if you can get along without them'"? Need we be surprised to find many of the church's young people lingering about the wide, attractively-displayed and brilliantly-lighted gateway of the world? Can we hope otherwise than to find the future church tainted with the corruption and gaudy display of the world, when the line of "separation" is so faintly and slackly drawn?

While it is not the direct meaning of the context, yet is it not bordering close unto "having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof"? The form: "Renouncing Satan and all his pernicious ways," is quite comprehensive, but the power is denied: "If you can get along without it." Brethren, Jesus sent us forth with two large tasks: "To win men" and to "make disciples" of them. The preaching of the Gospel (not our ideas) is to do both. His life is the standard we must teach, in order to attain "to the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ." He wants developed, in those we win, a strong, Christlike, spiritual disciple, and not a fleshly weakling, yielding to every longing of the flesh. It is our business to plant the seed—"The Word of God"—untainted by our own likings, in these young hearts, and "God will give the increase."

We must apply the "Sword" with all its pain, even to the casting away of a foot, a hand or an eye, if, indeed, it must take that, rightly to relate ourselves to the truth. Surely, we should not quench the Spirit of Truth, simply because his requirements conflict with our lives. True, it is hard to thrust in the "Sword" when our own lives are tainted, and we ought not; but let us "lay aside every weight [encumbrance], and the sin which does so easily beset us [clings so closely to us]." Let us teach these young babes the whole truth, until they are instructed and fed. Then we may present them "perfect in Christ" (Col. 1: 28b).

"Forward" and the Forward Movement

BY WM. KINSEY

MOVING FORWARD has always been the one dominant principle and the eternal plan of the ages for God's people.

1. In the beginning God created all things, and followed with the command: "Multiply and replenish the earth." "Go forward!"

2. At the Red Sea the command to Israel was: "Go forward!" The Promised Land was in that direction. Liberty and rest were ahead, bondage and affliction, behind.

3. At Kadesh-Barnea—on the threshold of the Promised Land—there was but one legitimate thing for Israel to do—go forward! They failed to do so. It cost them a generation. They entered the land by and by, but thirty-eight years behind time. They failed to go forward because of a lack of faith and trust in Jehovah. The bitter experiences and schooling of the desert and wilderness life taught them to trust in Jehovah. They had to look to him, for whence could they get food, etc., in such a place?

It always costs heavily not to go forward. It may be that our church, at different times, has been at her Kadesh-Barnea.

4. At the Jordan there was but one thing for Joshua and Israel to do—go forward! Enter the Promised Land!

5. Before Jesus ascended, he gave the Great Commission, and it was: Go forward! Go into all the world and make disciples. Nothing but a forward movement will evangelize the world. The early church was failing in this Great Commission by remaining in Jerusalem. She was at ease in her Zion. Well, it took a persecution to move the church out. Drastic measures are sometimes needed to enforce the principle of moving forward.

6. Paul said: "Forgetting the things that are bed," neither does he interpret them in favor of the shly longing.

"Forward" and the Forward Movement

BY WM. KINSEY

MOVING FORWARD has always been the one dominant principle and the eternal plan of the ages for God's people.

1. In the beginning God created all things, and followed with the command: "Multiply and replenish the earth." "Go forward!"

2. At the Red Sea the command to Israel was: "Go forward!" The Promised Land was in that direction. Liberty and rest were ahead, bondage and affliction, behind.

3. At Kadesh-Barnea—on the threshold of the Promised Land—there was but one legitimate thing for Israel to do—go forward! They failed to do so. It cost them a generation. They entered the land by and by, but thirty-eight years behind time. They failed to go forward because of a lack of faith and trust in Jehovah. The bitter experiences and schooling of the desert and wilderness life taught them to trust in Jehovah. They had to look to him, for whence could they get food, etc., in such a place?

It always costs heavily not to go forward. It may be that our church, at different times, has been at her Kadesh-Barnea.

4. At the Jordan there was but one thing for Joshua and Israel to do—go forward! Enter the Promised Land!

5. Before Jesus ascended, he gave the Great Commission, and it was: Go forward! Go into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature. Forward! Forward! Forward!

6. The Christian life, to be normal, must go forward. The Hebrew Christians were reproved for not doing so. For when they should have been five or six footers, and eating solid food, they were still babes and needing milk. "For he is a babe" and partakes of milk. Don't always be a baby, but go on unto perfection (full growth). By the time ye ought to be teachers, ye still must be taught (Heb. 5: 12 to 6: 1). Therefore leave babyhood, leave the bottle, leave the doctrine of the first principles and grow up, eat solid food. In other words, "Go forward!"

Moving forward is characteristic of the industrial world. In harvesting it has been somewhat after the following manner: Plucking by hand, using the sickle, the cradle, the drop-reaper, the binder, and finally the modern harvester. In illumination it has been from the flickering flame to the incandescent bulb. The medical world is a striking illustration of the principle. It is needless to mention others.

For the above reasons we believe in the "forward" principle. And there are still other reasons why I believe in the present "Forward Movement" of the church, such as:

1. Because it is a principle or law of God, operative in all of his works, in all time.

2. Because the church has sanctioned it.

3. Because of the world-challenge to the church. A great door has been opened, and it is for the church to enter.

4. Because the church is debtor. Having received the light, she is under obligation to let it shine, to pass it on.

5. Because the church is ready, doubtless, as never before.

6. Because forward is the only way to go, in order to survive.

7. Because it stands for a "Greater Church of the Brethren." We have a whole Gospel to give to the world—a good reason for becoming a "Greater Church of the Brethren."

8. Because it stands for growth.

Many other reasons might be mentioned. The above points could well be enlarged upon, but rather than take up space here for that, we shall leave it to those who join in with us to "boost" the Movement in the four years that yet remain.

The Forward Movement is a special manifestation of the age-long principle of ever forward, ever onward. Let us have more than mere form when we sing: "Onward, Christian Soldier," because this thing is of the Lord. For

"Like a mighty army moves the church of God,
Brothers, we are treading where the saints have trod;
We are not divided, all one body we,
One in hope and doctrine, one in charity.

"Onward, then, ye people! join our happy throng,
Blend with ours your voices in the triumph song:
Glory, laud, and honor, unto Christ the King,
Thus through countless ages men and angels sing."

The church of God moves, but it takes more than lip service to make it move. Besides the above song, many sing, "Rescue the Perishing," "Help Somebody Today," and the like. This is only a lip service (Mark 7: 6) when it is not accompanied by the works of practical Christianity.

God's cause moves forward. It does this through his representatives here on earth. If his ministers are indifferent and unwilling, and he can not move through them, he will move around them. God did this in William Carey's day. The ministers were passed by and a poor shoemaker was chosen to be the father of modern missions. The ministers told Carey to sit down and keep quiet. They opposed him. God couldn't move forward through them. What will be our position? Do we want to be passed by, undependable, just as God was not dependent on the Jews for the fulfillment of his promises? Or do we want to be in the forward movement of God's cause?

THE ROUND TABLE

A Lion Used by God

BY JULIA GRAYDON

I READ a wonderful story in one of our missionary magazines, some time ago, and it made quite an impression on me because of the incident contained.

A missionary and his wife were out in a boat and had lost their course. They were distressed and did not know which way to turn, to find land, when suddenly they heard the roar of a lion—not a pleasant sound at best—but they sailed in the direction of that voice and soon saw land. When the little boat reached the landing, the lion had gone; no trace of him was found. Here a lion was used of God to help his believers, who had enough faith and trust in their Heavenly Father to follow even the roar of a lion. Ordinarily this would not seem to mean safety, yet, under God's guidance, on this occasion it led the way to the place they wanted to find.

The Minister's Opportunity

BY LEANDER SMITH

THROUGHOUT our beloved Brotherhood today there are perhaps thousands of young men whom God is calling to the ministry. Some of these have already had college training, but have not yet surrendered themselves to God's call. There are others who feel drawn to this sacred work and are thinking about entering school to make preparation for it. There is a still smaller class who have answered God's call, who have finished their college work and are planning to enter upon a course of Bible work.

I would, first of all, advise those whom God has called, but who have not yet answered that call with joyous assent, that they betake themselves to prayer and to earnest and faithful searching of heart. The world never offered the young minister such inviting fields of opportunity, nor did he call them in such a time of need as there is at this very hour. It is, I think, safe to say that no other vocation promises such opportunity for the exercise of the higher powers and for the highest human service as the ministry does today. Those who would like to make a contribution to the life of the world have their opportunity in the fields which are now open to the Christian ministry.

With the question of being a minister settled, the choice of his school is often a decisive factor. A mistake in this matter has often handicapped the minister for life. The wise choice of a school is a decided advantage for a useful and happy ministry throughout a whole lifetime. The associations formed in school are often life-assets. The acquaintance with the men who teach and the fellowship with the student body have a value which the young man quite often does not fully appreciate. A man's message for a life-time is of far greater consideration than a little money spent in preparation.

Seeing Difficulties and Seeing Jesus

BY G. W. TUTTLE

DIFFICULTIES are not to be ignored. They are real; they stand in the way of doing anything that is worth while. Wherever we turn, whatever we do, difficulties confront us. Life is a battle-ground. Only as we fight, only as we are good soldiers of Jesus Christ, do we grow strong, do we gain ground and build up character that will endure.

But we fight not alone; and herein is the differenee between victory and defeat. Even a blind man can see difficulties in his pathway. What we need is the spiritual sight—and the spiritual insight—that looks right through difficulties to the winsome face and helpful presence of the Master. Sight, like that of Elisha at Dothan, when he prayed for his timid servant—that the Lord would open his eyes. When the Lord had opened the young man's eyes, his astonished vision saw that the mountains were filled with horses and chariots of fire round about Elisha. Mind you the mountains were filled with them. God does nothing by halves. Daniel saw God beyond his difficulties, and the lions' mouths were fast-closed. Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego saw God through their difficulties. What was the result? Listen to the testimony of King Nebuchadnezzar: "Lo, I see four men loose, walking in the midst of the fire, and they have no hurt; and the form of the fourth is like the Son of God."

The difficulties and trials of the Christian life will always draw us nearer to, or estrange us from, God. Our vision of Christ, in his beauty and strength, will be clearer, and brighter, and more perfect, or else our vision will grow dim, and defeat will be our portion. If we put on the bridle of worldliness, the blinders of pleasure may shut out God, but they will never shut out difficulties.

The weary disciples on the Sea of Galilee saw the storm and the difficulties. They rowed, and toiled, and did their best. Then they lifted up their eyes and they saw Jesus coming to them, walking on the sea. Our difficulties but make a road for the Master to come to us. Are the difficulties many? Is the road thorny? Are the burdens heavy? Lift up your eyes! Here comes the Great Burden-bearer!

We infer that the storm ceased when Jesus came into the boat, for the record says: "And immediately the ship was at the land whither they went." Shall we not be partakers of his blessings, even now? Shall we not have peace in his peace, victory in his victory, if we can look up and see Jesus? We can look down and see difficulties, but we must look up to see Jesus.

Six Hundred and Sixty-Six

BY M. M. ESHELMAN

IN studying what God has revealed, the student should keep in mind that some things that were written by holy, Spirit-filled men were mysterious to them—such as the mystery of the one body of Christ. The mystery of Babylon is made clear by the holy, Spirit-filled ones, at the time when God designed that the matter should be understood. Prophetic things, now being fulfilled, should be interpreted by Spirit-filled men. I think they can and will be made known. Very great light is thrown upon the number six hundred and sixty-six (Rev. 13: 18). "Here is wisdom. Let him that hath understanding count the number of the beast: for it is the number of a man; and his number is six hundred three score and six."

The meaning of this number, in Rev. 13, will not be found in the English, Latin, German and Russian languages, but in the Hebrew and Greek languages, in which the Bible was written. There being no Arabic notation at that time, all numerals are by Hebrew and Greek letters. This fact is but little known, but every Bible student may and can know it. Six hundred and sixty-six was the secret symbol of the ancient pagan mysteries, connected with the worship of the devil. It is today the secret connecting link between those ancient mysteries and their modern revival in spiritualism, theosophy, etc. The efforts of the great enemy are directed toward uniting all into one great whole. "Separation" is God's message for his people, and is the mark of Christ, while "union" and "reunion" is the mark of antichrist.

The number six was stamped on the old mysteries. The great secret symbol consisted of the three letters "SSS," because the letter "S," in the Greek alphabet, was the symbol of the figure six.

It is remarkable that the Romans used but six letters for their notation: D, C, L, X, V and I. The sum of these is six hundred and sixty-six, used in the fourth Gentile world empire. "The triple six marks the culmination of man's opposition to God in the person of the coming antichrist."

"The duration of the old Assyrian empire was six hundred and sixty-six years before it was conquered by Babylon. Jerusalem was trodden down by the Roman empire exactly six hundred and sixty-six years from the battle of Actium, B. C. 31, to the Saracen conquest in A. D. 636. There are three men who stand out in Scripture as the avowed enemies of God and of his people. Each is branded with this number "six" that we may not miss their significance:

(1) Goliath, whose height was six cubits. He had six pieces of armor; his spear's head weighed six hundred shekels of iron (1 Sam. 17: 4-7).

(2) Nebuchadnezzar, whose "image" which he set up was sixty cubits high and six cubits broad (Dan. 3: 1), and which was worshiped when the music was heard from six specified instruments.

(3) Antichrist, whose number is six hundred and sixty-six. In the first we have one six connected with the pride of fleshly might. In the second we have two sixes connected with the pride of absolute dominion. In the third we have three sixes connected with the pride of Satanic guidance.

One six is significant, two sixes or sixty-six more significant, and three sixes, or six hundred and sixty-six, are most significant. The number stands as the completion of all evil forces in the anti-Christ.

Patience

BY ELIZABETH MCDANNEL MARTIN

MOST of us have, at some time or other, listened to a sermon on patience, and the speaker invariably has used for his text the narrative relating the experiences and patience of Job, who, with the exception of Jesus, is the most striking example of patience we ever heard of. Job was in possession of something that is lacking very greatly in many of our people today—perhaps more so now than in the days of Job. One can scarcely conceive of the grief and losses endured by Job; and yet, with it all, the Bible tells us that Job sinned not, but trusted in God, and exercised untold patience through all his severe tests and trials.

We read in James 5: 10: "Take, my brethren, the prophets, who have spoken in the name of the Lord, for an example of suffering affliction, and of patience." Many of us have never had our patience tested, in comparison with what some nf the prophets of old endured, and yet we realize too often that our patience is more than exhausted by the small and insignificaot trials and tests that come our way, as we are traveling through this world. We should hide our faces in shame when we discover just how little of this much needed virtue we possess.

I am sure that we would be greatly benefited by meditating much, and especially during the trying moment, on the lives and patience of such men as Job, Peter, John, Paul, and, above all, Jesus Christ and some of the early missionaries—such as Livingstone, Judson, Chalmers and others. We always feel stronger and more encouraged by living with such characters as above named, and many others not named.

Then, by prayer, we can reach certain heights in life's struggle that could otherwise never be reached. We should pray for patience, just as much as we pray for our daily bread.

Some time ago we happened to be in a home where there were a number of small children. The mother, a Christian woman, confessed that she so often lacks the patience in the kitchen that she would like to have. As a means of gaining more patience, she took a piece of cardboard and printed on it in large letters these two words: "Be patient," and hung it so as to be easily seen while at her daily duties. This mother really wanted more patience, and we believe her plan was a very good one.

Following are two illustrations from real life, showing patience and the lack of it:

Not long ago, while walking along one of our streets, I met a man riding a bicycle, carrying with him an empty burlap sack. For some reason or other the sack dropped to the ground. The rider, all in a rage, alighted quickly, and while picking up the sack uttered some wonderful oaths, never intended for man to utter. As he rode away, we were made to think that just a little thing had happened, but what a black record in that man's life-book—all because he did not exercise a little patience.

A few weeks later I met another young man, also riding a bicycle. The street was muddy—the result of a heavy rain that had just fallen. He was carrying with him a loaf of bread and several other articles.

ed of his people. Each is branded with this number six" that we may not miss their significance:

(1) Goliath, whose height was six cubits. He had x pieces of armor; his spear's head weighed six hun-red shekels of iron (1 Sam. 17: 4-7).

(2) Nebuchadnezzar, whose "image" which he set was sixty cubits high and six cubits broad (Dan. : 1), and which was worshiped when the music was eard from six specified instruments.

(3) Antichrist, whose number is six hundred and xty-six. In the first we have one six connected with e pride of fleshly might. In the second we have two xes connected with the pride of absolute dominion. n the third we have three sixes connected with the ride of Satanic guidance.

One six is significant, two sixes or sixty-six more gnificant, and three sixes, or six hundred and sixty-x, are most significant. The number stands as the ompletion of all evil forces in the anti-Christ.

In James 5: 11 we read: "Behold, we count them happy which endure." If we are in possession of this Christian virtue, when the tests of life come to us, so that we shall endure, coming out conquerors, we shall indeed be happy, and be instrumental in making those happy around us.

Sabbath Desecration

BY JOHN B. OELLIG

More and more, as time passes, the observer of the current events is reminded of the fact that we, as a nation, are drifting into Sunday profanation at an alarming rate. We have been, to the far West, as ex-amples of provincialism and its attendant open Sun-day, or no Sunday at all. High wages and love of amusement have well nigh demoralized the people, the masses. Corporations have seized upon the opportu-nity, and Sunday excursions, to places of interest or amusement, are of frequent occurrence. We boast of our cultured civilization, not to say religion, yet we find these evils where one would least expect to find them.

A secular paper, The Pathfinder, published at Wash-ington, D. C., in a scathing editorial, among other things says: "Our ministers have a hard time getting even small audiences on Sunday. The people flock to the theater and movies, both day and night, and these places are well attended. This is a sad commentary upon our city and civilization."

Certain it is, that these places, here referred to, are a greater evil than the saloons, from the fact that they inveigle the very young. If the flaming posters, out-side of these places, are an index of what is inside, it is certain that there is nothing there, for the intellec-tual or moral advancement of the young. Some one has well said that these performances should have boiler plate curtains and that these be kept carefully down, during some of these plays. When the secular press disparages these places as to operating upon the Lord's Day, is it not time for the church to arouse itself? It does seem to the writer that the pulpit has not stressed the doctrine of Sabbath observance. We hear much, in relation to economic and social problems, but what is more vital is too generally passed over. When we advance so far in righteousness that we have a real Lord's Day, we will have gone a long way toward better conditions, temporally and spiritually, in this old world of ours.

The church has placed the temperance cause upon the high plane it holds today. Let her labor for less of a holiday and more of a "Holy Day"—such an en-deavor redounding to the betterment of posterity, morally and spiritually.

"Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy."

Love and Friendship

BY VIOLA PRISER

"I was sinking deep in sin, far from the peaceful shore,
Very deeply stained within, sinking to rise no more;
But the Master of the sea heard my despairing cry,
From the waters lifted me, now safe am I.
Love lifted me! Love lifted me!
When nothing else could help, love lifted me."

As the words that are quoted above are sung very thoughtfully, they should not only remind one of the love of God, but they should call to mind the fact that God loves not as man loveth. For instance, let a man be possessed of wealth, fame and everything that con-stitutes prosperity, and see the friends flock around causing himself to be stripped of his good reputatio then take another look and you will see that the nu ber of his friends has been divided and subtract until you will find it necessary to take yet another searching look, in order to tell whether he now has a friends at all or not.

Yes, man loves when everything is lovely and goes well. But when a person is struggling agai misfortune, or is bending low beneath a burden guilt—a crushing burden—just the time when he ne friends, real friends, as a rule he finds he is alone, nearly so.

Oh, the bitterness of it all! No one knows but th who have had experience along that line. Despa yes, black despair is pictured on the face, and the he is heavy as lead. This can be borne a while, but time comes when it can be borne no longer, and great distress of soul, man cries out to his God help, and, lo, he finds to his surprise that God lo not as man loves, for God hears his despairing cry, in a tone full of love and compassion he says: "Co unto me." Yes, and no sinner is so vile, so weigh down beneath the load of guilt as to hinder him fr accepting the loving invitation. Ah, no, for God h said: "Though your sins be as scarlet, they shall as white as snow; though they be red like crimson, t shall be as wool."

God cleanses from all sin, takes away our burden guilt; makes our hearts throb with real joy, and p a song of gladness in our mouth. And not only t but he also gives us a title to a mansion in the glo land where we can spend eternity with him and w the Christ who paid the price of our redempt Surely we can say with heartfelt gratitude: " found a Friend, oh, such a Friend!" Then, as realize that Christ suffered terribly, in order that might experience such sweet relief and such joy, s we not make a complete surrender of self, and pu our devotion to him by faithful, self-denying serv If so, then we shall have occasion to sing from heart:

"I've found a Friend in Jesus—he's everything to
He's the fairest of ten thousand to my soul!
The 'Lily of the Valley' in him alone I see—
All I need to cleanse and make me fully whole:
In sorrow he's my comfort, in trouble he's my stay;
He tells me every care on him to roll;
He's the 'Lily of the Valley,' the bright and Morning
He's the fairest of ten thousand to my soul."

Good Citizenship

BY OAISY M. MOORE

In the ordinary sense we consider the man who l a moral life, pays his taxes, supports desirable inst tions and obeys the law, a good citizen.

In reality there is a much larger obligation for g citizenship. One of our greatest responsibilities teaching the young, and correctly rearing the boys girls who tomorrow shall constitute America's pop tion.

This training begins at home, or should. The m ern parents so often fall far short in this respect. children are sent to school and to Sunday-schoo get them out of the way, and the teachers in th institutions are left to teach them whatever they sh know.

The children enter kindergarten or primary sc and from there are advanced according to indivi ability to grammar and high school. It may be t are sent to normal or to college or university. these various schools they are taught the things n ful to the average business, professional or home

And when they have graduated, it is considered they have learned sufficient for their needs, and academic and secular school-life ends.

There is another side of life which requires trai

OUR EVANGELISTS

Bro. R. H. Nicodemus, of Chicago, to begin Jan. 4 in the Nappanee church, Ind.

Bro. J. Edwin Jarboe, of Chicago, is in the midst of a series of meetings at Raisin, Calif.

Bro. V. K. Meek, of Billings, Okla., to begin Dec. 14 in the Guthrie church, same State.

Bro. W. H. Eisenbise, of Mt. Carroll, Ill., is holding meetings in the Freeport church, same State.

Bro. W. C. Detrick, of Bryan, Ohio, is holding a series of meetings in the Owl Creek church, same State.

Bro. W. K. Conner, of Harrisburg, Pa., is in the midst of a series of meetings in the Lower Cumberland congregation, in the Mechanicsburg house, Pa.

ELSEWHERE IN THIS ISSUE

The Sunday-School Normal of Northwestern Ohio is to be held in the Silver Creek church, Hickory Grove house, Dec. 19-22. Transportation arrangements are given among the Notes.

On page 796 we publish an announcement by Bethany Bible School. It will be noted that the Special Bible Term begins Dec. 29 and continues for two weeks. The various phases of ministerial activity are amply provided for, and the sessions will surely prove an inspiration to all in attendance. Owing to housing conditions, it is desired that those who contemplate coming, write the school to that effect.

The Mount Morris College Bible Institute is to be held Jan. 2-9. Judging by the program, as given on page 796, an unusually extensive and excellent line of topics has been provided for. Those to whom the various phases of the program have been assigned, are leaders in their respective lines, and need no word of special commendation on our part. None of our church workers, in easy reach of the Institute, can afford to be absent.

PERSONAL MENTION

Bro. Wm. Bixler, formerly of East Akron, Ohio, has moved to Sebring, Fla.

Bro. I. F. Rairigh, Hastings, Mich., changes his address to Woodland, same State.

Bro. John R. Snyder has an available date for a series of meetings in January, next, if application is made at once. He may be addressed, for the present, at Batavia, Ill., in care of Bro. J. S. Flory, 63 Columbia Street—he being in a series of evangelistic services at that place.

Bro. Wm. H. Eiler, of Rice Lake, Wis., is arranging to dispose of his farming interests that he may devote himself to pastoral work. With this in view he is ready to consider calls from churches in the Middle States, which may be looking for a pastor to begin service next spring.

Sister Ida Deardorff, of Marion, Ohio, bereaved wife of the late Eld. Geo. E. Deardorff, whose death was chronicled in our columns a few weeks ago, wishes the many friends who have sent her messages of sympathy, to know that their kind remembrance was greatly appreciated by her.

Dr. and Mrs. Fred J. Wampler and Dr. and Mrs. Daniel L. Horning will sail from San Francisco, Calif., Dec. 27, for their missionary work in China. Any mail intended for them should reach San Francisco not later than Dec. 26, and should be addressed to them "In care of China Mail Steamship Company, Outgoing 'S. S. China,' San Francisco, Calif."

Monday morning of this week the Mission Rooms received the following Radio-Letter from the India missionary party, which sailed from New York Nov. 8: "November eighteenth passing Azores, not stormy but rough sailing; at first much seasickness, now better. Forty-five missionaries aboard. First stop, Port Said, to arrive Bombay about December thirteenth."

As now arranged, our missionaries sailing for India will leave Seattle in two parties as follows: Steamer "Kashima Maru," sailing Jan. 10: C. G. Shull and wife, A. S. B. Miller, wife and child, A. G. Butterbaugh, wife and three children, B. F. Summer, Sadie J. Miller, Nettie Brown. Steamer "Fushimi Maru," sailing Jan. 27: J. E. Wagoner, wife and two children, Leo Blickenstaff and wife, D. L. Forney, wife and child, Fred M. Hollenberg and wife, Anna B. Brumbaugh and Verna Blickenstaff.

Bro. M. R. Zigler, of Broadway, Va., has been secured by the General Mission Board for the important post of Home Mission Secretary. The Board has been looking for a suitable man for this place for some months, and is much gratified in having found one so well fitted for its responsibilities. Bro. Zigler reached Elgin last Sunday evening, the 7th, and entered upon his new duties the following morning. His office adjoins the rooms of the General Secretary, under whose direction he will devote his energies to the interests of missions in the homeland.

The First District of Arkansas and Southeastern Missouri is to be represented on the 1920 Standing Committee by Eld. W. T. Price.

Bro. R. E. Gotshall, late of Marion, Ind., has assumed the pastorate of the Hartford City congregation, same State, and should be addressed accordingly.

MISCELLANEOUS

By special request we announce the love feast to be held in the First Church, Altoona, Pa., at 6:30 P. M., Dec. 14.

Bro. W. E. Roop desires us to state, by way of correction, that the nine, reported in a recent issue, as having been baptized at Amwell, N. J., should have been given as "nine confessions."

A program of the Bible Institute in the Red Bank church, Oakland, Pa., Dec. 12-14, reaches us just before closing these columns. Interesting topics should make this a specially attractive gathering.

As most of the members of the Saginaw church, Mich., are residing quite a distance from the city of like name, the congregation has decided to be known hereafter as the Elsie church. It was found that the old name was somewhat misleading to strangers.

We are pleased to learn that a struggling little city congregation of the Middle West, with a membership of but seventy-five, sustains a prayer meeting with an average attendance of thirty. Such a record is an eloquent testimony to the high spiritual standard attained in that congregation. Can any of the other churches report a better showing, according to the ratio of their membership?

An energetic pastor in the Middle West made use of the following topics with excellent success, during a recent series of meetings. Possibly a still more extended use might be made of them: "Clouds That Hide Christ," "Hypocrites in the Church and How to Get Them Out," "Power of True Love and the Miracles It Works," "Church Members Who Keep Men from God," "What to Do with a Guilty Conscience," "What Is the Truth About Christ's Second Coming?" "What to Do with Life's Burdens," "The Foolishness of Rejecting Christ."

When Conference Minutes Were Burned.—The editor of the "Herald of Gospel Liberty," Dayton, Ohio, publishes an interesting reminiscence of the early days of the "Christian Church." Seemingly the church leaders of that body entertained serious fears of preserving anything in the printed line that might, in the remotest way, be construed as a creed, or a restriction upon the liberty of the individual. In accordance with that conception of things, the last item of business, at those early conferences, was the careful reading, approving—and then the burning of the minutes. "This was done," as one of the "Herald's" writers avers, "to prevent some literatus with magical power from touching them with his wand, and transforming them into a creed."

Our Book Table

History and Doctrines of the Church of the Brethren

This volume of 300 pages and upwards by Pres. Otho Winger, of Manchester College, has just come from the press of the Brethren Publishing House. The need which it is designed to fill is that of a connected account of our church history from its beginning to the present time, together with a general view of our church doctrines.

A cursory examination is enough to assure us that it will fill that need most admirably. Brumbaugh's excellent history is well known, but that work deals mainly with the beginnings of the church. Other phases of our history, as well as our doctrines, have been well treated by others, but no single work has told the whole story as this does. The main facts of the early history are given in a clear and concise way, but the chief interest of this book lies in its treatment of our later church development and activities and doctrinal beliefs. It does not pretend to be exhaustive but it is comprehensive, clear and interesting. It is a compendium of information and inspiration. It will help the reader to understand the spirit of the Church of the Brethren, as this is manifest both in the events of the past and in present tendencies.

This book will undoubtedly prove to be a most valuable addition to our church literature. It is certain to have a wide circulation. It will be particularly useful to teachers of classes in our denominational history. The author's ability in this field has already been demonstrated in his "Life of Eld. R. H. Miller" and his "History of the Brethren in Indiana." An appropriate introduction to the volume has been written by Eld. H. C. Early. Price, $2.00. Send orders to the author at North Manchester, Ind.

Peloubet's Select Notes for 1920

It is unnecessary to speak at length of this standard commentary on the International Sunday School Lessons. Its reputation is established. This is the forty-sixth annual volume of this remarkable series and it easily measures up with its predecessors. The Publishing House will be pleased to handle your orders at $1.50 per copy.

AROUND THE WORLD

Appalling Conditions

In reading about the great loss of life in all parts of Armenia, one is often made to wonder that there should be even a small remnant of the people left. Late reports assure us that sixty per cent of the entire population of the Igdir district of Armenia died in the typhus epidemic that so disastrously swept over the country. The relief workers say that starvation was one of the great contributory causes of this enormous death rate. In Erivan alone there were 3,000 cases of typhus at one time, and returning workers of the Near East Relief Committee admit that the low vitality of the underfed people is mainly responsible for their unprecedented mortality.

They Confess Their Guilt

A long step toward the reconciliation of French and German Protestants, separated by the war, was made at the meeting of the "International Committee of the World Alliance for Promoting International Friendship through the Churches," held at The Hague, Sept. 30 to Oct. 1. The entire German delegation frankly confessed that the invasion of Belgium by Germany was a moral wrong. This conciliatory admission made it easier for French and Belgian delegates to find a common meeting-ground, so that all sessions of the conference were marked by a notable unanimity of feeling and a harmonious spirit of devotion to the principles of Christ's Kingdom.

Weighed and Found Wanting

In an endeavor to ascertain what real connection there is between America's phenomenal growth as a nation, and the religious influences predominant throughout the land, the Government of Japan sent a special commission to the United States, to gain a first-hand knowledge of the situation. The report of this commission discusses the matter at length, finding much to praise, but having some severe criticisms, also, as seen in the following: "While education, commerce, and industry have been developed to a wonderful degree, there is little evidence that the Christian religion is regarded as important by most of the people." An arraignment that might well be humbly considered.

Turks as Prohibitionista

Essad Bey, a prominent Turkish official, has made a plea to the United States to save the Ottoman Empire from going "wet" by reason of invading Europeans. While the Turks have never indulged in intoxicants of any kind—their use being contrary to their religious principles—saloons and liquor-shops are now springing up everywhere. Even Jerusalem is not exempt from the contaminating influence of the liquor vender. Here is a part of the petition referred to: "We appeal to President Wilson, Chief Magistrate of the greatest dry country in the world, to save us from the beer-drinking British and from the wine-bibbing French and Italians. The Greeks and Russian bolsheviks, too, encourage the traffic in strong drink. As the French enter Armenia, huge quantities of Algerian wine are following them."

The Friends' Record in War Relief

Of the many organizations that have attempted to mitigate the horrors of war, the Friends' War Relief Service is undoubtedly worthy of chief honor. Its reconstruction unit, which is engaged in the greatest single endeavor of reconstruction in devastated France, has had five hundred workers in the field, and will keep at least three hundred there during the present winter. More than forty villages have been rebuilt and made thoroughly habitable. Two factories have been wholly devoted to the making of demountable houses. Thousands of these have been set up, and have proved their great practicability. Eight institutions for medical relief, and innumerable relief centers have been carried on. Refugees have been cared for. Land has been plowed and seeded. Cooperative stores have been started to sell necessaries to refugees at less than cost.

Let No One Be Deceived

Some weeks ago we referred to the "wave of Spiritualism" that, for the last two or three years, has been sweeping over Great Britain. That it has now reached the United States, is not strange. We need but glance at the popular magazines—accurate reflectors of the prevalent trend of thought—to be convinced that an unusual amount of space is being given to the subject of "communication [illegible] Journals that, in years gone by, would there remains about it all a strange inconclusiveness. is true that many amazing things have been seen heard by investigators whose veracity can not be rea impeached, but there is still lacking the all-conclu clinch of evidence which requires one to admit that lines of communication, thus opened, reach beyond death boundary.

Growing Lawlessness in Great Britain

Much anxiety has been aroused, throughout the Un Kingdom, concerning the great outburst of crime s the war—a reign of violence far beyond the situatio things in the United States. Dr. C. W. Saleeby, on the world's foremost lights in the field of eugenics psychology, places the blame upon the war and d "War," he says, "is a reversion to barbarism. Civi tion says: 'Thou shalt not kill.' War says: 'Thou n kill.' Can you take millions of men out of their reg mode of living, and train them to kill, without havi mark left on them? . . . It's when they are de bilized that the mischief begins. Army discipline no lo sways them and, inflamed by drink, they are ready any act of violence."

The Needs of China Today

When we remember that China claims nearly one-fo of the entire human race, we get a new realization o supreme importance. If, by a effort, our missionaries can succeed in raising up a consecrated Christian leadership for that country, greatest problems will readily be solved.

Japan at the Crossroads

It may truly be said that the Nipponese Empire day standing at the parting of the ways, so far as le questions are concerned. It must choose betwee moracy and autocracy, between freedom and milita between oppression and fair dealing in Korea, Sha and elsewhere. It is to be hoped that Japan, in thi mentous hour of her history, will heed the great l of the world war. Having seen the failure of Germa itarism, as well as materialism, it would seem to b part of wisdom, for the people of Japan, to turn to ciples that endure. Christian philanthropy has been onstrated to the people of Japan in its various pha beneficence, and there should be no hesitancy in f pressing the claims of the Kingdom.

The Waning Power of Mohammedanism

According to well-informed workers on the foreig the overwhelming preponderance of Mohammedanis been seriously diminished by reason of the world Under the providence of God that section of the Christian world has been influenced for the Gospel profoundly. The war has changed the status of Mohammedan lands than those of any other non-Ch faith. Through this war God has overthrown, fo we hope, Mohammedan political power. Let no one however, that the struggle with Islam's forces has c They have received a serious set-back, but are means conquered. We do well, however, to rec that an opportunity of unusual significance is no sented to the Christian forces of the world. It duty to go forward and do battle for the Lord.

An Era of Extravagance

"Wherefore do ye spend money for that which bread?" is the pertinent question of an ancient pro an inquiry that might well be given serious thou the heedless spendthrifts of today. Despite the st reiterated cry of constantly-rising prices, seeming American people are falling over themselves in eagerness to spend their hard-earned dollars us and often they are even disposed to boast abou lavish expenditures. Recent investigations by Sam" reveal an imposing array of facts and figure collective and individual, showing that the high pr essentials and nonessentials are due to reckless sp Extravagance and waste speak for themselves in certain terms. Dealers report that serviceable low goods are passed by in the eager search for the le stantial goods of finer texture. Here is what Londo of the buying habit of the American people: "The the Sunday-school has only twenty-six hours per year for her great task of preparing and moulding the future generations.

My brother, my sister, the child is the first line of defense. "He is the hope of the world."

Here is the task: There are, in the United States, twenty-five millions of children under twelve years of age, and twelve millions of these are without religious instruction of any kind. Can you see what this will mean in twenty years? Not so long ago there were only twenty-five million people in the United States. Now there are twenty-five million children under twelve years of age and one-half of them without the one thing that will make them good citizens—religious education. They are all receiving materialistic training. A democracy of selfishness, of materialism, without the teaching of the Christ, will be sure to go to ruin.

The neglected children are not all in the slums but on the best avenues and on the best farms. In New York City alone, in a survey a few years ago, it was found that eight hundred and sixty thousand children were receiving no religious instruction. It could easily be told on their characters, their lack of knowledge of right and wrong, their conduct and habits.

Do you see the task? Do you see the opportunity before you? Do you see the need of the world, not only in China and India, but in America? If you do, and are interested in mankind, teach the child the ideals of Jesus, and in the next generation he will teach them again. They will grow as the seed is sown in the field.

I want to close with a little poem, "The Finest of All":

God made the streams that gurgle down the purple mountain side;
He made the gorgeous coloring with which the sunset's dyed,
He made the hills and covered them with glory,
He made the sparkle on the dewdrop, and the shifting shine and shade,
Then, seeing that he needed but a crown for all earth's charms,
He made a little woman with a baby in her arms.
He made the arching rainbow that is hurled across the sky,
He made the blessed flowers that nod and smile as we pass by.
He made the ballroom beauty as she sways with queenly grace,
But sweetest of them all, he made the lovelight in the face
That bends above a baby, warding off all earth's alarms.
God bless the little woman with a baby in her arms.

In Two Parts—Part One

"I don't care, I guess I've got the best dad in this here bunch, anyway," boasted one of a group of boys that stood with their tin dinner-pails at the crossroads. It was on their way home from school that they paused, each evening, for their daily argument and occasional fight, before going in the different directions that led to their homes.

"Aw, wha'd he ever do? Your dad! He ain't got a decent team o' horses er nothing a tall. Now take my dad. Look at him! He's got a nautomobile an' a whole set of registered hogs, and that's what counts in this here world, I tell you," boasted a second.

"Aw, you kids make me tired," spoke a third. "I'd rather have a dad without a nautomobile if he just knew something. Now frinstance, take my dad. He used to teach school. He's forgotten more'n all your dads together ever knew. An' he's secutary of the grange and makes big speeches 'n' everything!"

"Bah! that's nothin'," boasted another. "They hain't none o' you got any dads that knowed enough to pick out a looker for a woman. Now look at my dad's wife! An' he just got 'er a new suit. You ought to see her! Dad says I git all my looks from my ma."

"Huh," said the first, "I wouldn't have curly hair an' white teeth 'at I had to brush all the time, and I'm going home."

And turning, the boy bumped into Eddie Hinkley, who, in all that time, had not added one single word or boast to the loud-voiced conversation that had gone on about him.

"Hey, fellers, I can settle this thing of who's got the best dad. It's Eddie Hinkley! He's got the dad what squeezes the pennies till the eagles hollers!"

"You let my dad alone an' don't you git me mad, fer I won't stop at nothin' if I git despernt, see?"

"Oh, yes, we see," they scoffed. "We'd be despernt too if we had some folks' dads!"

And off they ran, leaving Eddie Hinkley standing alone, white with rage. Could it be that he had the worst dad in the whole bunch? What had made him so tongue-tied, anyhow? He could boast with the best of them. Then, why hadn't he told them some big things about his own dad? Why hadn't he told them—and as he walked along the lonely road he racked his brain for some great thing his dad had done. But it began to dawn upon Eddie that there was nothing to boast of, not a thing unless he would lie, and Eddie never in the world would lie.

"I might a told 'em that my dad could lick the hardest," he half sobbed, as certain painful memories came to him.

"Blame it, anyhow, I s'pose they'll fight about their dads now for a week. They never get through when they start chewing over a subjeck," said Eddie to himself. "Now if it had just been: who's got the best ma—"

"Take your dinner bucket to the house and hurry right out here, double quick!" roared Alf Hinkley to his son as he spied him entering the yard. So Eddie hurried.

"Oh, ma, cookies! Gimme one quick. I got to hurry."

"Here, give mother a kiss, then run. It's the little calf. It's sick."

"Aw, shoot, that's too bad," said Eddie, hurrying out.

"Hurry up, there! Always stuffing your face," roared Hinkley. "Help me git this blamed calf out o' here. I'd like to punch its head off."

"Why, dad, are yuh mad at it 'cause it's sick? Why, dad, it can't help that."

"Shut up."

"What yuh gonna do with it, dad?"

"Kill it, I s'pose."

"Aw, dad!" and the sadness in his voice caused even Alf Hinkley to pause.

"Er give it to you, mebby."

"Dad! Honest? Mine to do with as I please, and mebby sell sometime? Oh, dad! Gimme this box stall and that's all I ast!"

Excitedly running towards the house he called: "Ma! Ma! Wha'd ya think? Dad gave me the calf. It's all mine, ma!"

"He gave it to you? But, Eddie, you musn't count so big on it. It's nearly dead."

"I know, but Ma, you got to help me and we'll git it alive again! Hurry quick and fix something to cure it."

So Ma Hinkley hurried and Eddie worked fiercely. He carried forkfuls of clean dry straw, hot bricks and old pieces of carpet and blankets and soon had his pet snug and warm, so that it was able to swallow the dose his mother brought.

"Oh, goody, goody; it swallowed it, ma. It swallowed it!" he shouted excitedly, and even Ma Hinkley was slightly excited.

After his mother had gone away, Eddie sat down in the straw and stroked his patient's fevered brow and talked to it incessantly, until called to supper. At midnight that night Eddie rose in fright, at the fearful clang of an alarm clock. What was it all about? Oh, now he remembered. He had set the alarm himself. Never, in all his life, had he left his bed and gone to the barn at midnight. Boo-oo, it was cold! What if he should just crawl down between the blankets again and—but no, it wasn't in Eddie to do such a thing when the calf needed him. Quickly he dressed, went to the kitchen, found the lantern, lifted the bottle of milk and medicine from the hot water reservoir of the kitchen stove and hurried to the barn, shivering at every step.

He passed into the stable and held his lantern so that its rays would fall directly across the still form of his beloved sick one. Dead? It certainly had not moved since he had left it at bedtime. Eddie's bosom heaved and big lumps came into his throat.

"O calfie, why did you go and die? You and I would a had so much fun together." And Eddie threw himself down upon the straw beside his pet. Then up jumped Eddie in amazement. His patient had moved—was even then trying to rise!

Breathlessly Eddie was hugging his pet and feeding it the milk, which it eagerly accepted. It was such a startling change from despair to joyous hope that Eddie was dazed. Now his patient had contentedly fallen back upon the straw and Eddie was again making it snug with carpet and blanket.

"O calfie, hurry and git well and we'll have better times than any calves ever had before," he cried excitedly.

"Ma! Ma! it's better!" and Eddie's whisper was almost a shout.

"Did you know I was out to the barn, ma?" he asked at the door of his mother's room.

"Yes, I heard you," she answered. "Don't wake your daddy, or he'll be awfully cross. Mother's awfully glad for you, honey. Quick, run to bed or you'll freeze!"

But now Eddie did not feel in the least like freezing. He was too joyous. Also he was very wide awake and it was such a good time to think, so Eddie lay down and thought and thought.

How wonderful it was to have a dad he could boast of to the other boys! Not one boy in that district had a dad that had given his son a calf. And, oh, goody, he would show those boys!

At length morning dawned and Eddie, after a prolonged session with his pet, was late to breakfast.

"Oh, dad, I could just love your head off!" cried Eddie rapturously as he threw impulsive arms about his father's neck, spilling a spoonful of coffee on its way from cup to mouth.

"Hi, here, look out what you're doin'! Set down here and behave."

From day to day Eddie's patient continued to improve and Eddie enjoyed the rare pleasure of having a dad far above all others in that district. No one dared, in these golden days, to hint that Eddie's dad was not perfect or to sneer about certain people squeezing pennies till the eagles hollered. Those things couldn't have been true of a man who would give his son a calf! For young hearts are trustful and ever willing to accord honor where it is at least half deserved.

DISTRICT MEETING OF ARKANSAS AND SOUTHEASTERN MISSOURI

These meetings were held in the Broadwater church, Mo., Nov. 12 and 13. On Wednesday the Sunday-school, Ministerial and Temperance Meetings were held. The topics on all these church activities were discussed with the usual degree of interest and earnestness. The good will, earnestness, social and brotherly spirit manifested were a great spiritual uplift to all present.

The interest in these meetings was deepened by the presence and helpful suggestions of Eld. Jas. M. Mohler, of the General Sunday School Board. His lecture on the "Forward Movement of the Church" was especially instructive and helpful. We are handicapped in our work, as a District, because of the lack of active workers, and any who may decide to cast their lot with us will receive a hearty welcome.

Thursday morning the District Meeting was organized by electing Bro. B. E. Kesler, Moderator; Sister Lulu M. Kesler, Reading Clerk, and Bro. W. L. Woodiel, Writing Clerk. The reports of the various boards and committees were read and approved, all of which showed the District to be wide-awake and spiritually alive to the various activities of church work. Two papers go to Annual Meeting. Bro. W. T. Price was elected a member of Standing Committee for 1920, with Bro. H. J. Lilly, alternate. The next District Meeting will be held in the Austin church, Ark.

The members and friends of the Broadwater church showed their usual hospitality in caring for the temporal needs of the meeting, and rendering such service as is e show, the housing of the child, and the home life the child. Many other phases of this most impor- nt subject might be looked at, for they all affect him a citizen of the State and of the Kingdom of God. Never until now did young men, and almost children, ke such a command in human affairs."

But I must confine my paper to three things which termine the value of the child to society: Heredity, vironment and education.

The child may be a menace to society if bad blood ows in his veins, and if he is placed in a vicious or rong environment, and if the educational system, ider which he is educated, does not take care of the oral and spiritual part of his nature. The propaga- on of the race depends upon the child. What shall e future physical condition of the race be? The cial ideals of the future depend upon the environ- ent of the child of today. The mentality of the ture depends on the child's education, or, to put it other words, the physical, the spiritual, and the edu- tional quality of the child today will determine the ture generations.

The ideals of Jesus Christ will be realized in the es of men only as they are planted in the life of the ild a generation ahead. Let there be a generation children fully indoctrinated in the ideals of Jesus rist in human brotherhood, in human rights, in man values, in social and economic righteousness, d it will end all war, all strikes, all profiteering, all ss legislation, all caste.

But we shall never realize these things in human ciety until the child is taught from God's Word that ar is a denial of the supremacy of the teaching of sus. Can we love our enemies and at the same time epare to kill them? War violates the principles of e worth of the individual; war substitutes unchris- an patriotism; for the Kingdom of God is greater an any country. War substitutes force for love, a t denial of the teaching of Christ.

Would we realize in the world real brother-love and bedience to the commands of God, reverence for the ble and for the Lord's Day, reverence for the Chris- an religion and service therein?

Would we see the coming of the Kingdom of God the lives of men throughout the world? Then in- ill their worth into the mind of the child, and in this neration you will see great results. Would you re- rm the evils of the world, commence with the child. was the teaching of the child, years ago, that rought our present prohibition victory and that rought human slavery to an end.

"Look into our childish faces;
See you not our willing hearts?
Only love us, only lead us;
Only let us know you need us
And we will do our parts."

If you go to the State reformatories and to the enitentiaries, and ask those who are there about their ildhood, their home environment, their religious ducation, you will find that ninety per cent of them me from homes in which the Word of God is not ved or taught. You will find also that they were not embers of any church or Sunday-school.

A prominent judge of New York City, before whom ousands of children came because of delinquency, id that not one of them was a member of a church Sunday-school.

A chaplain of the New York State penitentiary said: Of the three thousand men that I have had the care f in the last six years, not one of them was educated a denominational school."

What a wonderful record in the two incidents to the ory of religious education! Are we really interested our own generation? Do we provide for the gen- rations of the future? Are we really anxious that the leals of Jesus be realized in human society, that all the Sunday-school has only twenty-six hours per year for her great task of preparing and moulding the future generations.

My brother, my sister, the child is the first line of defense." He is the hope of the world."

Here is the task: There are, in the United States, twenty-five millions of children under twelve years of age, and twelve millions of these are without religious instruction of any kind. MILL CREEK, VIRGINIA

It was recently the good pleasure of the writer and wife to spend two weeks in the service of the Mill Creek church, Virginia. For several years the constant and pressing duties of college president have closed to us other fields of labor, except in our regular school territory. But the urgent invitation of our brother and colaborer, Eld. H. C. Early, was too strong to be resisted. The visit and service among these Virginia members has been a great blessing to us.

Mill Creek has had a very successful history. At present the membership numbers nearly six hundred. There are six houses of worship, with another preaching point at a schoolhouse near the foot of the Blue Ridge Mountains. Nearly every one in the community belongs to some denomination, but it is easily seen that no other denomination has the hold upon the community that the Church of the Brethren has. Never have we seen other people more friendly to the Brethren, or wish them success so much as is found here. This good will and high esteem is a high tribute to the Christian character and conduct of our brethren and sisters.

Mill Creek has a great history in the men and women who have represented her in the service of the church. Eld. Isaac Long, Sr., will not soon be forgotten for his work in this place and elsewhere. His grandson, Eld. Isaac S. Long, Jr., is now our beloved worker on the India field. We enjoyed a visit to the old Long homestead, where Brother and Sister Wm. H. Long, son of the senior, and father of the junior, Isaac Long, reside. Two other visits were of special interest—one to Sister Magdalene Showalter, mother of Sister I. S. Long, of India, the other to Sister Betty Miller, mother of Sister E. S. Wampler and Valley Miller, of China.

This church, for more than thirty years, has been the home of our much esteemed Brother and Sister H. C. Early. During much of this time Bro. Early has given large and efficient service to the General Brotherhood. And today his response to the many appeals for advice and counsel, from all parts of the Brotherhood take more of his time than even his friends realize. It was a great privilege to know more intimately him whom we have looked to as a father and leader in the church for more than a score of years.

The active work of this congregation is now falling upon younger men. Eld. Chas. Long has recently been chosen presiding elder. He is ably assisted by Brethren Early and Samuel Pence. A faithful body of deacons and a wide-awake membership make up a strong working body.

During our brief stay, our pleasure was much increased by seeing two return to the fold, and sixteen others born into the Kingdom. According to the present plans of the congregation, this is to be the last series of meetings in the old Mill Creek meetinghouse. A large new house is to be erected near the present one during the coming year. There is a great future for Mill Creek if the workers continue as faithful and as efficient as in the past.

BETHANY BIBLE SCHOOL

The forward constructive spirit of Christianity is uppermost in the activities of Bethany Bible School during the present autumn quarter. It is a distinct pleasure to minister to hearts that are interested in vital living, like the 260 students now registered in this institution. They come from more than twenty States of the Union and from Canada, but all are moved by the common purpose of ministry to the world in Christ's name.

Aside from the regular work in classes and practical activities, the students have been interested in organization among themselves for specific self-help. The outcome has been the forming of a Ministerial Association, two societies of a religious-literary character, and a Church History Club. The regular Student Conference meets once each month. The Student Volunteers have a program of weekly meetings and are planning considerable deputation work during the year. The school will be fully represented at the Student Volunteer Convention at Des Moines, Iowa, immediately after New Year.

Bro. W. W. Slabaugh delivered the opening address on "Fundamentals of Christian Character" and thus began a program of strong lectures. Among these were addresses by Dr. S. D. Gordon, of Boston, Prof. Norman E. Richardson, of Northwestern University, Rev. A. H. Leaman, of the Chicago Mennonite Church, Dr. Edgar J. Banks, the archæologist, and Dr. R. R. Biggor, of the Chicago Sunday School Association. Strong messages like these, coming from the lives of influential men, bring an inspiration to the aspiring student.

The holiday vacation will include Dec. 20-28. Beginning simultaneously with the winter quarter, Dec. 29, the regular Special Bible Term will be held for two weeks. Specially arranged courses are planned along lines of Interpretation, Pastoral Problems, Sunday-school Problems and Methods, Hymnology, and Music. Then there will be regular classes in Church Ordinances, Exegesis, Religious Education, Homiletics, Devotional Studies, Expression, and Music, which are open to special term students who choose to enter them.

Besides the study courses of the Special Term may be mentioned the unique opportunities afforded to visit City Missions and other points of interest. To know one big city is itself a liberal education.

All who contemplate coming for the Special Term from Dec. 29 to Jan. 9 will confer a favor by writing in advance to the office of the school. Suitable board and lodging will be provided at the usual reasonable prices. Strangers to Chicago should not forget to inform us regarding the day and hour of their arrival and the railway over which they are coming.

Friends and brethren everywhere are invited to pray for the progress of the Lord's work at Bethany.

J. Hugh Heckman.

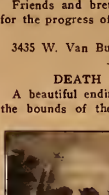
DEATH OF ELDER C. L. PFOUTZ

A beautiful ending of a beautiful life occurred within the bounds of the Marsh Creek congregation, Adams County, Pa., near Gettysburg, when Christian Lahman Pfoutz died Nov. 13, 1919, aged eighty-six years, two months and seventeen days. He died at the home of his son-in-law, Harry Weaver, with whom he had lived since the death of his wife nine years ago.* He leaves five daughters, seventeen grandchildren and eight great-grandchildren.



Eld. C. L. Pfoutz

As a Christian he was a pattern worthy to be imitated; as a counselor he was safe; as a neighbor he was much loved, and a character calculated to make a community better by living in it. He was a devoted member of the church, loyal to its principles, striving earnestly for the purity and development of that arm of the church which for many years was under his care and lay so near his heart. Eld. Pfoutz spent sixty-six years as a faithful member of the church; he was nine years a deacon, forty-seven years in the ministry, thirty-three years an elder of the church, during which time he made it a practice to visit every member of his church at least once a year.

Bro. Pfoutz was the fifth generation of Michael Pfoutz, who emigrated from Switzerland about 1709 and settled near Philadelphia. He was a son of John and Rachel Pfoutz, and was the last surviving member of a family of thirteen children.

Services in the old Pfoutz meetinghouse by the writer, assisted by Eld. Albert Hollinger and others.

York, Pa. J. A. Long.

*Bro. Pfoutz's wife was a sister of Bro. Jacob Hollinger, of York, Pa.

mons, which were listened to with much interest. The attendance was good. Sister Root was an inspiration to us in leading the song service. Three accepted Christ and were baptized. We met in council Nov. 19, preparatory to our love feast, which was held Nov. 23, with twenty-eight present. Bro. Root officiated. We feel that we have been built up in the faith by our brother and sister. We have our regular services the first and third Sundays of each month, morning and evening, at the church in the country, and the second and fourth Sunday night in town in the public library.—Mrs. O. P. Tranter, Shoals, Ind., Nov. 27.

Somerset.—Sunday, Nov. 23, Bro. Wm. J. Tinkle, of Bethany Bible School, gave us two talks—the one in the morning being on the work in Chicago, and in the evening on "Social Purity." We lifted our thank-offering which amounted to almost $10.—Ruby Tinkle, Marion, Ind., Dec. 1.

South Whitley.—Oct. 12 Bro. Lawrence Shultz, of North Manchester, and two young brethren gave us talks on Sunday-school work in the morning. In the evening they gave an illustrated lecture on the "Five-Year Forward Movement." Nov. 2 occurred our love feast, which was well attended by members from surrounding churches. The ministerial help was ample, and the services were very spiritual. Bro. Snell officiated. Nov. 30 Bro. Aaron Moss, of North Manchester, gave us two sermons which were appreciated very much. The same day we met in council. One letter was received and church and Sunday-school officers elected: Superintendent, Bro. Snyder; superintendent of Home Department, Sister Henry Neff; church clerk, Bro. Walter McConnell; Sunday-school committee, Bro. Army. We expect to hold a series of revival meetings in the near future.—Mrs. Henry Neff, South Whitley, Ind., Dec. 1.

Turkey Creek.—Bro. I. R. Beery, of Flora, Ind., began a series of meetings Oct. 6, and closed Nov. 9, preaching twenty-six sermons in all. Sister Alma Stump, of Walkerton, Ind., conducted the song service. Seventeen united with the church by baptism. The meeting was enjoyed by all and the attendance was good. Some nights our large house could not accommodate all the people.—Henry Wysong, Nappanee, Ind., Nov. 25.

Union City (First Church).—We have just concluded a two weeks' revival, conducted by Bro. W. C. Detrick, of Bryan, Ohio. He was assisted the last few evenings by Sister Detrick, who took charge of the song service. Twenty-two confessed Christ. Thanksgiving Day was indeed a red letter day for us. After hearing a great sermon, twelve were received into the church by baptism. The weather was ideal, the crowds large, and the interest was all that could be desired. We feel that this revival meant more to the town and community than can now be estimated.—Mrs. W. P. Noffsinger, Union City, Ind., Dec. 1.

White church held her quarterly members' meeting Dec. 3, with Eld. D. C. Campbell presiding. All the officers for church and Sunday-school were elected, with Bro. D. C. Campbell, elder. Just recently an aged father of eighty-five years was baptized.—Roy Coyner, Clarks Hill, Ind., Dec. 3.

Bloom.—We held our love feast Nov. 8. Owing to rainy weather the attendance was small, but we had a good spiritual meeting, with Bro. W. O. Beckner, of McPherson, Kans., officiating. Nov. 15 and 16 we enjoyed a series of lectures by Dr. D. W. Kurtz, of McPherson, Kans. On Sunday afternoon he also gave a lecture at the Methodist church at Minneola.—Mrs. Edith Keller, Minneola, Kans., Nov. 25.

Chanute.—We have just closed our revival meetings, conducted by Bro. J. B. Denney, of Independence, Kans., who began Nov. 1, and continued till Nov. 30, with increasing interest manifest throughout the entire series of meetings, and closing with the interest still at the best. We had twenty-six conversions and one reconsecration. Two came to us from the Methodists, and two from the Brethren (Progressive). Of the entire number, at this writing, eighteen have been baptized and three await the rite. Three are to unite with the United Brethren, and four are indefinite. On Thanksgiving Day we had an all-day meeting, dinner at the church and a general day of thanksgiving, praise, and consecration. Several gave themselves in any capacity the Lord's work may demand. In the evening we held our love feast. Several were not permitted to be with us, on account of the inclement weather, but twenty-seven were permitted to surround the Lord's table. The meetings have encouraged the work at Chanute far beyond the power of tongue to express, or of pen to write. Churches of Southeastern Kansas that are looking for a wide-awake evangelist, with the ability to present the doctrines with unusual power, and yet in an evangelistic way, should not fail to secure the services of Bro. J. B. Denney, of North Sixteenth Street, Independence, Kansas.—F. G. Edwards, 1002 S. Grant Avenue, Chanute, Kans., Dec. 1.

Independence.—Thanksgiving Day services were held at the church as usual. The meeting was in charge of Bro. Geo. W. Holmes, who gave a very spiritual talk on the subject of Thanksgiving, after which various members expressed their thankfulness for the many blessings they enjoy. A Thanksgiving prayer meeting was held at the church in the evening. Yesterday morning, following the usual Sunday-school session, we listened to one of the best sermons we ever heard, when Bro. Holmes delivered an able discourse on "Feet-washing." In the evening we had a very interesting subject for our Christian Workers' topic: "Dress Reform." Bro. Holmes' discourse was the leader, and many good thoughts were presented. A collection of $3.39 was taken for the Dress Reform Committee. Bro. Holmes followed with an able sermon.—Pella Carson, Independence, Kans., Dec. 2.

Kansas City (Armourdale Mission).—Our mission has just passed through a season of refreshing. On the evening of Nov. 17 Brother and Sister W. H. Miller, of Independence, Kans., began revival meetings, which continued until the evening of Nov. 30, when we were compelled to close because of the drastic fuel order. The interest throughout the meeting was good, and at times the house was well filled. On one evening all seats were taken and some were standing. On Sunday afternoon ten were baptized. In the evening we enjoyed a very pleasant love feast. A number of visitors from the Central Avenue church added to the enjoyment of the services of the evening. After the services, another came forward for baptism, making eleven in all added to our little band. Others are near the Kingdom, and for these we are praying. We were gratified to have with us, in one of our services, Eld. Geo. Manon and Bro. Enoch Derrick, members of our District Mission Board, who gave us words of encouragement. We are planning for appropriate exercises for our Sunday-school on Christmas Eve.—Chas. A. Miller, Kansas City, Kans., Dec. 1.

Moultor church met in council Nov. 12, with Eld. W. H. Yoder presiding. Officers were elected for the coming year: Elder, Bro. Sherly, pastor; Sunday-school superintendent, Bro. C. H. Dresher; Primary superintendent, Sister Sherly; president of Christian Workers' Band, Bro. E. E. Yoder; president of the Junior Band, Sister Alma Dresher. Our series of meetings began Nov. 19, held by Bro. Edgar Rothrock, who gave us very interesting and inspiring sermons. The attendance and interest were very good. The song service was led by Bro. Ikenberry, of McPherson College. He usu-

FALLEN ASLEEP

"Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord"

Bomberger, Sister Annie, nee Yordy, wife of Eld. Cyrus Bomberger, died Nov. 1, 1919, aged 71 years, 11 months and 2 days. She died at the home of her son, Bro. Yordy Bomberger, near Lebanon, Pa. She was for many years a faithful member of the Brethren church. Her husband preceded her eleven years ago. Two sons, four grandchildren and two great-grandchildren survive. Services at the South Annville house by Eld. Jacob Longenecker and Bro. A. B. Gingrich. Interment in the adjoining cemetery.—Fannie Kreider, Lebanon, Pa.

Brownback, Anna, died at the Brethren Home, Neffsville, Pa., Nov. 22, 1919, aged 77 years. Her husband, one son and three grandchildren survive. She was a member of the Geiger Memorial church and a constant worker, her husband being a deacon. She came to the Home Sept. 15. Services by J. C. Herrick and J. Conners. Burial at Bethel, Chester County.—Mrs. A. H. Hoffer, Neffsville, Pa.

Cocklin, Miriam Elizabeth, daughter of Brother and Sister Robert and Martha Cocklin, died at their home, 427 West Main Street, Mechanicsburg, Pa., on Friday, Nov. 28, 1919, aged 3 months and 10 days. She was ill but a few days, and death came rather unexpectedly. Services at the Mechanicsburg church on Sunday afternoon, by Bro. W. K. Conner, assisted by Bro. Jacob A. Miller. Text, James 4: 14. Interment in the Mechanicsburg cemetery.—J. W. Galley, Mechanicsburg, Pa.

Elcholtz, Levi, died Nov. 12, 1919, aged 79 years, 11 months and 8 days. He was a member of the Church of the Brethren for years and lived in the bounds of the Lower Cumberland congregation, near Dillsburg, till about one year ago. About three years ago he had an attack of paralysis, and the second stroke, four weeks ago, was the cause of his death. He leaves his wife, one daughter, four grandchildren and several brothers. Services from the home of the daughter, near White Hill, Pa., by the writer, assisted by S. S. Sheffer. Burial in the Dillsburg cemetery.—O. W. Cook, Dillsburg, Pa.

Goodman, Samuel, son of John H. and Sophia Goodman, born in Clarion County, Pa., died Nov. 28, 1919, aged 60 years and 4 months. While a young man, he united with the Church of the Brethren and lived a faithful life. In 1882 he married Alice Denny. To this union were born seven children. He leaves his wife, six children and thirteen grandchildren. Services in the church at Mulberry Grove by the writer.—Henry Lilligh, Mulberry Grove, Ill.

King, Helen B., infant daughter of Earl and Minta King, born near Elmdale, Mich., July 17, 1919, died of cholera infantum Nov. 8, 1919. Services at the Mennonite church by Eld. C. H. Deardorff. Interment in the cemetery near by.—Emma Weaver, Alto, Mich.

Mellon, Mabel Laura, wife of Homer Mellon, died Nov. 6, 1919, aged 37 years, 8 months and 16 days. She leaves her husband and seven children. She united with the Brethren church when a young girl and lived a consistent Christian life. Services at the Old Pine church by Bro. A. S. Arnold. Interment in the cemetery near by.—Bessie M. Newbrough, Old Fields, W. Va.

Murrey, Sister Hannah, died at the City Hotel, Winchester, Va., Nov. 13, 1919, aged 77 years. Services by Bro. Cephas Palmestock. Interment in the Mt. Hebron cemetery.—Mitylene Dettra, Stephens City, Va.

Smith, Elmer, died at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Christian Smith, Oct. 10, 1919, aged 20 years, 1 month and 4 days. During his last illness he confessed Christ, desiring to be baptized Oct. 11, but death called him the day before. Services at the Gingrich church (Mennonite) by Eld. A. B. Gingrich and Bro. S. G. Bucher. Interment in the adjoining cemetery.—Fannie Kreider, Lebanon, Pa.

Thomas, Sister Edna Catharine, born July 22, 1892, near Williamstown, Hancock County, Ohio. She united with the Church of the Brethren in 1906. During the past few years she spent much of her time at Manchester College. She had not been well for a number of years, but was able to move about, to a certain extent, until last March, when she became seriously ill and was confined to her bed. The latter part of June it seemed that the Master would call her, and the doctor could not give much hope, but she asked for the anointing, and after the service grew rapidly better. It would be impossible to describe the wonderful change in her life and the great trust which she had in the Lord. In August she was much better and sufficiently, perhaps, that it was his will to heal her. Such was not the case however. In October she contracted a cold, and after a few days' illness passed away Oct. 24.—J. L. Thomas, North Manchester, Ind.

Tritt, Sister, wife of Joshua Tritt, died at her home near Huntsdale, Pa., Nov. 14, 1919, aged 67 years. She was a faithful member of the church and will be greatly missed. Services at Shippensburg by Eld. S. M. Stouffer, assisted by Rev. J. Glenn and W. I. Sheaffer. Interment in Spoonsburg cemetery.—A. A. Evans, Carlisle, Pa.

Walter, Sister Emily Katherine, died Nov. 23, 1919, aged 19 years, 8 months and 4 days. She leaves her father and mother, three brothers and two sisters. About five years ago she found Christ as her Savior, who gave her much comfort through her illness of ten weeks. Services by Bro. G. E. Yoder. Interment in the cemetery near by.—Margaret Replogle, New Enterprise, Pa.

Wilkinson, Bro. John D., born in York County, Pa., died in the bounds of the Kaskaskia church, Ill., Nov. 20, 1919, aged 82 years, 4 months and 12 days. He married Mary Snyder in 1839 and united with the Church of the Brethren in 1874. His wife, four sons and four with the Church of the Brethren in 1874. His wife, four sons and four daughters survive. Services by the writer. Burial in the cemetery near the church.—D. T. Wagner, Beecher City, Ill.

THE HOME FIELD

In reading the reports of the brethren and sisters in the foreign mission field, our hearts are made sad to note that much work is needed in places that for the present can not be reached. We often overlook the work needed at home, and thereby souls are lost that perhaps might be saved. Only those of us, living in isolated places, can tell of the need and the lost opportunity.

Having left our Alabama home in 1913, on account of our health, our church work has been in new places in Eastern Virginia. One year ago, under the urgent request of Bro. B. F. Glick, of Trevilian, we moved to this place, where there are but few members, but a good, commodious house for worship. Land can be bought at reasonable prices, which fact may help more of our members to locate here.

The work here has been started, but for some reason the outlying points were dropped. A year ago Bro. J. F. Britton, of Bristow, Va., went to one of these places and baptized several. Last August the writer was called to an outlying point to hold a series of meetings. Eight came out, six of whom were baptized. A request was also made that the writer hold a series of meetings at Frederick Hall, six miles from where the other meeting was held. The matter was brought before the District Mission Board and Sister Alice Miller, of Belmont, Va., went there Nov. 3 and worked with them until Nov. 9, when we began our meetings. All were encouraged and spiritually strengthened by Sister Miller being with them, and one was baptized.

Nov. 22 the writer held a love feast at the home of Bro. G. N. Shaffer and wife, with thirteen taking part in the service.

A wealthy merchant near there has offered a lot free, on an improved road, if our people will build a church-house on it, and hold services, but the brethren are not financially able. There are other places in the United States where churches could be built, but neither our General Mission Board nor our District Mission Boards seem to have the means to push the work aggressively. Many of us have done more than we are able to do, financially, but the call comes so strong that we can not help but go. Many times we wish for even a good second-hand Ford, so that we could go and come quickly and take the Gospel to those we can not reach otherwise. We hope and pray that brethren, blessed financially, will awaken to the great need of the home field.

FALLEN ASLEEP

"Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord"

Bomberger, Sister Annie, nee Yordy, wife of Eld. Cyrus Bomberger, died Nov. 4, 1919, aged 71 years, 11 months and 2 days. She died at the home of her son, Bro. Yordy Bomberger, near Lebanon, Pa. She was for many years a faithful member of the Brethren church. Her husband preceded her eleven years ago. Two sons, four grandchildren and two great-grandchildren survive. Services at the South Annville house by Eld. Jacob Longenecker and Bro. A. B. Gingrich. Interment in the adjoining cemetery.—Fannie Kreider, Lebanon, Pa.

Brownback, Anna, died at the Brethren Home, Nefflsville, Pa., Nov. 22, 1919, aged 77 years. Her husband, one son and three grandchildren survive. She was a member of the Geiger Memorial church and a constant worker, her husband being a deacon. She came to the Home Sept. 15. Services by J. C. Hetrick and J. Conners. Burial at Bethel, Chester County.—Mrs. A. H. Hoffer, Nefflsville, Pa.

Cocklin, Miriam Elizabeth, daughter of Brother and Sister Robert and Martha Cocklin, died at their home, 427 West Main Street, Mechanicsburg, Pa., on Friday, Nov. 28, 1919, aged 3 months and 10 days. She was ill but a few days, and death came rather unexpectedly. Services at the Mechanicsburg church on Sunday afternoon, by Bro. W. K. Conner, assisted by Bro. Jacob A. Miller. Text, James 4: 14. Interment in the Mechanicsburg cemetery.—J. W. Galley, Mechanicsburg, Pa.

Eichelin, Levi, died Nov. 12, 1919, aged 79 years, 11 months and 8 days. He was a member of the Church of the Brethren for years and lived in the bounds of the Lower Cowcago congregation, near Dillsburg, till about one year ago. About three years ago he had an attack of paralysis, and the second stroke, four weeks ago, was the cause of his death. He leaves his wife, one daughter, four grandchildren and several brothers. Services from the home of the daughter, near White Hill, Pa., by the writer, assisted by S. S. Sheffer. Burial in the Dillsburg cemetery.—O. W. Cook, Dillsburg, Pa.

Goodman, Samuel, son of John H. and Sophia Goodman, born in Clarion County, Pa., died Nov. 25, 1919, aged 60 years and 1 months. While a young man, he united with the Church of the Brethren and lived a faithful life. In 1882 he married Alice Denny. To this union were born seven children. He leaves his wife, six children and thirteen grandchildren. Services in the church at Mulberry Grove by the writer.—Henry Lilligh, Mulberry, Pa.

King, Helen B., infant daughter of Earl and Minta King, born near Elmdale, Mich., July 17, 1919, died of cholera infantum Nov. 8, 1919. Services at the Mennonite church by Eld. C. H. Bearshuff. Interment in the cemetery near by.—Emma Weaver, Alto, Mich.

Mellon, Mabel Laura, wife of Homer Mellon, died Nov. 6, 1919, aged 37 years, 8 months and 16 days. She leaves her husband and seven children. She united with the Brethren church when a young girl and lived a consistent Christian life. Services at the Old Pine church by Bro. A. S. Arnold. Interment in the cemetery near by.—Bessie M. Newbrough, Old Fields, W. Va.

Murrey, Sister Hannah, died at the City Hotel, Winchester, Va., Nov. 13, 1919, aged 77 years. Services by Bro. Cephas Fahnestock. Interment in the Mt. Hebron cemetery.—Mityleus Dettra, Stephens City, Va.

Smith, Elmer, died at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Christian Smith, Oct. 10, 1919, aged 30 years, 1 month and 4 days. During his last illness he confessed Christ, desiring to be baptized Oct. 11, but death called him the day before. Services at the Gingrich church but death called him the day before. Services at the Gingrich church but death called him the day before. Services at the Gingrich church (Mennonite) by Eld. A. B. Gingrich and Bro. S. G. Bucher. Interment in the adjoining cemetery.—Fannie Kreider, Lebanon, Pa.

Thomas, Sister Edna Catharine, born July 22, 1892, near Williamstown, Hancock County, Ohio. She united with the Church of the Brethren in 1906. During the past few years she spent much of her time at Manchester College. She had not been well for a number of years, but was able to work about, to a certain extent, until last March, when she became seriously ill and was confined to her bed. The latter part of June it seemed that the Master would call her, and the doctor could not give much hope, but she asked for the anointing, and after the service grew rapidly better. It would be impossible to describe the wonderful change in her life and the great trust which she had in the Lord. In August she was much better and we thought, perhaps, it was his will to heal her. Such was not the case however. In October she contracted a cold, and after a few days' illness passed away Oct. 24.—J. L. Thomas, North Manchester, Ind.

Tritt, Sister, wife of Joshua Tritt, died at her home near Huntsdale, Pa., Nov. 14, 1919, aged 67 years. She was a faithful member of the church and will be greatly missed. Services at Shippensburg by Eld. S. M. Stouffer, assisted by Rev. J. J. Glenn and W. J. Sheaffer. Interment in Shippensburg cemetery.—A. A. Evans, Carlisle, Pa.

When Temptation Is a Blessing

"WATCH and pray, that ye enter not into temptation." And yet, "Count it all joy, my brethren, when ye fall into manifold temptations."

Time-tested Christians do not seek temptation. They avoid it. They know too well the weakness of the flesh. But when they fall into it, they are not afraid. They know Who is watching, and that he is able to deliver. They rejoice in a new door to soul strength.

They do not wish to drive as near the edge of the cliff as possible. They do not court dangers. But they accept them gladly and boldly, when they meet them in the path of duty.

Temptation is a bad thing to "enter into" presumptuously, as you do when you expose yourself to its hazards merely to show your strength. It is a good thing to "fall into" spiritually forearmed, as you are when engaged in some service of love for the Kingdom of God.

Peter's Keys and Yours

THE error of the Roman church, with reference to Peter and the Kingdom keys, lies in the groundless assumption that a special privilege was bestowed upon Peter which was withheld from others. But Peter was not the only one to whom Jesus gave such keys. If you see what is involved in Matt. 18: 18, 19 and John 20: 22, 23, you will see that what Jesus said to Peter he said, in substance, to the other disciples.

And, by implication, to every true disciple in every age. Whoever has made, in sincerity and truth, such a confession as Peter made has received a bunch of those same keys. And the same right to tell people how they may be freed from sin. And the same responsibility for doing it.

This is not to say that an individual free-lance method of world evangelization, without system, without organization, is the proper thing. By no means. It is our duty to work in the most effective way. And that means leaders definitely chosen for definite tasks. But that doesn't take away the keys which Jesus has given you.

The vital question is: What are you doing with your keys? Are you carrying them in your pocket? Have you lost them?

The Better Way of Celebrating Christmas

THE most common way is that which makes it simply a day "off"—a day of diversion from the usual routine. This, in addition to the customary exchange of gifts. But MESSENGER readers have learned to see more than this in Christmas. They give some thought to the meaning of the day. Some of them may refer to it in the family prayers. And some may attend a public service, on Christmas or the nearest Sunday, in which special recognition is given to the day.

But are these things enough? Are they enough for such a Christmas time as this—a Christmas in such a world as this is now?

How to Keep Christmas

There is a better thing than the observance of Christmas Day—and that is, keeping Christmas.

Are you willing to forget what you have done for other people, and to remember what other people have done for you?

Are you willing to stoop down and consider the needs and the desires of little children; to remember the weakness and loneliness of people who are growing old; to stop asking how much your friends love you, and ask yourself whether you love them enough; to try to understand what those who live in the same house with you really want, without waiting for them to tell you; to trim your lamp so that it will give more light and less smoke, and to carry it in front, so that your shadow will fall behind you; to make a grave for your ugly thoughts and a garden for your kindly feelings, with the gate open—are you willing to do these things even for a day? Then you can keep Christmas.

Are you willing to believe that love is the strongest thing in the world—stronger than hate, stronger than evil, stronger than death—and that the blessed Life which began in Bethlehem nineteen hundred years ago is the image and brightness of the Eternal Love? Then you can keep Christmas.

And if you can keep it for a day, why not always?

But you can never keep it alone.

—Henry van Dyke.

There must be thought before there can be action, at least intelligent action. And since right action is so badly needed, there ought to be some thinking done this Christmas. But shouldn't it be deeper thinking, more serious thinking, more purposeful thinking, than we ever thought before? Shouldn't it be the kind that issues in a positive program, the kind that gets things done, the kind that does not evaporate in pious platitudes?

How are we going to honor Christ acceptably this Christmas unless we yield ourselves to him in a measure corresponding to the demands of this most wonderful hour in human history? Unless his spirit takes possession of us—actually takes possession of us—sufficiently to change things?

There are many, many things which need changing in this world. And they could be changed and would be changed if the spirit of the Christ of Christmas were put into them. They could and would be changed if all those who profess to have that spirit, or half of such or less, really had something more than a little taste of it. And they will be changed whenever that takes place. That is why we ought to think the matter through this Christmas and begin now to change them.

But, not to try to think of everything at once, let us mention three lines of endeavor—three so central and comprehensive that when we get them righted we shall not have much trouble with the rest.

One of these concerns the present crisis in our industrial relations. Nothing has been pressed upon our attention of late more forcibly than this. And nothing is plainer than that the remedy is a simple application of the principles of Jesus. The golden rule, the spirit of Christian brotherliness, is what is needed in our economic life. We shall not argue here whether labor or capital is most at fault. It may turn out that the third interested party, which is vaguely called the public, and of which you and I are members, is as much to blame as anybody.

I do not intend to discuss this point at any length. I am writing about celebrating Christmas. I should like to know whether you are going to do it by singing praises to the Babe of Bethlehem and then dismissing the problem of all these social disturbances as no affair of yours. Are you going to say, as you scan the newspaper headlines Christmas morning, "Yes, it's too bad, but it isn't my fault, and there's nothing I can do about it"? Ah, my brother, there's the disconcerting question. If you and I only had a right to be sure that it isn't our fault! And as for there being nothing we can do about it—shame on such a thought at Christmas time! More as to this a little farther down.

A second place where the same remedy of Christian brotherliness is needed is in the field of international relations. What may be the status of the projected League of Nations or of America's relation to it, by the time these words are read, is quite uncertain at this writing. But whether the treaty and covenant have been ratified or not, and whether the United States intervenes in Mexico or not, the essential need of the situation will be the same. And that is Christian education—inspiring the leadership of the nations of the world with confidence in Christian principles.

The time is ripe, yes, "rotten ripe," for the abolition of the awful plague of war, if not from the face of the whole earth, at least from the "civilized" portions of it. The practical difficulties are many and great, but there is only one that is really serious. That is the psychological one. As long as people, especially national leaders, think that war is unavoidable, it will be. It will be supplanted by rational methods of settling international differences as soon as a sufficient number of people think so. This is why I am so desperately in earnest about getting them to think so. And why I want you all to help.

The third big thing, and the most important of all, which needs attention at this Christmas time is the problem of world evangelization. And the solution here, as in the case of the other two, is simply a fuller measure of the true Christmas spirit. I know there is already much interest, a new interest, in this matter and I praise God for it and for all that has been accomplished in the past. But we have not grasped the full meaning of the task. We do not yet comprehend what is involved in making a thorough job of the Great Commission. And would any true disciple of him, who was born on the first Christmas, pretend that love could be satisfied with less than a thorough job? Shall such a work as this be done by half?

It goes without saying, or ought to, that the Gospel must be carried to "every creature." But many of us seem willing to interpret this in a very easy way. We talk and act as if it meant nothing more than that "every creature" should have a hurried chance to say yes or no. We seem to be thinking of unloading responsibility rather than of making disciples. Such a superficial and loveless program is unworthy the name of Christian evangelism. That is make-believe evangelism. The evangelism of the New Testament is built upon love. And love does not ask how soon it can quit. It stays on the job until every resource has been exhausted.

When Temptation Is a Blessing

"Watch and pray, that ye enter not into temptation." And yet, "Count it all joy, my brethren, when ye fall into manifold temptations."

Time-tested Christians do not seek temptation. They avoid it. They know too well the weakness of the flesh. But when they fall into it, they are not afraid. They know Who is watching, and that he is able to deliver. They rejoice in a new door to soul strength.

They do not wish to drive as near the edge of the cliff as possible. They do not court dangers. But they accept them gladly and boldly, when they meet them in the path of duty.

Temptation is a bad thing to "enter into" presumptuously, as you do when you expose yourself to its hazards merely to show your strength. It is a good thing to "fall into" spiritually forearmed, as you are when engaged in some service of love for the Kingdom of God.

Peter's Keys and Yours

The error of the Roman church, with reference to Peter and the Kingdom keys, lies in the groundless assumption that a special privilege was bestowed upon Peter which was withheld from others. But Peter was not the only one to whom Jesus gave such keys. If you see what is involved in Matt. 18: 18, 19 and John 20: 22, 23, you will see that what Jesus said to Peter he said, in substance, to the other disciples.

And, by implication, to every true disciple in every age. Whoever has made, in sincerity and truth, such a confession as Peter made has received a bunch of those same keys. And the same right to tell people how they may be freed from sin. And the same responsibility for doing it.

This is not to say that an individual free-lance method of world evangelization, without system, with-

How to Keep Christmas

There is a better thing than the observance of Christmas Day—and that is, keeping Christmas.

Are you willing to forget what you have done for other people, and to remember what other people have done for you?

Are you willing to stoop down and consider the needs and the desires of little children; to remember the weakness and loneliness of people who are growing old; to stop asking how much your friends love you, and ask yourself whether you love them enough; to try to understand what those who live in the same house with you really want, without waiting for them to tell you; to trim your lamp so that it will give more light and less smoke, and to carry it in front, so that your shadow will fall behind you; to make a grave for your ugly thoughts and a garden for your kindly feelings, with the gate open—are you willing to do these things even for a day? Then you can keep Christmas.

Are you willing to believe that love is the strongest thing in the world—stronger than hate, stronger than evil, stronger than death—and that the blessed Life which began in Bethlehem nineteen hundred years ago is the image and brightness of the Eternal Love? Then you can keep Christmas.

And if you can keep it for a day, why not always?

The evangelization of the world will not be completed until everything has been done that can possibly be done to "make disciples of all the nations." To accomplish this, the work must be put upon the broadest possible basis. Age-long superstitions and prejudices must be overcome. Entirely new conceptions of the meaning of human existence must be established, in many cases. This is no mere diversion for a summer afternoon. It is a program that will require time and toil and faith and love in such quantities as only the grace of God can supply. It means not only Christian churches and Christian hospitals and Christian schools, but Christian institutions of every kind. It means everything that pertains to a healthy Christian civilization.

But I must not follow this thought farther now. I am only telling you how I want you to celebrate this Christmas. I want you, by hard thinking and earnest prayer, to make the most serious effort of your life to discover your own personal relation to these problems. I want you to honor the Christ of the Bethlehem manger by filling up and running over with his spirit.

But what can you do about all this, you ask? You didn't bring on the coal strike, did you? And you can't smooth out the troubled labor situation, can you? Nor establish international peace? Nor evangelize the world, especially in such a thorough-going manner as I have suggested? Well, it does look like there isn't much use to bother with these things. Perhaps you might as well forget them and eat your Christmas dinner. But before you eat it, you could do this: You could make sure that nobody in your own neighborhood is suffering because of your neglect. That would put a little of the Christmas spirit into your dinner, wouldn't it? And make it taste better? But wait. Isn't there something else to think about before you eat?

Suppose you were to take a walk on Christmas morning, and, quite unexpectedly, should come upon some person in dire distress and beyond your power to relieve. What would you do? Suppose you were to hear a faint voice calling out for help, and should find upon investigation that it proceeded from a man fallen into a deep pit (the same man we had in the pit some weeks ago will do). Suppose further that you had no resources of your own that would enable you to get him out. Would you, after a few sighs of sympathy and regret, go on your way, forget the man, return home and enjoy your dinner? No. You would make it your business to summon and organize a force sufficient to relieve the helpless man. You would do this if it took all day, all night, and then some, and if you had to scour the whole country to get men enough. If necessary, you would call on the governor of your State for help. In short, you would not think of leaving that man to perish and excusing yourself from responsibility until you had done your utmost to persuade others to come to the rescue in sufficient numbers to effect it.

Very true, you can not right these great world wrongs yourself. But would you not like to see them righted? Or don't you care if social injustice and misery prevail and nations continue to kill each other and millions grope on in spiritual blindness? Isn't that the crux of the matter? If you and I had a living interest in these things, we would find that there is something we can do about them. But the truth is we have had mighty little concern about the misery and injustice and sin in the world around us. Any slight mutterings of our consciences we have quickly stilled with some such comforting reflection as: "Oh, it's to be this way, and we can't help it anyhow, and there is no use crying over it." Let us not indulge such loveless, Christless selfishness again. But if you must, a few more times, hurry up and have done with it by Christmas. Don't dare to think such things on Christ's birthday.

Can't do anything about it? You can do just what you would do in the case of the helpless man. You can begin at once to enlist the interest and help of others. And if you are in earnest about it, you will not stop until you have aroused and organized a force sufficient to accomplish something. At the very least, you will know you have done what you could. And unless you sincerely resolve to do that, I should think your Christmas dinner would taste like wormwood. I can not imagine how you would dare to mention the name of Christ in asking a blessing on it.

Our real problem is one of awakening a genuine concern. The rest will follow easily. Does a mother have any trouble in estimating her responsibility? Love settles that. Not the Christian's business—all this? Away forever with that insidious suggestion! Everything that pertains to human happiness is the Christian's business. Love is the Christian's supreme business.

Can't do anything about it? There is latent strength enough in the Christian forces of the world to straighten out the tangled industrial situation, to make a peace between the nations that will last, and to evangelize the world. It only needs to be aroused, organized and set to work. You can help to do this. Will you? Will you celebrate this Christmas by deciding, once for all, that from now on you will bear your part in this great enterprise as becomes one who has found salvation through the Christ of Bethlehem?

The MESSENGER is wishing you a very joyful Christmas.

The Savior Born

BY B. F. M. SOURS

While the "shepherds watched their flocks by night"
Beneath the chilly stars,
When the day had laid her down to rest
And eve had set the bars,
When the night of gloom was settled still
By far off Bethlehem—
Have you heard the shepherds' story told—
What angels said to them?

They were men, were men, these shepherds were,
And in this mortal life
They had felt what all their fellow-men
Have felt of sin and strife—
Of strife of heart and conscience, deep
As life and hope and death;
Life and struggle were their daily meed,
As sure as daily breath.

They had known the Hope of Israel, long;
The tribes—their remnants—told
Of return of ancient regency
With its mystic reign of gold;
But the King—why came he not? O why?
Their hearts were sore oppressed
With the struggles for a livelihood—
O for his reign of rest!

As they watched their sleeping flocks that night—
That night of long ago—
There were angels who came and burst the gloom
And made the darkness glow
With a glory-light, a glow more bright
Than the joys of earth before,
For the King had come, and they came to tell
That the King was at the door.

He is standing now at your threshold, man!
Why say you not: "Come in"?
He would fill your soul with eternal peace
And the triumph over sin.
He is reigning over land and sea—
O it was earth's best morn,
When the angels broke the gloom of night
With the news that Christ was born!

Application of the Dress Decision

BY H. C. EARLY

THOSE who framed the decision state that they had carefully investigated the teachings of the Scriptures, the Church Fathers and the Annual Conference on the subject of Christian attire, and gave these teachings as the foundation of the decision.

Then a most interesting statement follows. It is an introduction to the decision. It reads as follows: "Now, since the Gospel teaches plain and modest dress and since this is taught in the form of an obligation, without rules and methods of application further than to exclude plaiting of hair, the wearing of gold, pearls and costly raiment, and believing that a form that agrees with the spirit of the teaching is helpful in maintaining the principles of plainness and simplicity in dress and adornment in the general church body, 'it seemed good to us' to submit the following restatement." Then the decision follows.

But take a look at the statement. It embraces three points which, I should say, are vital in the consideration of the subject. First, the Gospel teaches only the principle of plainness, without giving a form for its application; second, the form, if one is adopted, must agree with the spirit of the teaching of the Gospel; and, third, the belief is expressed that such a form is helpful in maintaining the principle in the church body. And this statement, adopted by Conference as a part of the decision, is its background and strength.

After plainly stating that the Gospel teaches no form of dress, except to forbid the vanities just named, the belief is expressed that a form, in harmony with the principle of Gospel plainness, is helpful in maintaining the principle in practice. This is the only argument, or reason, given in support of a form of dress, after an exhaustive study of the subject in the light of the Scriptures, the Church Fathers and the Annual Conference. And it is the only argument I know. At most, the form is an expedient, arrived at by Conference, as a means to the end of holding the principle. It is absolutely essential that this fact be borne in mind. And the value of the form, or to what extent it has actually succeeded in accomplishing its purpose, must be determined in the light of results.

The decision is plain. There is no room for misunderstanding. The decision proper is stated in the first five sections. The sixth, seventh, eighth, ninth and tenth sections relate to its application. The eleventh section states that upon the adoption of the report, or decision, it takes the place of all former decisions in the Minutes on dress. Look it over. Study it carefully.

The seventh section relates to delegates to District and Annual Conference, also to those appointed on committees to enforce discipline. The sixth, eighth and tenth sections relate to teaching. They impose the duty to teach faithfully and intelligently the principles of the simple, Christian life. They set up teaching as the ground of conviction, and intelligent conviction as the ground of practice. And it must be clear to all that conformity to the decision, without intelligent conviction, is of no moral value to the individual. All service of whatever kind, in the name of Christianity, demands intelligent, moral conviction in its background. Jesus says: "Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you," and bases obedience thereto upon individual conviction. These sections, therefore, make a tremendous appeal to the bishops, ministers, evangelists, teachers, etc., for faithful, intelligent teaching. Here great responsibility rests. I am not able to give it due weight.

The ninth section, which has given rise to some misunderstanding, recognizes a class of members who do not honestly see their way to conform to the "order." They are such as "manifest no inclination to follow the unbecoming fashions, and whose life and conduct are becoming a follower of Christ." That is to say, they are faithful, honest Christians, and plain and modest in dress, but they do not see the need of a special form of dress. They are honest and true to their convictions.

What shall be done in such cases? The decision provides that they "be dealt with in love and forbearance; and that every effort be made to save all to the church until they see the beauty of making a larger sacrifice for Christ and the church." In other words, it means that the teaching process shall continue. Then, if, after every effort has been made to teach and win, without avail, they change their attitude from the teachable spirit to "the arbitrary spirit, and follow the foolish fashions of the world, they shall be dealt with as disorderly members." That is to say, so long as one is teachable and seeking light, he is not and can not be considered the subject for discipline. There are three conditions named as the ground of discipline. First, the refusal to conform; second, with an arbitrary spirit; third, and following the foolish fashions of the world. These three; not one of them. They are joined by "and," not "or." So that when there is an individual who resists all teaching and effort to win, refusing with an arbitrary spirit, and follows the foolish fashions of the world, he makes himself the subject of discipline.

I believe the number of such members is very small. Yet if there are such, they ought to be dealt with, for they are utterly out of harmony with the spirit of a disciple, no matter what their rebellious attitude is based upon. But the churches should make certain that they have such members and that they have done their full duty toward them before discipline is administered. The decision makes it the duty of the church to go to the limit, to forbear to the limit, to suffer to the limit to save; absolutely so. And when the church fails in this, she is disloyal to the decision; as much so, and more, no doubt, than the arbitrary individual. And in the administration of discipline, the issue is so grave and responsibility so great, that "both the salvation of souls and the purity of the church should be kept in view." A balance must be struck between the saving of souls and the purity of the church, so that both are maintained to the utmost possible limit. And both must be dealt with as the weightiest things in the world, not as trivial matters.

A few churches, after an effort or two with those not in the "order," have fixed a limit in time, so that, if they pass the limit without conforming, they automatically lose their membership. This is out of harmony with the decision. The decision requires teaching and forbearance to the limit, and no one can anticipate the time when the limit will be reached. It can be known only when it is reached, not before. It must be worked out in an earnest, anxious effort to teach and to save. The method is also utterly out of harmony with the spirit of the relation of the church to the individual members thereof. The church is said to be our spiritual mother, figuratively. No mother would see her child die, under sentence of death previously pronounced, without laboring and striving and suffering to the last minute to save the child. And if the child must suffer the extreme penalty of law, the mother suffers more than the child. If there could be more of this spirit and suffering on the part of the church, there would be, I think, less rebellion against church rule, and less occasion for discipline. The Lord baptize us afresh with the spirit of the parable of the lost sheep.

The Dynamics of the Forward Movement

BY WM. KINSEY

BACK of every movement there is an impelling force. Every springtime nature takes a forward movement. And as a result every year adds to the growth or maturity of the trees, and the withered grasses and leaves, in autumn, add humus to the soil. But back of nature's advancement are the warmth of the sun and the timely spring showers. Back of these is the Spirit of God. "Thou sendest forth thy Spirit, they are created: and thou renewest the face of the earth" (Psa. 104:30). Thus back of nature's forward movement is the great dynamic of the Spirit of God, or the Holy Spirit.

Back of the watch or the clock movement there is an impelling force, viz., the pull of the mainspring, or the weights of the clock. Back of the automobile there is an impelling force. The word "automobile" means "self-propelling." But the automobile would never move, on the macadam road, if it were not for the dynamic back of it. Back of the engine is the gasolene, but this is insufficient. Back of the gasolene is the spark. There must be the fire, and this fire is the real, scientific force.

Back of the Forward Movement of the church there must be an impelling force, viz., the fire from heaven—the Holy Spirit. The Holy Spirit is a force or power. "Ye shall receive power, when the Holy Spirit is come upon you" (Acts 1:8). The original Greek word for "power," in this text, is Dunamis. And from this come our English words: Dynamite, dynamo, dynamics, etc. Our knowledge of dynamite is somewhat limited, but we have read, at least, that it moves things. What a wonderful text this is, when once we know the force of that word! The great dynamic back of the Forward Movement must be the baptism of fire from heaven, if the church is to move forward. The Holy Spirit moves things. A spirited horse usually moves. The Holy Spirit empowers for work. "Not by might, nor by power [temporal forces], but by my Spirit, saith Jehovah of hosts" (Zech. 4:6). He is the Real Power.

There is still another dynamic which must be back of the Forward Movement that the church may move forward, viz., PRAYER. There is power in prayer. "More things are wrought by prayer than this world dreams of," said the poet Tennyson, and he spoke truly. William James, the great psychologist, in "Varieties of Religious Experience," speaks of prayer as follows: "Prayer or inner communion with the spirit thereof—be that spirit 'God' or 'law'—is a process wherein work is really done, and spiritual energy flows in and produces effects, psychological or material, within the phenomenal world." Prayer must be back of this Five-Year Movement to make it go. And the Holy Spirit—the dynamic formerly referred to—comes in answer to prayer. We think the first thing to do is to pray. We must ask God for money, we must ask God for converts, we must ask him for ministers, etc. Dr. John R. Mott says: "The source of power for any spiritual movement is God, and the energies of God are released in answer to prayer." The general goal says: "Three hundred aggressive, spiritual young men called to the ministry annually." Is this ministerial timber in sight? If not, "Pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he send forth laborers into his harvest" (Matt. 9:38). "The harvest indeed is plenteous, but the laborers are few." The problem of a plenteous harvest, and the problem of the labor shortage is solved by prayer. Jesus is the authority for this proposition. "The haystack prayer meeting" tells a great story in modern missions.

Because of its importance, we would mention still a third dynamic—faith. There is power in faith. All things are possible to him that believeth (Mark 9:23). "If ye had faith as a grain of mustard seed, ye would say unto this sycamine tree, Be thou rooted up, and be thou planted in the sea; and it would obey you" (Luke 17:6). There is power enough in faith to remove mountains, especially when faith is connected with prayer (Mark 11:23, 24). Faith enabled Peter to walk upon the water. The lack of it caused him to sink. "O thou of little faith, wherefore didst thou doubt?" The power that faith adds must not be lacking in the Forward Movement. Are there any doubters, as to the realization of the goals set? What is your faith? My faith is that it can be done, and that much more will be done. Oh, yes, with man it is impossible, but with God all things are possible.

There are other impelling forces which might be mentioned, but the chief of all is, without doubt, the Holy Spirit, prayer, and faith. Without these dynamics our efforts in the Forward Movement are powerless.

Christmas Aspirations

At this season of the year, when gifts are making glad the hearts of children, and when the young people are remembering him in whose honor Christmas day is celebrated, the older folks may find profit in considering the philosophy that the Savior brought into the world. He taught, not only that service is the measure of greatness, but that it is the measure of happiness as well. We enjoy life in proportion as we invest in it our energy, our thought and our sympathy—"where the treasure is there will the heart be also."

As money is of value only because it can be spent for something that is more desirable, so existence is of worth only because it can be expended for other things. "Whosoever will save his life shall lose it; but whosoever will lose his life for my sake, the same shall save it." This is a maxim of universal application, demonstrated by history and capable of proof at any time by experience. The Great Teacher instructed the world by precept and enforced the precept by example; and yet, in spite of the great truth which he established, multitudes are still blind—still hoping to find satisfaction in pursuits which are wholly selfish. Some worship their bodies, spending their time collecting the most palatable foods and ornamenting themselves with the most costly clothing and housing themselves in luxurious homes, only to find that they weaken and finally destroy the physical frame which they idolize. Others pay their homage to the mind, flattering it and fawning before it, as if it were a thing divine. Its sensations are more lasting, its delights more refined and it has a greater range of achievements, but it may be employed as selfishly as the body. If it is wrongly directed, it is far more potent for evil than muscle and bone, and it may lead one into the mires of doubt and into the solitudes of unbelief. He builds upon the sands who ignores the spiritual in man. The soul looks upward, as the flowers turn their faces to the orb of day; the conscious presence of the Creator is as necessary to the happiness of the human being as is the sunlight to the plant. To attune one's self to the Infinite, it is necessary to conform to the law of the universe, and that law is service. To serve largely, one must, by the avoidance of all that will dissipate and destroy, husband his strength and make it available for the doing of the things that are worth while—the larger his capacity for service, and the more complete his willingness to serve, the more abundantly will be the fulfillment of the promise, "It is more blessed to give than to receive."

"Man-Made Decisions"

BY PAUL MOHLER

I HAVE heard this expression so often applied to decisions of our Annual Conference. It is never an expression of respect. Its purpose is to belittle their importance. Is the term justified by the facts? If it is, the sooner we change our Conference—or abolish it—the better. If it is not, the sooner we stop the mouths of railers, the nearer right we shall be. The situation demands a knowledge of the facts, and action in accordance.

Strictly speaking, our entire religious system is man-made. Men, moved by the Holy Spirit, gave us our Bible and our forms of worship. But this, I take it, is not what is meant by the above epithet. They who speak of "man-made decisions" intend to convey the idea that these decisions are not dictated by the Holy Spirit nor countenanced by God in any way. Is this true of our Conference decisions? Let us see.

For this to be true, several conditions must prevail. Before any one of our Conferences convenes, many prayers arise to God for his presence and guiding power to bless and control. These prayers arise from devout saints in their closets, at the family altar, in the public assembly, in the various preliminary meetings of the Conference season, and in the Conference itself, as it enters upon its work. God must disregard all of these prayers before the decisions can be regarded as "man-made." If God does this, the Church of the Brethren is not his church, and the sooner we disorganize it, the better.

Again, many, if not most, of the delegates are men and women of devoted lives. They are accustomed to a daily walk with God, turning to him for guidance in even the small affairs of daily life. Does God withdraw from them when they enter the Conference assembly, gathering together in the name of the Lord? Such a conclusion is unthinkable, and yet that is what must occur if God is not in our Conferences.

Another condition still must be changed. God, in time past, has entered into control of assemblies which were not disposed to decide according to what he had planned, and has controlled them for his purposes in spite of their prejudices. A notable example of this was the Acts 15 conference. The church at Jerusalem was undoubtedly Jewish in its training and its prejudices. Its leaders were devout Jews, and the Lord himself had commanded them to obey the scribes and Pharisees (Matt. 23:2, 3). Now to an assembly of these came Paul and Barnabas with the question: "Must the Gentiles be circumcised and commanded to keep the law of Moses?" How would you expect them to decide it? Every indication was adverse to granting the slightest liberty to the Gentiles. But what happened? God took control, raised up men to speak with power, and dictated a decision that saved the day. It was a compromise decision, of course, but it required but little of the Gentiles, aside of what good morals would demand. What little there was of restriction, they could well afford to grant for the sake of peace with the Jews.

How often God has taken control of national congresses, constitutional conventions, peace conferences, etc., to safeguard the interests of his people, we do not know, but we believe he has done it more than once. Are our Brethren more difficult to move than the Jews, or than self-centered politicians and diplomats? If I thought so, I should leave the church.

I am sure that even if the majority of the delegates to Conference were of a mind contrary to that which is for the best interests of the church, God would, when necessary, take possession and dictate a decision that would save the church.

Now let us look at it from another standpoint: Suppose a Conference decided contrary to your opinion. If you are right, Conference is wrong. What assurance do you have that your decision is not man-made? What promise of Divine Guidance have you that is not given as well to the church?

But perhaps your local church is with you. Has your church any promise that Conference has not? Is it any more free from prejudices than the delegates to Conference?

Consider the likelihood. You are a farmer, a merchant, a mechanic, a teacher, or even the pastor of a church. Whatever you are, you are a busy man, actively engaged in your own specific labors. You hardly take time to offer a brief prayer for each day, as it begins, unless you are more devout than the average. Have you ever taken time off from everything to think and study and pray for special guidance on any single question that is before the Conference? Do you empty yourself of your own wishes in the matter and give God a full opportunity to guide you certainly? Answer these questions honestly.

Now think how Conference approaches any question. Before it gets to Conference, it occurs to the mind of some one, presumably as intelligent and devout as you. Then it is approved by a local church that may claim to be as fully Spirit-guided as your own. Then it passes a District Conference, and finally it reaches the Annual Conference.

Since Conference is a busy assembly, it may not see the importance of the question and may not give it the consideration it deserves, and may just return the paper without investigating its merits. I think there is more danger of a mistake being made in this way than in rendering a positive decision. Remember that a petition may be returned by a bare majority vote, but before it can be adopted, there must be an affirmative vote of two-thirds of the delegates voting. Positive decisions are not made in a hurry. Time is taken with them. Even where not so much time is taken, Conference has the advantage of you. For the question has been before the delegates and the leaders of the church ever since its publication in the MESSENGER—generally a matter of months. Then the delegates have withdrawn themselves from their daily duties—are clear out of sight of them. (Is there anywhere in your home where you can get out of sight and sound of the activities of others, and the call of your own duties?) They have been singing, praying, listening to sermons, addresses, and inspiring talks and conversations for all the preceding days of Conference, and are "in the name of the Lord and in his Spirit" if they ever will be. Is not a sudden decision of Conference as likely to be right as yours? Is it not more so?

But if a question is strongly disputed, what occurs? Why, some one invariably proposes that the question be held over for a year—perhaps be put in the hands of a committee for study. This committee studies and prays over it, and all the church is considering it. If it can not be decided the second year, another year is taken, and perhaps the committee is changed. Every effort is made to have the decision right in the sight of God before it is placed upon the Minutes as the decision of the church. That is the way it is actually done. Can you improve on the method?

Will you still call the Conference's decisions man-made? Well, there is another consideration for you to look into. In Matt. 12: 22ff., we have the story of a controversy between Jesus and the Pharisees. When Jesus was seen to be doing a good work, in casting out demons, they said: "This man doth not cast out demons but by Beelzebub, the prince of demons." Jesus noticed this statement, and after showing them how foolish the argument was, he gave them that little sermon on blaspheming against the Holy Spirit—a sin which would never be forgiven. The context demands that we interpret his statement as referring to what they had done—attributing the work of the Holy Spirit to demons. Very dangerous ground for them, was it not? Now, how would it be to attribute the work of the Holy Spirit to men today? It would be rather discourteous, to say the least, would it not? Do you really think it is safe? Hadn't we better be a little careful how we use our epithets? You know Jesus said that for even our idle words we must give account.

Real Man-Made Decisions

There are, indeed, some real man-made decisions that we meet in life. We see them reported in the newspapers, the magazines, and in the show windows. They are repeated and pressed upon us by word of mouth. We have to yield to them or fight. They tell us how to dress and do other things, even in small details. They tell us we must spend much money and time in following these decisions. If we refuse, they threaten us with loss of social standing and even of a livelihood. They have the overwhelming majority of humanity on their side, if appearances count for anything.

But never fear. You need not obey them if you belong to God. Theirs are only man-made decisions, and God is not back of them. The worst that they can bring upon you need never move you. "For I am persuaded, that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor things present, nor things to come, nor powers, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord" (Rom. 8: 38, 39).

What a Picture Reveals

BY J. F. LEYLEY

HAVE you seen the latest picture?

I do not know that it has been just fully developed yet, but there has been on exhibition, recently, a glimpse of it, at least, and it promises to be a most wonderful picture—a revelation in fact.

It has been a long time in the making—what the photographers call "a long time exposure," but it was inevitable that sooner or later the developing acid must be applied and that which was hidden from sight, must be clearly revealed.

I would to God that the substance—the subject of this hideous revelation—had never had cause to exist, because the recent investigations (development) reveal a social and spiritual condition, not only in our own land, but in every other so-called "Christian nation," that is not only distressing and alarming, but that proves to me that the "worldly churches," as the mass of the people of Europe and America see them today, have utterly failed—that they have become a stench to the unconverted, and that they have brought reproach upon the name of our God.

It proves to me that what we need today is—not more churches, not more so-called church members, not more church machinery, but more new creatures in the church of Jesus Christ, which can never fail.

For many years, the masses of the people have seen nothing in the "churches" but cold, dead formalism, hypocrisy, pride, deceit, bigotry, hatred, strife and often oppression in and among the unregenerated churches and her members. Church members and professing Christians desecrate the Sabbath Day, lead dissolute lives, lie by word and deed, taking advantage of their neighbor in "smart deals," and driving sharp bargains. Though professing to have love for their fellow-members, they "pass by on the other side," with their eyes turned the other way.

The outside world is not slow to see that the sermons some professors of Christianity live on weekdays, belie the sermons they preach on Sundays. After being in "bondage to the church" for generations, people soon see the utterly selfish nature and lives of the members of the one body in all the world, which, above all others, is claimed to be built upon the foundation of love—true unselfish love to God and man.

After the great untaught and unconverted masses of sinners see all these things, for years and years, after they have felt the pressure of dishonest and godless men, who stand high in the councils of the churches, after they see the utterly vain and carnal lives of the women in high society—"pillars" of the "churches"—can you wonder that they want to "forget that there is a God," that they lose faith in all that is good, and that they "want to become atheists and destroy every vestige of the so-called civilization of today"?

Can you wonder that these untaught multitudes, when they estimate our God by the lives of his professors, exclaim: "We want to be without God and without religion, without society and without government"?

Oh, God, whom wilt thou hold responsible for the souls of these people?

Oh, Brethren, have you contributed to the making of this awful picture? May God help us all, henceforth so to live before men and the world, that our lives may inspire sinners with faith in him until they find the Christ, who is their Life and their Salvation.

Brother, sister, shall it be said of our church that it has failed?

Shall it be said of you and of me that we have failed?

Brethren, if we would save their lives and our own, we must crucify these carnal lives of ours. We must show these people by our lives that the God of love and righteousness dwells within us, that we have been transformed into new creatures that personify Christ Jesus, the Lover and Savior of sinners.

If we would have the world to believe that the Church of Jesus Christ is the embodiment of peace on earth, good will to men, and life eternal, and that we belong to that church, we must prove it by our lives, so that they can see it.

Oh, let us think of what the judgment day shall reveal to us!

The Evidence and Result of Forgiveness

BY JAMES M. MOORE

JESUS, during his life on earth, mingled freely with all classes of people for the purpose of helping them. He accepted invitations to meals, and made use of these occasions to teach some valuable lessons. Out of the most peculiar circumstances he seemed able to bring some of his greatest teachings.

In Luke 7: 36-50 it is recorded that a Pharisee by the name of Simon invited Jesus to his home, and he went. While they were reclining around the table, a woman stood near Jesus, weeping until her tears fairly wet his feet. She then wiped them with the hair of her head, stooped and kissed them over and over again, and then anointed them with an alabaster cruse of precious ointment.

Simon was much displeased, even with Jesus, for permitting a sinful woman to touch him. He said nothing aloud, but Jesus could easily see, on his face, an expression of disapproval. The entire occasion gave a twofold opportunity for helpfulness—a lesson to Simon, and an encouragement to the woman.

The parable of the two debtors, given in verses 41 and 42, together with Jesus' question, brought from Simon an unbiased expression of a principle that received the Master's unreserved approval. This principle might be stated thus: "In proportion as one realizes one's sins forgiven, so will be the expression of love to him through whom the forgiveness comes."

In making the application, Jesus spoke of the very great love of the woman, as expressed in what she had just done. This is made stronger by contrasting with the absence of any real manifestations of love in Simon's attitude. He then made the significant statement that this woman's sins, though many, were forgiven. The expression, "For she loved much," indicates that the love of the woman, as expressed, was an evidence that her sins had been taken away. Or, in other words, since love is the natural result of forgiveness, its manifestation in such a large degree becomes an unmistakable evidence of that forgiveness.

Here, then, is at least one relationship that exists between salvation and obedience. Forgiveness means salvation, since sin is the only barrier to an entrance into heaven. Love and obedience are inseparable, for Christ said: "If ye love me, ye will keep my commandments" (John 14: 15).

If there is no obedience to the teachings of Jesus, it must follow that there is no love, for love will express itself. If there be no love, there is not the evidence of forgiveness, hence no forgiveness. Since it is true that that they "want to become atheists and destroy every vestige of the so-called civilization of today"?

Can you wonder that these untaught multitudes, when they estimate our God by the lives of his professors, exclaim: "We want to be without God and without religion, without society and without government"?

Oh, God, whom wilt thou hold responsible for the souls of these people?

In Luke 7: 36-50 it is recorded that a Pharisee by the name of Simon invited Jesus to his home, and he went. While they were reclining around the table, a woman stood near Jesus, weeping until her tears fairly wet his feet. She then wiped them with the hair of her head, stooped and kissed them over and over again, and then anointed them with an alabaster cruse of precious ointment.

Simon was much displeased, even with Jesus, for permitting a sinful woman to touch him. He said nothing aloud, but Jesus could easily see, on his face, an expression of disapproval. The entire occasion gave a twofold opportunity for helpfulness—a lesson to Simon, and an encouragement to the woman.

The parable of the two debtors, given in verses 41 and 42, together with Jesus' question, brought from Simon an unbiased expression of a principle that received the Master's unreserved approval. This principle might be stated thus: "In proportion as one realizes one's sins forgiven, so will be the expression of love to him through whom the forgiveness comes."

In making the application, Jesus spoke of the very great love of the woman, as expressed in what she had just done. This is made stronger by contrasting with the absence of any real manifestations of love in Simon's attitude. He then made the significant statement that this woman's sins, though many, were forgiven. The expression, "For she loved much," indicates that the love of the woman, as expressed, was an evidence that her sins had been taken away. Or, in other words, since love is the natural result of forgiveness, its manifestation in such a large degree becomes an unmistakable evidence of that forgiveness.

Here, then, is at least one relationship that exists between salvation and obedience. Forgiveness means to whom much is forgiven, the same loveth much, and also that to whom little is forgiven, the same loveth little, it seems natural to conclude that he who does not manifest love has not found pardon and salvation.

Truly, we are highly favored. "Every good gift and every perfect gift is from above, coming down from the Father of lights" (James 1: 17). Psalm 40: 5 states the true situation: "Many, O Jehovah my God, are the wonderful works which thou hast done, and thy thoughts which are to us-ward: they can not be set in order unto thee; if I would declare and speak of them, they are more than can be numbered."

When it comes to expressing our appreciation of God's great goodness, however, we probably fall short as much as in anything in our Christian life. The continual sacrifice of praise, of Heb. 13: 15, has not yet found the place in us that was intended.

It is also true that the unbelief and indifference to Christianity, in the world today, are at least partly due to the fact that we, who have been redeemed, do not show forth to those around us that result of our salvation. Until we, in loving obedience to every Gospel teaching, give evidence of Jesus' saving power in us, we can not wonder that our neighbors question its presence. And not the least of the forms of this evidence is the expression in life, of the beautiful traits of character as seen in our Lord.

A few appropriate questions might always be: Have I been forgiven? Do others see the evidence? If not, what's wrong?

The Lord Will Provide

(Jehovah Jireh)

BY DAISY M. MOORE

THERE is scarcely a more solidly comforting promise in the Bible. True, there are promises providing strength in this or that specific case or dilemma, but this one covers the entire range of human problems and experience. And to the man of faith it has never yet failed.

Sometimes, in spite of his trust, he has come down to what seems his last extremity, but in the midst of it, when there seemed no firm place upon which to set his foot, there has come, in answer to his fervent prayer, flooding his soul, the needed aid. Perhaps his environment has changed, but, for whatever cause, here is the courage, solution or success so much needed.

When the Providence of God fails, there is but one explanation—man has lacked belief and faith, and in consequence could not see or understand, or avail himself of the proffered aid.

He has grown impatient of the many times seemingly slow-moving methods or plans of a Higher Hand.

No Christian but has experienced having gone down into the deeps of trial, be it loss of dear friends or fortune, failure in business, ill health or affliction in other ways, and prostrated there, pleading for assistance, has felt that he could not bear one straw more! And then—oh, the cool, blessed peace which has stolen into the hot heart, the troubled mind—almost as sleep steals over one, easing the burden of the day, relaxing the tension and wrapping the weary body in merciful forgetfulness.

As in the morning one rises with renewed bodily vigor, so one turns from his spiritual vigil, after the baptism of the Holy Spirit, with a sense of mental and spiritual energy restored.

Victory

BY VIOLA PRISER

SEE the army as it marches on in the way of danger and death to meet its foe! Why are the soldiers so brave? Why are they willing to endure privation? Why are they willing to suffer and even to die? It is the thought of victory that gives them courage to press vauncing for the fray. No, more often he hides i ambush, like the American Indian of old. In fact, h adopts all sorts of methods in the pursuance of his de structive work. He is noted for cunning and slynes in his operations. He sees the need of all this. H realizes that Christian soldiers who are clad in th whole armor (Eph. 6: 10-18), are using the weapo that is "sharper than any two-edged sword." The are obeying the orders of their Captain, Jesus. We may they sing:

"Are there no foes for me to face?
Must I not stem the flood,
Is this vile world a friend to grace,
To help me on to God?

"Sure, I must fight if I would reign,
Increase my courage, Lord,
I'll bear the toil, endure the pain,
Supported by thy Word."

Such warriors are hard to defeat, and Satan right about that matter.

The real Christian soldier has eternal life, and crown in view, and he will fight until he has gained t victory.

"Not to the strong is the battle,
Not to the swift is the race,
Yet to the true and the faithful,
Victory is promised, through grace."

Responsibility of Parents

BY MRS. WALTER SELL

PARENTS have always had a great responsibility re ing upon them; but now, in this time of turmoil a wickedness, it is increased an hundredfold. The wo is in such a condition that godly people stand agh at the crime and immorality that is daily going around them. Human lust and greed is preval everywhere. "Pleasure! Pleasure! We must h pleasure," is the wild cry of the times; and in obta ing it, the sacred and holy things of life must be pus aside, at least for the time being. Faithful Christia who refuse to be swept along with the current, considered narrow-minded and out of place. Th advice is considered worthless, because of the age which we are living.

Parents, in the midst of these conditions, can have the same faith in you as he had in Abraham Gen. 18: 19? "For I know him, to the end that he command his children and his household after h that they may keep the way of the Lord, to do ri eousness and justice." Are your children compro ing with the world, or are they serving the Lord? not, who is responsible?

If you have never taken your children into your c fidence, and warned them in a Christian way of awful snares and camouflaged pleasures of the wo it is now high time you were doing so. The time innocence is past. The devil has too many traps pitfalls for your child to walk along blindfolded in age, and when you withhold the truths from your c dren, with the intention of keeping them safe and ir cent, you are doing nothing short of sending th blindfolded into the world, making them easy vict of human lust.

Your children will not always remain by your side. They must and will mix with the world. parents, I plead with you, do not send them away f you unwarned of the temptations ahead of them! is not enough to tell them that there is harm in cer things. They must also be told why there is harm. you do not, they will rush into it, not seeing the h at first, because it had never been pointed out to th and then, some day, you will beg your pastor, o evangelist to save the soul of your wayward boy girl. You can not see the reason of the drifting, cause yours is a Christian home. Dear parents, neglected teaching them the bare, vital truths of They did not know any better. It is a sin to a your child to go to hell because of your timidity

A Thought Worth Pondering

BY REBECCA C. FOUTZ

RECENTLY I heard an elderly lady (not a member of our church), during a conversation about the present times and people, make this remark: "It used to be that one saw folks taking time to sit down and read their Bibles, especially on Sunday, but nowadays everyone is so busy going and doing that one seldom sees it any more." She said it simply, yet sincerely and earnestly, but without rancor.

Do we allow the multitudinous activities of present-day living, both temporal and religious, so to crowd out this important spiritual feeding? Are we so busy, rushing about doing things, that we can not take time to sit still, so that God may speak to us through his Word, to have us meditate thereon? It is a thought worth pondering.

Real Christmas Feasts

BY IDA M. HELM

CHRISTMAS is coming. What are we thinking about? Are we wondering what our Christmas presents will be? Are we planning and worrying and fussing that we may be able to give elaborate presents to our friends, with the hope of receiving elaborate ones in return? Will we let this Christmas season pass without giving and receiving anything that is more valuable than gold or diamonds and rare hand work and tapestry?

Christmas is only a little way off. Are we stewing and baking and worrying that we may please the temporal appetite of our friends? Let us not put them off without dishing up to them a generous share of delectable fruit, heavenly manna and angel's food. "Whether, therefore, ye eat, or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God" (1 Cor. 10: 31).

Christmas is almost here. Are we thinking about Jesus? Have we the picture of his tender, love-lit face graven in our heart so deeply that every one with whom we meet can see the reflection of the loveliness within?

It's Christmas morning. Let us sing: "Glory to God in the highest, on earth peace among men in whom he is well pleased." The world has long had that wonderful, beautiful song. But singing is not enough. Deep down in our hearts the words of peace that roll off our tongues must have root. Then the peace of the angels' song will permeate our lives and transmit to other souls the peace that passeth understanding and the music will rise, like sweet incense, to the throne of Christ of the Christmas time.

It's Christmas Day. Let us celebrate! But celebrating means more than feasting and giving and receiving presents, and laughing and talking. The Christ, who was born on Christmas Day and whose birth we celebrate, was born King and he is now seeking to reign in our hearts. This is something we should ponder amidst the festivities of our Christmas celebration. The theme of our conversation should be the Christ, and the love that was born into the world with Jesus. Indeed it should. The Greeks one time came to the apostle Philip, with the request: "We would see Jesus." How about us today? Would we see Jesus? We should bow obediently to the will of the Christ, and we will see the King in his beauty. I have known families where the main theme of conversation for days was "Santa Claus." Yet there never was a story half so beautiful as the story of Jesus and his love. "Kings and wise men of earth have taken counsel together, yet they have never been able to fabricate anything half as lovely and winning as the story of the Babe of Bethlehem."

The children love to hear the story of the Babe that came all the way from heaven to earth that winter night, the first Christmas so long ago, a priceless Christmas gift of peace to this old world of strife—a gift to make glad the hearts of children, of youths and maidens, of men and women in the prime of life, and the aged with snowy hair and feeble step.

Let us celebrate the birth of our Lord with genuine rejoicing, not mere light-hearted merriment. Across the way there is a discouraged, heart-sore man. He has met with adversity. Misfortune has overwhelmed him and he faces the future with dread. He must be invited to our Christmas feast and we must revive in his heart the hope that has died. We must instill something of the Christmas spirit into his broken heart.

If there was a gaunt, half-starved, thinly-clothed woman looking in at our window with pitiful, half-famished eyes, as we sit at our Christmas feast, the joy of the festal board would depart till we brought the woman into our warm dining-room and gave her a place at the table.

There are thousands upon thousands of such pitiable women in the world this Christmas Day. Here is an open door for me and you to enter. The world is swinging full of open doors. Do you hear the helpless wail of those destitute, shivering, hollow-eyed children? They are calling to us, they want a home and love.

A Christmas Song

By Lina N. Stoner

The angels o'er Judean hills,
Broke forth in glad refrain;
All glory to our God most high,
Peace and good will to men.

Good will to men, take up the strain,
Let earth with music ring,
While we with word and deed proclaim
Our glorious Savior, King.

We fain would come this Christmas time
With gifts and incense sweet;
And lay them down in trusting love
At his dear children's feet.

No manger holds our radiant Lord,
His form we may not see;
But as ye do it unto these,
Ye do it unto me.

Ladoga, Ind.

Those aged grandparents, whose own children are far away and whose friends have passed to the Great Beyond, and for whom a glad Christmas will be but a memory of the past, must be given a place of honor at our feast. They are only waiting on the shore of the river that flows between this world and the one beyond, till the pale boatman shall beckon to them and carry them across the river that we call death. They must be made to experience once more the real joy of the Christmas spirit. If we will celebrate Christmas in a Christlike way, Christ will get glory in us. "Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven" (Matt. 5: 16).

We can make a happy, genuinely joyous Christmas in that we, in the Christ spirit, help to lift burdens from human hearts, and point them to the One who came to lift up the fallen, to bind up the broken hearts, to dry tears of grief, and to light the world with love and joy.

Christmas

BY LEANDER SMITH

"Jesus called a little child unto him, and set him in the midst of them" (Matt. 18: 2).

AT Christmas time, especially, we bethink ourselves of those words of his. Whatever other meanings this sacred festival may have, this, perhaps, is the most prominent thought of it. Once a year a Divine Child is set in the midst of us. Incarnate God, yet a little Child. One who grew up to a Perfect Man, and to possess all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge, yet never left behind, as we do, the things which make childhood attractive. One who was called by his disciples to the last: "The Holy Child Jesus."

All grown-up people, at some time or other, have longer for, or dreamed of, a return to childhood, and sighed as they realized the impossibility of it. Truly, the lessons which we most need to learn are just those which are breathed forth from the artless lips and shouted in the innocent delights of a happy, hopeful child. And so at Christmas time, the Child Jesus seats himself in the midst, and speaks to us. He bids the doctors depart, and the sages be silent, and the world's science hold its lips, and the din of politics hush itself, and the clamours of prejudice and passion be still, that we may take his heavenly teaching of faith, and innocence, and joy.

There are times when we get a little weary of all the grand talk about knowledge, and genius, and brilliant statesmanship, and the march of science and invention, and the cleverness of human foresight, and the omniscience of intellect, and the victories won over material forces, and the triumphs of civilization, and the cunning of worldly men. We have a suspicion that it is not doing for us all that the boasters say, that civilization does not quite mean paradise, and that "grasp of the mind" is not the same thing as "rest of soul." And therefore we will sit down at the feet of the Child Jesus, and pray together that science may learn his humility, that intellect may have his reverence, that commerce may drink from his wells of purity and justice, that riches may clothe themselves with his simplicity, and be filled with his self-denying spirit, that education and enlightenment may have their cold, freezing light made warm and gentle with his love, and that the nations, as the bells ring in honor of his nativity, may bethink themselves of the spirit of the Divine Child whom they worship, and gather, from his simple innocence, lessons of sublimest wisdom.

Minot, N. Dak.

"Inasmuch"

ANOTHER little child has shriveled up and died. The mother, creeping back, gaunt and cold, from the desert, has put down the thin little bones with those that strew the road—so many miles, and has sunk beside them, never to rise again.

Only a little child and a mother, out on the bleak Armenian road—but what is that Vision hovering there—and what is that Voice the cold winds bear to the ears of our souls: "I was hungry, and ye gave me no meat, I was naked and ye clothed me not."

Today—yes, today, while we are preparing our gifts for Christmas—many more of these little children—not a hundred, nor a thousand, but two hundred and fifty thousand of them—are still wandering, uncared for and alone, in that dead land, "their weazened skins clinging in fear to their rattling bones," and they are crying out with gasping breath: "I am hungry! I am hungry!" And the Voice of One, who watches us as we prepare gifts to celebrate his birthday, comes again to the ears of our souls: "I am hungry! I am hungry! I am hungry!"

Now the children and the mothers in Armenia are dreading the winter. "Just human remnants, they are, not protected—many of them—from the elements, by even the dignity of rags. The most favored have merely shredded rags." How shall we sing our Christmas songs—and laugh—and light the candles—and give beautiful gifts—while that Pleading Voice cries in the ears of our souls: "I am naked—and cold! Naked—and cold!"

But we can feed and clothe those perishing ones—some of them—before it is too late. Herbert Hoover has cabled from the Caucasus: "It is impossible that the loss of 200,000 lives can at this day be prevented, but the remaining 500,000 can passibly be saved." They need not starve, and freeze, and die if we will save them. In the name of him who saw the multitude "as sheep not having a shepherd, and was moved with compassion toward them," who exclaimed, when his disciples would turn them away: "They need not depart; give ye them to eat," open now your heart and purse and give to these Christians whom he loves—who are suffering for him, and with whom he is suffering. They need not die. Give ye them to eat!

Christ fed five thousand hungry people in the wilderness, and said to his followers: "The things that I do, shall ye do also, and greater things than these shall ye do." Today nearly eight hundred thousand destitute Armenians—his people—need food and clothing.

He took little children in his arms and blessed them. Today, will you take one, or more, of these sad, cold, hungry little children of Armenia into your arms and heart, in his name, and give them food, and warmth, and life?

What a joyful Christmas it will be, when, with your songs and your laughter, you hear a Voice of wondrous sweetness speaking to you: "O ye blessed of my Father, I was hungry and ye gave me meat. I was naked and ye clothed me. Inasmuch as ye have done it to these my brethren, ye have done it to me."—Near East Relief.

CORRESPONDENCE

"Write what thou seest, and send it unto the churches"

A LIFE-WORK CONFERENCE

The Joint Christian Life Work Conference for the six churches of Curlew, Slifer, Kingsley, and Sheldon, Iowa, Worthington, Minn., and Willow Creek, S. Dak., was held at Sheldon on Thanksgiving Day. The weather was stormy, and snow was falling, so that not many came for the communion service on Wednesday evening. Bro. L. A. Whitaker, of the Curlew church, conducted these services.

Thanksgiving Day was cold, and partly on this account and because of sickness, the attendance was not large. Meals were served in the basement and a social time was enjoyed by all, between services. Several speakers were not present, but others spoke on their subjects—all addresses bearing on the theme, "The World's Need as a Challenge to the Young People of the Brethren Church."

Bro. S. S. Neher acted as Moderator and after an address by Eld. J. E. Rolston, Bro. Neher defined the challenge as being a call to personal combat, and told of the armor of defense which is promised us.

Bro. L. A. Whitaker discussed the challenge, as it related to the church, showing the inspiration which should come from numbers engaged in the same work, the certainty of victory, and emphasizing two words from the Great Commission: "MAKE DISCIPLES." Bro. O. C. Caskey spoke of America's challenge, while Bro. C. E. Kimmel presented the foreign challenge.

In the evening Bro. J. A. Eddy, of Worthington, conducted a round-table discussion, and Bro. Neher made a strong appeal for volunteers. It caused many to think more seriously of their part in the activities of the church. Many parents responded to the appeal to encourage their children to become missionaries. A contribution was taken for the Christian Home at Council Bluffs. Another conference has been planned for next summer. May the messages given inspire more of our young people to consecrate their lives to the Master's work!

Sheldon, Iowa. Mrs. M. L. Kimmel.

WATERFORD, CALIFORNIA

Brother and Sister Andrew Blickenstaff recently solicited this congregation for funds to build a churchhouse at Oakland. Nov. 23 Sister Laura Gwin Swadley delivered a discourse in the morning and in the afternoon talked to mothers and daughters. In the evening Brother and Sister Swadley divided the time, and each gave a good talk.

Thanksgiving Day we accepted the invitation of the Baptist people to met with them in service.

Nov. 20 the sisters of this church met and organized an Aid Society, with Sister Hattie Deardorff, President.

At the request of the District officers of the Aid Society we sent a nice box of things to the Oakland church, to be distributed to the poor for Thanksgiving, with $8 in cash.

Dec. 7 is the date for the joint Sunday-school and Christian Workers' Convention of Patterson, Oakland, Waterford and Empire, to be held at the latter place.

Bro. Geo. Bashor, of Glendora, Calif., will begin a series of meetings Jan. 4. We are anticipating a good meeting and a large ingathering, as we have not had a series of meetings since our organization.

Our Christmas program committee is very busy arranging for suitable services for that day. Work is progressing very nicely at the present writing. Thanksgiving eve a devotional service was held and a collection of over $40 was lifted, to start a church building fund. We are very cramped in the small rented building we have, and are badly in need of a churchhouse.

Hattie Garvey Deardorff.

UPPER TWIN CHURCH, OHIO

We have been wonderfully strengthened by a song service, conducted by Bro. E. Friend Couser, of Waynesville, Ohio. He taught twelve singing lessons and preached three sermons, which were enjoyed by all. We hope to have him back again some time.

Thanksgiving evening the Willing Workers provided a program, consisting of songs, readings and recitations. All present enjoyed it very much. This class, organized in September, is surprising us with the way it takes hold of the work, with Bro. B. F. Petry assisting. This class is at the Wheatville house. Eaton also has an organized class.

Dec. 4 our quarterly council was held at the Wheatville house, with only about one-third of the members present. Bro. Aaron Brubaker, our elder, was in charge of the meeting, and Bro. B. F. Petry conducted the devotional service. One was received into church fellowship. A committee of three, Brethren J. F. Deaton, Samuel Rodefer and Geo. Petry, was authorized to hire a sexton and pay the light and coal bill, at the Universalist church at Eaton. We appointed three solicitors: Bro. Geo. Jordan, at Eaton, Bro. McKee, at the Wheatville house, and Bro. Frank Y. Brubaker, for Gratis. They are to receive and solicit money for the building fund of the Winona Lake auditorium. Bro. Aaron Brubaker was chosen elder for two years, and Bro. Jos. Lowman was reëlected clerk for three years. The reports of both the poor fund and church treasurers were accepted. A collection for the poor fund was taken for the quarter.

Eaton, Ohio. Mrs. A. M. Rinebart.

GUARDING THE MANGER

This letter will certainly interest many young people in our Sunday-schools. It is from a Sunday-school boy who is now in Betblehem. It was written to a captain—a friend of his—and was sent to me from England.

"I have been made 'guard,' and it is a great honor, I can tell you, to be guarding the birth-place and manger of the Lord Jesus. Just think how it makes me feel! It is a wonderful place and I never thought, when I used to read about it, that one day I should stand and guard it.

"The birthplace is marked by a fourteen-pointed silver star, which was presented by the French Government. The stable is hung with lamps from different countries. They look beautiful and they are always alight.

"The manger itself is cut in natural rock, and marble has been put in it to keep it in good preservation. When I get home I shall be able to tell you more about it. I don't write it all down while I am here!"

Nashville, Oregon. Louisa A'hmuty Nash.

IN MEMORY OF SISTER A. D. NININGER

Sister Ann Denton Nininger was the daughter of Robert and Ann Mooniaw Denton. She was born on the old Robert Denton farm, near the Valley church of sacred memory, July 7, 1850. She died in her lovely home at Daleville, Aug. 12, 1919.

Her girlhood days touched every community activity. Her school-days, though few in comparison with what they are now, were a faithful climbing up into the higher altitudes of learning, and a preparation to do the responsible things of later years. The warp and woof of those years were soon woven. She found herself rapidly growing up into young womanhood, with new hopes and aspirations.

At the age of nineteen she became the wife of Bro. B. F. Nininger, of Daleville, Va. Thus two homes became closely united in lasting friendships, and a new one was begun.

This little story is written in the home into which she came a lovely and happy bride. Later on the residence of sacred memory was turned over to the college, and is now familiarly known as the "Executive Mansion."

Just a few steps from this place is the old stone mansion, where Brother and Sister Nininger established their home and reared their family of nine children, who came to gladden their home. All of them are still living excepting the oldest daughter, Flora, who died some twenty-three years ago. Sister Nininger, with the rest of the family, felt this loss most keenly, yet a new interest in things eternal soon bound up their hearts into an everlasting hope.

The first concern of this home was the training of the children. No sacrifice was too great that they might be prepared to go out as useful men and women. What they desired for their own children, they unselfishly coveted for others also. To do this, Sister Nininger vacated a part of her home, and made it ready for school purposes. God blessed this venture, and the little school that had its beginning in her home and was nourished with thousands of their money and constaut supervision, has grown into the college of today, where hundreds of boys and girls come, better to equip themselves for life.

Sister Nininger's loving ministrations in the community will outlast the inscriptions upon marble or brass. At all times she was ready to attend the sick, give comfort to the bereaved, and relief to the unfortunate. The students soon learned of her reputation in this and to her they went for the healing lotion. This service was such a joy to her, that each year she saw to it that a good supply of home remedies was at hand, so that those who were away from their homes might not be without home attention.

Advancing years began to show the strain of the loving devotion of former days. Two years ago a trip to Florida was made in the interest of better health. Though the short stay was pleasant, yet the old home and friends were of strongest attraction to one that had so faithfully served. But it was plainly seen that she was far from being well, and gradually, as her health declined, she reluctantly gave up the many things she had been accustomed to do in the home and the community. The sudden death of a grandson, last spring, added to the strain upon waning strength. Nothing was left undone that loving hands and medical skill could do—even the transfusion of blood which her sons lovingly gave, that her life might be spared a little longer. This proved to be a stimulant that brought hope to many hearts. Everybody was made glad to see her come to church as in former days. It was a glad day for the congregation. Many prayers of thanksgiving were offered for her seeming recovery, and that a new lease of life had been given her. Long after the services, she lingered to greet the people in her sweet and gentle way. It was only when she noticed the rest of the family at the car, waiting for her, that she said: "I must go." This proved to be the last service she was to attend on earth—her farewell to the church and its service. God's house was a place that had always been dear to her. There, in her girlhood days, she dedicated her life to the service of the Master, and had been baptized into a new life.

THE QUIET HOUR

Suggestions for the Weekly Devotional Meeting Or for Prayerful, Private Meditation

The Changing Years and the Unchanging Christ

Hebrews 13: 8

For Week Beginning December 28, 1919

1. Let Christ Be the Way, the Truth and the Life.—This is another entrance upon a new year. We are setting out on a journey of which we can have no knowledge in advance. The road is one on which we have never traveled before. We know not what any day will have for us, what our duties will be, what burdens shall be laid upon us, what sorrows we shall have to endure, what battles we shall have to fight. We can not see one step before us. How can we know the way? As we sit in quiet meditation, on the last eve of the departing year, and ask the question, we hear au answer which is full of comfort, for Jesus says to us: "I am the way." All we need to do, therefore, will be to stay with Christ. He has made a way through the world for us. He has gone over all the journey and opened a road for us at great cost. He went over the way himself—just look! You will find his foot-prints at every step. He has a definite way for each one of us. Every mile of the journey he has chosen for our everlasting joy, and every place where we pitch our tents, he has selected for us.

2. Christ Furnishes the True Solution of Life's Problems.—A Christian man sat in the Master's presence, thinking of the coming of the new year. It was a timely meditatiou, but a most solemn one also. The man's thoughts, at that momentous time, ran thus: "Seeing him, I am sure that every year is 'the year of our Lord.' It ought to be 'begun, continued, and ended in him.' He will be with me all the days. My days may surely he well confided to his hands." Then the Christian man continued his meditation—still fully conscious of the Lord's immanent Presence: "What sort of man should I be, this year and all the years?" The answer came out of an old word, which had unexpectedly gained a new meaning, by reason of the all-permeating Presence: "Complete in him." Again he asked: "What kind of work should I do, this year and all the years?" Seemingly the man is carried back to the days of the Master, and he seems to hear again those emphatic words. "Whatsoever he saith unto you do it." He asked again: "Where shall I go to he Christ's man; and do his work?" Once more an age-old message is applied to the present-day period: "To your household, to your neighbor, and to all the world." "How can I do all this?" "The entrance of thy word giveth light"—therefore give yourself to Bible study. "Not by might, nor by power, but by my spirit, saith the Lord of hosts"—therefore give yourself to prayer. "I can do all things through Christ"—therefore give yourself to work. "In all things he shall have the preëminence"—therefore give yourself fully to him. Then the man arose from the meditation, so fruitful in spiritual upbuilding, fully determined to make the new year and all years, yet allotted to him, years of the Lord. And the Master arose and went with the man on the year's pilgrimage.

3. Suggestive Referenees for the New Year.—God's promises to the righteous (Isa. 3: 10). Let us watch our words (Matt. 12: 37)! Let us walk in the light (John 3: 19, 20)! Sow seeds of righteousness (Gal. 6: 7-10)! Our reward is sure (Eph. 6: 7, 8). Be rich in spiritual gifts (1 Cor. 14: 12)! Be stedfast, unmovable (1 Cor. 15: 58)! Renew the inward man (2 Cor. 4: 8, 9, 10, 13, 16, 17, 18)! Be zealous (Gal. 4: 18)! Be fully armed to overcome the enemy (Eph. 6: 14-20)!

Bro. J. W. Norris, of North Manchester, Ind., is holding a series of meetings in the West Eel River church, same State.

Bro. Wm. Buckley, of Dayton, Ohio, to begin some time in January in his home church,—East Dayton.

PERSONAL MENTION

Bro. D. H. Zigler and wife, of Broadway, Va., are now located in their winter home at Sebring, Fla., and should be addressed accordingly. As appearances seem to indicate, Sebring bids fair to become quite a winter resort, not only for our people—many of whom are thus escaping the frigid season of the North—but also for others.

We have just learned that Eld. A. B. Barnhart, of Hagerstown, Md., passed on to his reward Nov. 23, at the Old Folks' Home at San Mar, Md., where he had been residing for some time. Bro. Barnhart was in his eightieth year and, before the infirmities of age came on, had been a leader in many church activities. For eight years he was a member of the General Mission Board. He served his District a number of times on the Standing Committee, as well as in other important capacities. We hope to have a suitable sketch of his life for early publication.

We have just received a few lines from Eld. Andrew Hutchison, of La Verne, Calif., who will be eighty-four years of age on Jan. 13, 1920, if the Lord permits him to live until that date. Bro. Hutchison has been in the ministry a little over fifty-nine years and says that the greatest cross of his life he finds in the fact that, on account of the infirmities of age, he can no longer be active in the Lord's work. He long ago learned the true secret of happiness. Let us not forget these aged veterans who labored so faithfully and are now just as faithfully and patiently waiting the Lord's time.

The Music Committee, appointed by the last General Conference, met recently, effected an organization, and laid plans for an active prosecution of its duties. Sister Cora M. Stahly, of North Manchester, Ind., is Chairman, Prof. B. F. Wampler, of Mount Morris, Ill., is Secretary, and Eld. J. B. Miller, of Curryville, Pa., is Treasurer. These three constitute the committee. A report of the meeting, including a view of the committee's plans, will be given by the Secretary in an early number. Hereafter the Music Committee will be listed in our "Official Directory," published in the first issue of each month.

Sister Lydia E. Taylor, Secretary-Treasurer of the Dress Reform Committee, would be pleased if all persons interested would note that her address is Mount Morris, Ill., and that contributions for the work of the Committee should be sent direct to her at that place. Do not send such donations to Elgin, nor have money orders for this work made out in the name of the Publishing House. This only makes unnecessary trouble and delay. In the first issue of each month we publish a directory of the various Church Boards and Committees with the names and addresses of their members. But we learned a good while ago that some people have eyes that see not.

On Thanksgiving Day, as Eld. J. W. Rarick, of Muncie, Ind., was returning home from a business trip to the Aged People's Home, near Middletown, Ind., he met with an auto accident which resulted in bruises about the chest and a broken knee-cap. Saturday, Dec. 6, he underwent an operation for the replacing of the broken bones. He is reported as doing nicely, though it is still uncertain whether he can regain the use of his knee. In any case he will be kept indoors most of the winter. Bro. Rarick is Secretary of the Board of Directors of the Aged People's Home and has devoted much of his time and energy to its interests. He will appreciate an interest in the prayers of his many coworkers in the Master's vineyard.

ELSEWHERE IN THIS ISSUE

Ministers of Northern Indiana are invited to take special notice of "Bro. H. L. Hartsough's announcement among the Notes.

On page 814 we publish the program of the seventeenth Sunday-School Institute of Southern Ohio, held in the West Dayton church Dec. 22-26.

Aid Societies in all parts of the church will please note Sister M. C. Swigart's announcement among the Notes, and comply with her request at their earliest convenience.

A State Training Conference, similar to that described by Bro. Levi Minnich on page 805, was held in Chicago, Dec. 8, 9 and 10, under the auspices of the Interchurch World Movement. The interest which these Conferences are arousing all over the country, is remarkable, and is one of the signs of promise in a world of social and spiritual unrest. Several members of the editorial force of the Publishing House were privileged to attend one or more of the sessions.

MISCELLANEOUS

The Interchurch Movement has arranged for a World Survey Conference, to be held at Atlantic City Jan. 7 to 10 next. Invitations have been sent to more than a thousand leaders in home and foreign missions and other church activities. The purpose of the Conference is to consider the preliminary results of the world-wide surveys, which have now been carried on for many months.

Bro. H. M. Williams informs us that his recent item of church news refers to the Bartelsville church, Okla., and not to Wann, which is merely his place of residence.

The following notice, of special interest to ministers, is inserted at the request of the Western Passenger Bureau: "We are receiving letters every day from ministers who desire certificates for 1920, who now hold certificates bearing limit of say January 15 or even February and March dates, or later in 1920. Holders of such certificates should not now apply for certificates for period beyond Dec. 31, 1919. They should wait till about two weeks before expiration date of old certificate, which date can be determined by an inspection of inside of back cover of certificate. The foregoing does not apply, of course, to ministers whose certificates, even though limited to a 1920 date, may have all been used, and who now desire new certificates for immediate use."

Bro. H. D. Michael, of Garden City, Kans., writes us concerning a most commendable work into which the church at that place has entered. Feeling the need of a work of uplift among the Mexicans, residing in that city, a mission Sunday-school has been started, and a night-school is carried on during the week, in connection therewith. The Sunday-school, which meets at 4 P. M., each Lord's Day, has had an average attendance of twenty. The night-school, which is held on three evenings of each week, is growing in attendance and results. What our Garden City members seem to be doing so effectually, might readily be duplicated by scores of other congregations after a survey of the home field. There is sure to be an opportunity or two for service, provided we are willing to lay hold upon it.

A BYSTANDER'S NOTES

The Folly of Undue Sensitiveness.—A chance remark at a devotional meeting was this very pertinent one: "If you do not want your feelings hurt, take good care not to let them 'stick out' too far." It was an arrow shot at a venture, but somehow it penetrated to the Bystander's inner life, never to be forgotten. It is all too true that selfishness and egotism cause a woeful amount of undue sensitiveness. Men and women, who think they deserve a great deal of attention, and then feel they are not petted and flattered as much as they deserve, are ready to hang their heads or burst into tears, with the broken-hearted expression: "Nobody loves me!" That gifted writer, Winifred Black, hits the nail on the head when she says that the logical answer to such a petulant exclamation is the very significant one: "Why should they?" A little sober thinking will soon rid us of self-conceit.

Why Christianity Abounds in Songs of Joy.—Have you ever pondered the fact that the "good tidings of great joy," as proclaimed by the angels, ushered into the world the greatest singing religion? With anthems of joy the angels made known the gladsome news, and songs of triumph are still an essential part of its real life. This is because more hope and good cheer, more promises of good things to come, more present gladness abide in the heart of the sincere Christian than in the disciple of any other religion the world has ever seen. Christ is the great Hope Bringer. When the angels came to sing at his birth, they said to the shepherds that they brought glad tidings, and wherever Christ is preached, men are made glad. It is not only our privilege but our duty to live glad lives, and our gladness is bound to seek its natural expression in song. We ought to sing more than we do—in our homes and elsewhere. Ours is a singing religion and we ought to live up to it. Christian song has great power to banish the "blues" and brighten our outlook on the future.

Organization and Power.—Every now and then some one rises up with the plea that too much stress is placed, these days, on "organization." Churches that are most helpful to their respective communities, assert that they must have perfect organization to manage their various lines of activities. Despite all that, a pastor recently said: "What we need is less machinery and more power." Let us see. Machinery and organization are not, in themselves, going to bring in the Kingdom. Both are vain unless they are vitalized by the power of the Spirit, by faith and love, and genuine spiritual fervor. But no one would be so foolish as to claim that on that account organization should be neglected. If the Lord's business is the greatest enterprise on earth, surely it behooves us to use every means we have to forward the interests of that business. If we deem it needful to introduce system into our own paltry business enterprises, in order to eliminate waste and inefficiency, are we not bound to do our utmost to systematize the Lord's business? Just as electricity is in the earth and in the air, so the power of Jesus Christ is omnipresent, waiting for us to use it to his glory and to the furtherance of his Kingdom. But we can not turn the power of electricity to practical purposes without the use of machinery, and we can not turn the power of Jesus Christ to the saving of souls without the use of organization.

AROUND THE WORLD

Child Labor Decreasing

It will be gratifying to every lover of childhood and its development in the highest and best, to learn that child labor in the United States has decreased more than forty per cent since the child labor tax provision of the revenue act went into effect, April 25 last. The most material reduction of child labor was effected in the cotton mills of the South. There juvenile labor had been exploited most extensively until the enactment, above referred to, changed the situation of things. Most mills are now running without child labor affected by the enactment in question. Childhood, everywhere, is entering into its own, whereof we are glad.

"Being Dead, He Yet Speaketh"

It is a thought of no little comfort that any one, through a well-ordered bequest, may continue, after his departure, the spiritual activities so dear to him during his lifetime. Such, doubtlessly, was the desire of Mr. H. J. Heinz, of Pittsburgh, Pa., the well-known Sunday-school worker, who passed to his reward some months ago. He leaves $100,000 to the World's Sunday School Association; $100,000 to the University of Pittsburgh, for the training of Sunday-school workers and teachers; $125,000 to Pennsylvania Sunday-school interests; $75,000 to the International Sunday School Association. While but few, perhaps, can give as munificently as did Mr. Heinz, many of us might fittingly remember the Lord's work by a bequest that will witness for Christ after our departure.

The Ending of the Coal Strike

It is a matter of sincere gratification that a settlement of the perplexing coal strike has been reached on terms that impress any fair mind with their equitableness and justice. The miners are given assurance of a substantial increase of their pay and a thorough investigation of their claims. But one is made to wonder why this same conclusion could not have been reached without the sacrifice of millions of dollars to the country. Possibly conditions for the workers needed adjustment, but despite all that, the general public should not be made to suffer for differences of opinion that could readily be amended by a resort to proper means. It is quite evident that workers should not make use of methods which are disastrous to all directly concerned, as well as to the nation in general.

A United States Senator Indicted

General surprise was aroused recently by the announcement that United States Senator Newberry, of Michigan, and 133 others have been indicted for corruption in connection with his election to office. It will be remembered that Mr. Henry Ford, of automobile fame, was the opponent of Mr. Newberry, and that adroit endeavors were being made, during the campaign, to have it appear that a possible utilization of Mr. Ford's abounding wealth might insure his election. Now it seems that large sums were spent by the other side—more excessive in amount than the State laws allow—which makes the situation of things, at the time of this writing, somewhat critical. How pertinent the words of Holy Writ: "Righteousness exalteth a nation [or individual]: but sin is a reproach to any people."

Liquor on Ocean Liners

Judging by press reports, American ocean liners are to observe prohibition restrictions within the three-mile shore line only. When once outside of that "dry zone," liquor of all sorts will flow freely. As may be inferred, there is an explanation for this procedure. We are told that American passenger ships without liquors could not compete with the ocean liners of other nations. Sure enough, as in days of old, superstitions die hard. Not so long ago most business men in America believed that saloons were necessary to stimulate trade. It was thought that a hotel simply could not exist without a bar-room. If we may venture to make a forecast, we predict that in the near future American passenger ships will dispense with intoxicants—simply because the American standard, relative thereto, will demand it.

The Dead Sea as a Power Plant

A decidedly novel plan for the generation of an abundant amount of power for irrigation and other purposes in Palestine, is being proposed by Mr. Albert Hjorth, a Norwegian civil engineer. His plan, briefly stated, contemplates the construction of a tunnel from the Mediterranean Sea to the Dead Sea—the lower level of the last named body of water insuring plenty of fall for the generation of power all along the route. From the Mediterranean Sea the tunnel would run due east to the lower end of the Jordan Valley. From that point the water would be directed through pipes down to the level of the Dead Sea, where a power plant with turbo-electric machinery would transform the water power into electricity, to be distributed for light and power purposes throughout the country; also driving a power plant at the southern end of the Lake of Gennesaret. As the Dead Sea is nearly 1,400 feet below sea level, it is quite evident that, despite the enormous cost of such a vast engineering project, the possibilities of using these favorable conditions for a great development of power are well worthy of consideration. Plenty of water and a good fall are the chief essentials for the success of any hydraulic enterprise of this nature. The ocean would be an ample storage reservoir in this case, while the slightly increased volume of water, thus being emptied into the Dead Sea, would readily be disposed of by evaporation.

Dangers from the Foe Within

Myron T. Herrick, former ambassador to France, in a recent address in New York, declared that the crucial test of patriotism is still to come—there being a real danger from the foe within our gates, who seeks to destroy social order and established government. We quote a part of his stirring address: "Our people do not understand that many leaders of union labor do not really seek reasonable benefits for labor, but aim to destroy the Government. If the Fosters and Margolises had their way, this country would be a closed shop, and would be turned over to an autocracy worse than that of the Kaiser." A word of warning that deserves to be heeded.

More Bibles Needed

While this has been a good year for the sale of books, the Bible—the one best seller of other years—still stands at the head. As a matter of fact, the after-war demand for the Bible surpasses all previous records. In entering upon a nation-wide campaign for funds to finance the free distribution of Bibles, the special need of Russia, Belgium, Czecho-Slovakia, France and Poland is being kept in mind by the American Bible Society. Here is its plea: "Hardships, scarce food, insecurity of life and property may drive many men into the ranks of bolshevism—commonly almost atheism, if not wholly so. But the mothers and wives of these men cling to religion, look upward and forward, and cry aloud for the Written Word."

The Neglected Suburbs

Recent church surveys are revealing some significant facts about "unchurched" areas where least expected. Surrounding many of our large cities there is a belt of flourishing suburbs, which quite often are wholly unprovided for, so far as local sanctuary privileges are concerned. As shown by statistical reports from several States, the outreach of the nearest country churches city-ward is frequently not extended enough to bring their areas of influence to the city limits. This peculiar situation results in extensive areas without religious influences. Within zones of this sort live hundreds of families—religions so far as profession is concerned—but entirely untouched by Christian institutions of any sort. Who will provide for these sheep without a shepherd?

Burbank's Latest

After experiments extending over eleven years, Luther Burbank, the plant wizard of California, claims to have evolved a "super-wheat," containing an unusually high percentage of gluten, and so sturdy that it may be grown anywhere, from Labrador to Patagonia. After testing it by comparison with sixty-eight of the best wheats of the world, he finds it superior in yield, uniformity and all other desirable characteristics. On average valley soil, without special cultivation, care, or fertilizing, it produced, during the past summer, almost fifty bushels per acre. All are ready to admire the skill and persistency of Mr. Burbank, in producing new varieties of plant life of superior merit. But why should there not be equal diligence by the Lord's people, in cultivating the great world field for the very best results—even an increase of a hundredfold?

The Palestine That Is to Be

Many of those, who have never had the opportunity to see the Land of Promise as it has presented itself to the tourist in recent years, may think that the country is wholly one of beauty and fertility, rich in climatic products, with extensive forest areas, spreading pastures for grazing flocks, and abounding vineyards. The reality is quite different. More than half of the country is now a war-devastated desert. The contending armies left behind them scenes of destruction that beggar description. Even the historic cedars of Mount Lebanon—mighty monarchs of the forest—have not escaped the ruthless hand of man. Some of the trees served in the construction of military railways; others supplied the demand for urgently-needed firewood. As now arranged, the rehabilitation of Palestine, on the most extensive scale, is to begin with irrigation systems after the best and most thoroughly approved plans. These will, undoubtedly, restore the land to its old-time productiveness and loveliness, so frequently alluded to in Holy Writ. One of the chief reclamation projects, now under consideration, involves the construction of a vast irrigation canal, by means of which thousands of acres of otherwise arid land may be made "to blossom as the rose." Another contemplated project plans the construction of an extensive drainage canal, south of the Dead Sea, by which a large amount of swampy land may be redeemed for agricultural purposes. Of chief interest, perhaps, is the move to transform Jerusalem itself into a great model city, along lines of modern progress, though still preserving its ancient landmarks. Concrete highways will radiate from the city, to reach all the scenes of sacred association. A series of parks, laid out with all the skill of the professional landscape gardener, will also serve to make the ancient city a place of attraction for the entire world. With the introduction of the best features of modern civilization, Jerusalem, as well as the country in general, will flourish as never before. One of the sacred writers speaks of the Holy City as "the joy of the whole earth." His description will aptly apply to the Jerusalem that is to be.

Brewers versus Missionaries

A. W. Davidson, an American missionary, stationed at Chung King, West China, recently returned to his field of labor. Stopping off at the Hawaiian Islands, he noted, to his great surprise, that a great shipment of brewery stock and machinery was being put on board, destined for China. As Mr. Davidson thought of the fact that there were just three missionaries on the ship, while practically all the cargo consisted of American brewery equipment, he was impressed with the inconsistency of the situation most strikingly. How incongruous that the same vessel that carried the Lord's ambassadors to a foreign shore, intent upon their mission of love, also had on board cargo from their native land that would probably counteract any influence for good that the missionaries might attempt to set on foot!

British May Vote on Local Option

Much uncalled for criticism has been bestowed on Mr. William E. Johnson, an American prohibition worker, who, by special request, went to England, some months ago, to help in arousing temperance sentiment. That the "baser element" hooted and jeered at his well-meant endeavors, was to be expected, but that indignities were visited upon him on one occasion by college men even, and resulted in the loss of an eye, is to be regretted. Mr. Johnson, however, takes it all with good grace, especially in view of the fact that a local prohibition bill, applying to England and Wales, has now been introduced in the House of Parliament. This, if passed, will undoubtedly be an entering wedge for still greater achievements along temperance lines later on. Mr. Johnson rejoices that he has done at least a little of the pioneer work.

Helping the Heathen to See

Missionaries are specialists in causing benighted heathens to obtain a vision of things spiritual and eternal—surely a worthy accomplishment. That, however, is only a part of the missionary's activity, for in practically every field he must administer to the needs of the body as well as the soul. In Africa, especially, the Lord's ambassador must have the requisite knowledge to prevent the milder forms of eye ailments, or to relieve them when already contracted. In the Nile Valley, owing to peculiar local conditions, about ninety-five per cent of the people have, for centuries, been suffering from ophthalmia. Before missionaries began to give efficient treatment for the disease, the natives considered it a necessary evil. Now, in hundreds of cases, the blind are made to see—physically as well as spiritually. To God be all the praise!

Christian Hymns Favorably Received in the Orient

With the triumphant progress of Christian missions throughout the eastern lands, a wonderful revolution has been wrought in the music of the people, according to recent reports of American missionaries. The weird and uncouth chords that for centuries have been the sum total of native music, are giving place to the strains of "Rock of Ages," "Onward, Christian Soldiers," and other sacred lyrics. Christian hymns are sung, and even played, by Orientals who have not yet accepted Christ. The rhythm of the songs strongly appeals to them, and proves a mighty incentive to a closer investigation of the claims of Christianity. Missionaries find that it is an easy matter to draw a crowd by means of sacred song, no matter how much antagonism there may be towards the Christian faith. Growing popularity of Occidental hymns is especially noticeable in Japan, China and India. In the last-named country, the recent coronation procession of a maharajah marched to the stirring strains of American Gospel hymns, played by the potentate's brass band. The highest development of Christian music, however, has been reached in Burmah, where Baptist converts among the natives have been trained for the past century in vocal and instrumental music. There the sacred lyrics have gained an especially strong hold upon the hearts of the people, exerting an influence unequalled by aught else. Note this incident: An Englishman, traveling in the foothills of Burmah, during the troublous days of the robber wars, suddenly came in sight of the torchlight flares of a large crowd of natives. He and his companions feared for the worst, when, to their most agreeable surprise, suddenly the familiar strains of "Lead, Kindly Light," were wafted to them, from the natives. They were Burmese Christians, engaged in a service of song and praise.

HOME AND FAMILY

December

BY MYRA BROOKS WELCH

The year is old and worn and gray,
The flowers tuck their heads away.
The trees are bare, the grass is brown,
With dead leaves lying all around.
While over all the gray clouds roll,
And standing forth a naked soul
The earth expels her icy breath,
While all around us speaks of death—
But joy comes with the frosty morn
For lo a little Child is born!
And angels chant the glad refrain
Of "peace on earth, good will to men."

"And They Saw the Young Child With Mary His Mother"

BY OMA KARN

"O maiden fair of Galilee!
O woman pure and sweet!
The shepherds and the Magi bowed
In reverence at thy feet.
O mother of the Son of God!
O woman ever blest!
Within the shelter of thine arms
The King found love and rest."

"It is no use, Ellen, we can not go any farther tonight."

An exclamation of dismay broke from Ellen Gregory's lips. She leaned forward and peered through the thickly-falling snow to where her husband was standing perplexed, beside the engine of their car. "But, Jerry," she insisted, "we must get through. Helen is expecting us every moment, doubtless waiting on us now. More than half of the success of her reception tonight depends on my being there. What is the matter with the car? It is strange that it is acting so. We've traveled over worse roads than these of tonight are, and got safely through every time."

"Through light, powdery snow, yes, but not through wet, heavy snow, such as this tonight is." The speaker stooped to look beneath the car, then muttered something for his own ear only—something not complimentary to himself for having started at all. He stood off and regarded the car—the way it was held by the drift into which he had run. "Helen Hamilton's party"—he used a more forcible expression than before. Then he said aloud, grimly: "I reckon I'll ruin 'Areo,' in order to make her party a success."

"Areo harmed or not harmed, we've got to go on," the woman in the car as grimly retorted, yet not without a touch of rising hysterics in her high-pitched voice. "For me to be at Stratton tonight and tomorrow means everything to Helen socially. Besides it is your fault that we missed the train and had to resort to the use of the car. Why did you not come straight home, instead of loitering around in the stores, buying presents for those dozen dirty-faced war-orphan babies, in whom your sister is so greatly interested? If Margaret would expend her energy in something more refining it might—"

The man interrupted by quietly stepping up close to the side of the car. Without a word he removed the heavy fur robe from the knees of the woman. He felt around in the interior of the car for luggage and property not safe to leave in it, alone along the roadside. "There's a light over there," he said pointing to a thin, uncertain glimmer shining faintly through the obscuring curtain of the falling snow. "I've an idea it's from the window of a farm-house. We'll go there for the night."

The woman offered no further remonstrance. She had lived with Jerrold Gregory ten years and she knew that, strong and passionate as was her own will, it was no match for that of her husband, when moved by the dangerous calmness with which he was running things that night. "Areo, indeed," was her bitter reflection as, with the assistance of his free arm, he helped her to alight. "Small wonder, though, that he should consider Areo ahead of me, when he delights in the thing more than he does in me, his wife." Aloud she only said: "What are you going to do with the car?"

"Leave it where it is. It is sufficiently conspicuous to be avoided, should any one come along, which is not likely to occur, considering the condition of the roads and the weather." As he spoke, the man produced a flashlight from his pocket, and, bidding his wife hold onto his arm, proceeded toward the light in the distance.

A short distance from where they left the car, a lane led off from the highway. Turning into this byway, the two floundered and stumbled through the fast deepening snow toward the twinkling beacon which was their goal. They came presently to a small dwelling, evidently the tenant-house of a large farm, or the home of a "small farmer." An athletic young countryman, in shirt sleeves and overalls, responded to the summons. After a moment of surprised scrutiny, standing squarely in the doorway, he stood aside, saying cordially: "Come right in," adding, as they paused on the porch, to shake the snow from their garments, "About used up, ar'n't you?"

"More so than I like to be," Jerrold Gregory admitted, following his wife into the warm, brightly-lighted interior of the dwelling, and explaining about the stalled car and their enforced delay.

The room into which they had been ushered was, as are so many of the rural home domains, kitchen and dining room combined. The only other inmate of the room, besides the young man, was a young girl of sufficient resemblance to her companion to be easily recognizable as his sister. The two hastened to become busy with hospitality. The young man proceeded to replenish the fire box of the shining range with coal and the young girl came forward to assist the strangers in divesting themselves of their wet wraps, and, in the case of the woman, of shoes and hosiery. As long as she lives, Ellen Gregory will remember with gratitude the comfort of the change from her water-soaked high-heeled "Dorothys" and her thin silk stockings, to the coarse cotton pair and the old felt bedroom slippers, furnished by her young hostess. The latter, as a finishing touch to her good Samaritan ministration, opened the oven door of the range and, after testing the temperature with her hand, audaciously thrust the feet of her perfectly submissive guest into its warm interior.

"Excuse us for keeping you in the kitchen," their host apologized, still bustling about on hospitable acts intent. "The room is much warmer, but—well, my wife is ill in there, and it might not be best for her to have you introduced while you are so damp."

"The room," into which presently, notwithstanding their remonstrances, they were conducted, was typical of the one just vacated—large, cheaply but comfortably furnished, and shining with rural cleanliness. A white iron bed, evidently only temporarily placed where it was, occupied one corner of the room. From its snowy pillows a young woman—a mere girl—of a shining, radiant countenance and wonderful starry eyes, looked with curious interest as the strangers were brought to her bedside. "My wife," the young man proudly said, and then fondly, as he gently turned back a corner of the bed covering, revealing to view a tiny silken head, nestled in the curve of the mother's arm: "Our son, one week old."

Ellen Gregory murmured the commonplace congratulations of conventional society. Jerrold, her husband, manifested his deeper feeling by planting an athletic slap on the young father's broad shoulder and the hearty remark: "You lucky dog, you." They went away from the bedside then, conducted by their host to seats around the glowing baseburner. It was the young man who suggested the moving of the car up to the barn. "There's plenty of room inside," he said, "and my team of grays will have it up here in less than no time."

The two men muffled themselves into outdoor garments and went forth, intent on the errand. The young maid remained in the kitchen, busy about some household task. Ellen Gregory was left alone with the Madonna-like mother.

The child at her side awakened and stirred. That most touching of all sounds, the faint, helpless, appealing cry of a young babe, brought the woman at the stove hastily to her feet. Deferentially she approached the bed and the radiant-faced, starry-eyed mother. "Can I do anything? May I take him up?" she wistfully asked.

"If you will," the young mother as graciously replied. "He is probably tired from lying so long in one position. I am not yet sufficiently strong to raise him," she explained, half apologetically.

Ellen Gregory gently took the small bundle into her arms. She wondered at her own deftness. "May I—will it hurt him to remove the blanket and look at him—enjoy him, I mean?" she laughingly corrected, as if the occasion demanded a better word than that describing mere gazing.

The mother smilingly assented. "It will do him good," she said. "Poor dear, he has had such few people to enjoy him beside ourselves. The weather has been so cold since he came."

Screened from the heat of the stove and the glare of the light, lying unwrapped across the visitor's knees, the baby stretched, crinkled his forehead, worked his button of a mouth and did about everything that is adorable in a week-old bit of humanity to do. Something latent—something that had been asleep in Ellen Gregory's heart, awoke. Thrill followed thrill through her body. She spread out one of the tiny rose-petal hands on one of her own soft-jeweled ones. The baby's hand fluttered, groped a moment and then closed around her finger—the finger from which shone the diamond of her wedding ring. The baby stretched again, yawned, and then the woman of pride and of fashion experienced that occasion so treasured by mothers—when the baby opens its eyes comprehendingly and looks up into the only heaven it knows, the eyes above it. The mother watching from the bed, was surprised, and the least bit concerned over the vehement manner in which the woman by the fire snatched the baby up into her arms and pressed the tiny body to her heart. "O you darling, you most-precious-of-treasures to human hearts," she breathed. "Who could resist loving you! Forgive me," she said, half embarrassedly to the woman on the bed. "He looked up at me, right into my eyes, and I just could not help loving him as I did," and the mother noted with surprise and with sympathy that the other woman's voice was shaken with emotion. Very timidly she ventured a question when, a little later, Ellen brought the now fussy baby to the bedside. "Have you lost a little child?" she gently asked.

Ellen Gregory flushed, hesitated, and then as gently made reply: "Worse than that, my dear, far worse. I've never known what it is to be a mother. I—" she faltered again, then was silent. How could she tell the woman, lying there before her—she of the glorified countenance and the starry eyes—that she, Ellen Gregory, was not a mother because she had not wanted a child. Instead, the stately, haughty woman of society did for her a very unprecedented thing. As she finished placing the child at its mother's breast she stooped and placed her lips to the brow of the mother. "O you favored of women," she softly murmured, and this time the tears came in a perfect gush. Turning she went back to her seat by the stove and sat musing until the return of her husband and his genial host.

It was a dazzingly bright, clear morning, a perfect Christmas Day morning, when Ellen Gregory, in the guest-room of the hospitable home into which they had drifted, raised herself from the depths of an immense feather-bed to look forth on a white, glorified earth. "Jerry," she said, arousing her still sleeping husband, "the storm is over. It is a beautiful morning, but the snow is very deep. Do you think we will be able to get through with the car?"

"Whether we can or can not, we are not going to try it," Jerrold Gregory drowsily responded. And then, in explanation, he said: "The young fellow here is going to hitch up his team and 'bob' us over to the railway station."

Ellen looked at her watch. The next moment she was out of bed and engaged in hastily dressing herself. "Then, Jerry," she said, "we've got to get a move on ourselves. According to the time No. 3 gets into Hilliard, it will be due here soon."

Jerrold Gregory regarded his wife in astonishment. "No. 3 does not go to Stratton," he patiently explained.

"No, but it does go to Hilliard. And, Jerry, there is where we are going. We are going back home this morning and help Margaret make Christmas for her war-orphan babies—and their mothers."

"O maidens fair! O maidens true!
O woman pure and sweet!
The noble and the peasant bow
In reverence at your feet.
O mothers of the sons of men!
O woman on the throne!
By love, by love, and motherhood,
The King shall find his own."

The School for Liars

BY EDNA VIOLET KERR

In Two Parts—Part Two

So the months passed, and never had calf such loving, tireless, anxious care. Never had a calf so responded to perfect care as Eddie's calf. And never had a boy so enjoyed the unique distinction of such universal esteem among his fellows as did that same Eddie, while his father was hailed with awe, as a prince among men.

Every Saturday and holiday the boys of Eddie's school were to be found in worshipful adoration about Eddie's pet. It might well have been a descendant of the "golden calf," or from a strain of sacred cattle, worshiped by certain heathen folks. And Eddie, in his popularity, bloomed and blossomed and saw his dad in a wonderful light, while the calf continued to wax fat and fair and of a size never before known on Alf Hinkley's place. For be it known that Alf's cattle were in general the scrubbiest among scrubs.

But by and by there came a day when Alf Hinkley awoke with amazement to the fact that here was an animal worth real money. Alf needed money—or thought he did.

Just the day before his wife had tremblingly stated that the time had now come when there must be some new things bought for the house. The kitchen range, especially, must be replaced by a new one if she was to be able to cook many more meals. Baking-day had become a terror to her and she had tried timidly to express some of this to her husband, for it was five years now since this range had given out and each year since then the subject had been fearfully broached and her heart had sunk into her boots, at Alf's refusal to understand. And now was it to be the same awful thing again?

"That's all I've heard for the last ten years!" roared Alf Hinkley. "You know I've got to have a binder before you can have a lot of fol-de-rols for the house and now, when I got a chanst to git a binder cheap, you think you half to have a stove! I guess if you got along this long with this stove, you can git along a while longer! I've got to have tools to work with if I'm goin' to farm. If you're goin' to run this here farm I'll move off!"

So the same old thing had happened, and as every year about that time Alf Hinkley began selling off everything that could bring in a little money, he began the survey of his possessions, with an eye to turning them quickly into ready cash. Even the young chickens his wife raised did not escape.

"Oh, ma, wha'd you think? I did just a terrible thing this morning," sobbed Eddie Hinkley. "I went over to the cornfield to chase a rabbit and forgot to shut the gate into the pasture. All the cattle got into the corn and when I was coming home I saw them. One was lying down, mebby dead"—

"My boy, how could you forget so soon? Your daddy just reminded you the other day," she answered, with shaking voice.

But Eddie was sobbing violently. "Oh, ma, he'll lick me something terrible, won't he?"

"I'm afraid so," answered his mother.

"What for did we marry him, ma?"

But Ma Hinkley couldn't answer that.

"Will you tell him, ma?"

"No, I won't tell. You must do that. You know, dear, he'll ask, and my boy couldn't lie, could he? Even if he doesn't ask, I know you would want to be honest enough to confess."

But strange to say, Alf Hinkley never suspected his son, for the gate was a poor one and it was not impossible that the cattle had walked over it.

The veterinary doctor had been summoned and Alf Hinkley had stayed until very late at the barn. The cattle were all saved and Eddie had gone to bed long before his father came in. Early in the morning his father was gone again and as yet Eddie had had no chance to confess his crime.

There never had entered Eddie's head the idea of letting the matter slip. Poor Eddie, remembering the bitter consequences of past misdemeanors, well knew what was in store for him the moment he had confessed, but it was not in him to evade the issue. Up to this time Eddie's conscience had been in perfect working order.

So, knowing all that he knew, and thinking of the trial before him when he should again return from school, it was a strangely distracted boy who went through the routine of lessons, missing more questions and misspelling more words than he had ever before been known to do.

Would he tell his dad before supper or after?—was the sorrowful question he asked himself all that day. But before he reached home he had bravely concluded to find his dad at once, take the torturous punishment and have it over with as soon as possible.

Then he knew that he would not be able to eat any supper, but would creep away to his beloved calf and there sob his heart out until his mother should come and take him away to bed.

Oh, yes, Eddie had been through it often enough to know perfectly every step.

Fifteen minutes ahead of time Eddie presented himself at the kitchen door. Great sobs were sticking in his throat.

"Ma," he gulped, "where's dad? I have to tell him now."

"He's down at the barn. A stock-buyer was here."

"Why, ma, you look as though you was a cryin'. Why, ma, you are a-cryin'! Why, ma, you har'ly ever cry!"

"It's your pet calf, dear. It's gone. You'll never see it again. Your father sold it to buy a binder."

"Ma, not my calf! My own calf!"

"Yes, your calf. It's gone."

Eddie was very pale. Many emotions were depicted in his little white face, all demanding utterance. But more than the terrible loss of his pet was the awful loss of confidence in his own father.

"He lied, ma. He lied. He said it was all mine to keep or sell. He's a liar!"

Up to his room he ran. He wouldn't for anything meet his dad now. His dad, of whom he had boasted to the other boys. His dad—a liar!

Eddie was not crying now. His face was hard and set. What was the use? If he should moan and sob till doomsday it would never bring back his pet. He knew his dad now.

Very well, he could keep still. So he kept still, and Alf Hinkley congratulated himself on getting off so easily. He had expected a storm—a terrible storm. But Eddie kept still. He is still keeping still.

"I'll never tell him now, about that gate," gasped Eddie that night. "I'll never tell him now, no matter what awful things I do. And I'll do 'em, too! I'll never tell!"

And Eddie never has.

A few days after this day of fellowship and hope, she suffered a serious relapse. Her patience and resignation to the Father's will were a spiritual fragrance and beauty that gave comfort to aching hearts. The angels came for her early in the morning of Aug. 12, and bore her unto new fellowships in the spirit world. To the home, which she had made so lovely and attractive, did the entire community come, to comfort their hearts in memories of a life well spent. Words of comfort and consolation were spoken by Brethren T. S. Moherman and J. A. Dove. Ministers of the Gospel bore the body to its last earthly resting-place.

As I write these last lines, I sit beside her grave—a lovely spot. Near by tower the lofty mountains. The winds come sweeping down from them soft and warm, carrying with them the breath of the pines through which they have come. Across the valley lie fertile fields and fruit-laden orchards. All these things make a picture—a fitting place in which to rest—to sleep the long sleep. Resting near her are a number of her own kith and kin, and as I look across this newly-made grave, I see a slender marble shaft on which are carved these words, spoken by the Master: "She is not dead but sleepeth." No, Sister Nininger is not dead, for such a life can not die.

So we will not say "good-bye," only "good night." Sleep on, and rest, until we all shall meet in the glad morning of the resurrection day! Good night.

Daleville, Va. Mrs. T. S. Moherman.

YES, OHIO VOTED DRY

One of our California friends inquires if Ohio voted dry. From conflicting newspaper reports and from some of the head-lines in wet newspapers, even some people in Ohio have been puzzled to know the real situation. We are glad to say that Ohio has not only voted dry but by a majority of 41,853 as compared with a majority of 25,000 one year ago. This refers to the vote on the question as to whether Ohio should again open her doors to the licensed saloon. There were three other temperance measures voted on. The second was also an amendment, asking the voters of the State to say that liquor containing two and three-quarters per cent alcohol by weight, or less, is not intoxicating. When the ballots were counted, it was learned that a majority of 28,781 votes declared that such liquor is intoxicating and can not be sold.

A third measure was a referendum, referring the ratification of the Federal Dry Amendment by the State Legislature to the people. This was a very close vote and is yet hanging in the balance. According to the official count there is a majority of 479, out of about a million votes, not favoring the ratification by the State Legislature. The drys have applied for a recount on this proposal. Even if the present decision should be sustained, there would be no definite loss, except that the temperance people of Ohio would be somewhat humiliated in not being permitted to join the overwhelming majority of her sister States in ratifying the Federal Dry Amendment.

A fourth measure, voted on, was a referendum on a law enforcement bill that had passed the State Legislature. On this measure the wets defeated the drys by 26,734 votes. But there will be little gain by the wets, and that only temporary, as on Jan. 16, 1920, when the Federal Dry Amendment goes into effect, all over the United States, the Prohibition Enforcement Law, enacted by Congress, and which is identical with the one defeated in Ohio, will also become operative.

We trust that this will clear up the matter to our friends outside of the State, so they may know that the drys won the victory in Ohio this year, and that they shall never again see a saloon within our borders, not even in Cincinnati, which has been the Mecca of the brewers and distillers for many generations, and who made it very difficult to gain a prohibition victory.

Greenville, Ohio. Levi Minnich.

HOME AGAIN

It is almost two months now since we landed in China. The days and weeks have flown swiftly by, each filled full with the duties that came our way. And when the time came to turn our faces westward again, toward the Orient, we were indeed happy. It is good to be "home again" among the needy of this land.

Our stay in the homeland was most pleasant and beneficial. It was interesting to see what changes had come to the community, the church and the country, in the brief lapse of seven years. We often remarked: "How the missionary spirit has grown!" "How the church is awake to the large opportunities confronting her in the world today! How she is making herself most useful, in meeting the issues and demands of the day! How she is growing more prayerful, more given to intercession for the promulgation of our Lord's kingdom on the earth, and for the mighty host of young people whom she is laboring to educate and train for the church!" For all this, and more, we are glad, as also for the helpful association the fourteen months brought us.

It is interesting to compare the spirit of the day with the spirit of fifteen and twenty years ago. Then few children asked to become missionaries, nor did parents lend their influence toward thus leading a child. There was not as much consecration of children for the Lord's work wherever he might wish to use them. While we were home on furlough, we often met talented young people who are in preparation for missionary work—their parents encouraging them in every way. Often we met parents with young children who desired the missionary to come into their home, so that the children might have the personal touch. They would say: "Carol and Mary often talk about being missionaries when they grow up and we want to do all we can to foster that spirit, for we desire them to be used where the Lord wills."

Thus the Spirit is moving the church in a tremendous way and awakening the dormant powers and talents for fuller and larger service. It is not only with the young and middle-aged that the forces for righteousness are so

BIBLE INSTITUTE AT JUNIATA COLLEGE

Perhaps the last is always the best in the life of a Christian—at any rate, that is the common verdict of the Bible Institute at Juniata, held the first week of December.

Dr. M. G. Brumbaugh gave two addresses at the opening, in which be set forth clearly and strongly the importance of the Bible " from lid to lid " as the only true foundation of faith. He made a strong appeal for the establishment of laws, governing our public schools, that will provide the best physical development without any military training connected with it.

It was a pleasure to have Dr. D. W. Kurtz, President of McPherson College, and Chairman of the General Educational Board, with Bishop J. W. Lear, another member of the Board, present at the opening of the Institute. Both gave splendid talks at chapel. On Monday evening Dr. Kurtz took the time of President I. Harvey Brumbaugh, to deliver one of his characteristically strong addresses on education. Their visit was much appreciated by the trustees, faculty and student body, as well as many others.

Sunday-school Day was helpful indeed, and the climax was reached when Dr. Frank H. Green, of West Chester, Pa., delivered his splendid lecture on " The Greatest Bnsiness in the World. " He pointed out that it was none other than the training of the young life for the best Christian citizenship.

" Church Day " was filled with many good things. Perhaps the most interesting period was the one conducted by Dr. Dupler, when he called for the problems in the churches represented and in an open conference these were discussed and suggestions offered.

Missionary Day easily made a blessed climax for the Institute. Besides most able and interesting addresses by Brethren J. M. Blough and J. B. Emmert, bome on furlough from India, Rev. Geo. W. Rhoad, of the African Inland Mission, was present. His presentation was unusually strong because of his terse way of presenting things, and his comparisons of customs in the heart of Africa with similar ones in contrast in this country.

In the evening Brother J. B. Emmert showed the work in India by means of beautifully-colored slides. This was followed by another lecture on Africa, with slides also. Both lectures were most interesting and illuminating. Missionary enthusiasm ran bigb. Mr. Morgan Thomas, a business man of Philadelphia, supporting Rev. Rhoad in Africa, bore all the expense of the trip here, and refused any compensation for Rev. Rhoad's labors. He was present and did more. When a move was made to take up an offering for the African Inland Mission, Mr. Thomas announced that he would place a dollar in the offering for every one the audience gave. As a result, he gave $130.46, making the total that evening $260.92 for the African Inland Mission. Upon invitation by Rev. Rhoad, a number stood, expressing their willingness to go to India or Africa, if the Lord opens the way. Interest in missions was shown by the large number of persons who sougbt personal interviews.

Dr. C. C. Ellis was present to make the closing address: " The Call of the World to Christian Young Men." College adjourned for the hour, to do him honor and to make it possible for every student to hear his masterly appeal to make the most of one's life.

The attendance from the outside was a splendid increase over one year ago. It is our purpose to make the next Institute still better. We rejoice in God's goodness to us.

Notes From Our Correspondents

As cold water to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country

CALIFORNIA

Fresno church met in regular business session Dec. 1, with Eld. J. H. Stover presiding. Among other reports made, Bro. Stover announced that Bro. J. Edwin Jarboe will be with us in a series of meetings in March. It was decided to organize senior and intermediate Christian Workers' Meetings. The following church and Sunday-school officers were elected: Elder, J. H. Stover; clerk, O. N. Whitlow; Sunday-school superintendent, J. Frank Bowers; primary superintendent, Harriet Thompson; Christian Workers' president, Cora Simpson.—Mrs. O. N. Whitlow, Fresno, Calif., Dec. 3.

Inglewood congregation enjoyed a real spiritual love feast Nov. 30, with Bro. Wertenbaker officiating. About seventy members, including visitors, commmned. Bro. G. W. Hilton, of Los Angeles, preached a splendid examination sermon in the forenoon, using James 1: 24-26 as his text. Nov. 23 our Sunday-school finished raising the yearly amount for the support of a native worker in China. We are planning a " grand ing " Christmas again this year, and the offering will be used for the Armenian-Syrian Relief.—Susan Stoner, Inglewood, Calif., Dec. 2.

Lindsay.—Nov. 2 Brother and Sister J. Edwin Jarboe, of Chicago, came to help us in revival meetings, which were well attended. Twenty-five confessed Christ, of whom eighteen were baptized. Nov. 25 we held our love feast, with Bro. Jarboe officiating. One hundred and forty-nine members were present. We are busy preparing two programs for Christmas, one to be given by the children and one by the adults. We had a very good Thanksgiving service at the church in the morning, in which many expressed their thanks to God for the blessings given to them. An offering of $35 was taken as a part of the practical expression of thanks, to be sent to the Mission Board. In the evening our pastor, Bro. M. S. Frantz, preached at the union service in Lindsay. On the second Thursday of our meetings the Ladies' Aid of the community held their annual meeting at the church, and a good crowd of friends and neighbors was present. All enjoyed the basket dinner, by which the spirit of cooperation and good will was encouraged.—Mrs. I. D. Yoder, Lindsay, Calif., Dec. 4.

Pasadena.—Our love feast was held Nov. 9, with a splendid attendance. Bro. J. P. Dickey, of La Verne College, officiated and the meeting was a spiritual uplift for the members. Nov. 23 our Junior Christian Workers, among whom there is some splendid talent, gave an excellent program with " The Life of Joseph." Our pastor followed with a sermon on the same subject. At the Thanksgiving services an offering of $98.74 was taken for World-wide Missions. Our church met in a business session Nov. 28, and officers for the year 1920 were elected as follows: Elder, Bro. W. E. Scantlin; clerk, J. Albert Heckman. Several other members were elected on committees. Our Sunday-school superintendent, Bro. Ray Olwin, having been elected three months previous, only a part of the Sunday-school officers remained to be chosen at this meeting. The missionary committee presented a high standard goal for the church, which was adopted at this time. —Ida B. Gibbel, Pasadena, Calif., Dec. 1.

COLORADO

Denver church met in quarterly council Dec. 3. As our pastor, Bro. G. W. Burgin, is thinking of leaving us for the present, we have chosen Bro. Fike as our elder for the present time. Bro. Mary Keller gave us a splendid report of the District Meeting, held at Quinter, Kans., as well as a report of the Sunday-school Meeting. A committee was appointed to secure a pastor for the coming year. Bro. G. W. Burgin, who has been our pastor for the last four years, served us well, and made many sacrifices. He has urgent calls elsewhere and has decided to leave us. Church officers as well as Sunday-school officers were elected for the coming year. Bro. S. I. Miller is our Sunday-school superintendent. Sister H. C. Long, who has been our superintendent for many years, was obliged, owing to failing health, to resign from this work, as well as had to choose some one else. Our church is progressing very nicely. Any information regarding our church or our country will be cheerfully answered.—W. R. Cline, 1070 Gas and Electric Building, Denver, Colo., Dec. 9.

IDAHO

Boise Valley church met in council Dec. 6, with Eld. Keim presiding. Four were received into the church by letter. Our Sunday-school was reorganized for the first six months of 1920 by Bro. Roy Rhodes, superintendent. The writer was chosen president of the Christian Workers' Meeting for the same period. A committee was also chosen to make an effort to secure a pastor for the coming year.—Mrs. C. E. Sandy, Meridian, Idaho, Dec. 8.

Fruitland was so bonntifully blessed during the past year that, in remembrance, a union meeting of the various churches was held in the Brethren house Nov. 27. In the morning a very appropriate program was rendered by our united choir. Bro. Harvey Stuffer Others, what they were thankful for, and then on down to us, and what we are thankful for. At noon a very tempting dinner was served, which put every one in the best of humor for the meeting. In the afternoon Miss Nickols, who recently escaped from the " Good Shepherd Home " in Chicago, gave a lecture on the conditions in the Home.—Vida Beekwith, Fruitland, Idaho, Dec. 4.

ILLINOIS

Astoria church met in council Dec. 6, with Eld. A. H. Lind in charge. Four letters were granted and one was received. A committee was appointed to make arrangements for a Bible Institute to be held in the Astoria church. Bro. S. S. Blough was reelected elder for one year. Sunday-school and church officers were elected, with Bro. John Ruth, superintendent; Sister Victoria Inboar; Bro. Harvey Stuffer for South Fulton; Bro. Roy Myers, president of Christian Workers' Meeting; Sister S. S. Blough, president of the Aid Society.—Goldie Eichenberg, Astoria, Ill., Dec. 9.

Cedar Creek.—Dec. 6 Bro. H. G. Shanely call Chicago, began a series of meetings in this place. The extremely cold weather makes it difficult for people to get out, but the interest is good. We expect the meetings to continue till Christmas, and a love feast will be held on Christmas evening. There will be an all-day meeting on Christmas, beginning at 10 o'clock.—Mrs. David Ober, Garrett, Ind., Dec. 11.

Champaign.—Thanksgiving Day will be long remembered by the church and the resident portion of the north part of the city, as a day of rejoicing. A bountiful feast was spread out on the Market House in all astir, early in the morning, with eager children and anxious mothers, for at high noon a community dinner was served. This was made possible by the generous contributions of thanksgiving offerings, who furnished twenty-two dressed chickens and four rabbits for the occasion. We had a real least of good things, to satisfy the temporal body. We served dinner to 164 persons of the community, of whom many had to be fed the Thanksgiving sermon, by our elder, Bro. Jesse Ebright, Bro. Ira E. Long. His sermon was on " The Great Feast " and was very impressive. At the close the invitation was extended and four of our Sunday-school scholars came forward and made a rejoicing, and were immediately baptized, but a greater feast awaited us in the evening, when nine accepted Christ. These nine and five more were born into the Kingdom on Sunday afternoon. Besides the eighteen baptized there were three reclaimed and three renewed their covenant with Christ. Since the last report there were twenty-one baptised, three restored, three renewed their vow with the church, and two received by letter. Two have been received by letter. Our revival, conducted by Bro. Ira E. Long, continued for three weeks and the meeting was one of the best—if not the best—the Champaign church has had. It came to a close on Sunday evening in a most enjoyable love feast, which filled every one with the Lord's table. About one-half of them were new members or those who communed for the first time.—Alice A. Kitson, 1210 North Champaign Street, Champaign, Ill., Dec. 9.

Milledgeville church has been enjoying special day feasts recently. One Sunday the little folks showed what they were doing in the opening exercises of the Primary Department. Another Sunday the whole school rallied with an attendance of 185, and a collection of $14. The teachers gave short talks on the study of the lesson for their individual classes. Our Thanksgiving Harvest Meeting was a least day for the whole community. After a bountiful dinner, we listened to a splendid address by Prof. Brumbaugh, of Mt. Morris College. The collection for the General Mission Board amounted to $76.20. Seven of our boys attended the Boys' Conference at Aurora, and the report given on their return inspired the whole audience. Our church has organized a Missionary Committee. Already our young people have given us an excellent program. At least one-fourth of our members are reading mission literature and greater plans are being laid.—Mrs. S. L. Whitler, Milledgeville, Ill., Dec. 11.

Oakley church held an all-day meeting on Thanksgiving Day, with Bro. M. Flory conducting the morning services. In the afternoon Bro. J. O. Barnhart was elected to the ministry, and Bro. Geo. A. Barber was elected deacon. A love feast was held in the evening. Our council was held a few weeks previous to this, at which time Bro. D. J. Blickenstaff was chosen elder for the next two years, and Minnie Blickenstaff was reelected Sunday-school superintendent for the coming year.—Jennie Wagner, Oakley, Ill., Dec. 9.

Sterling.—Nov. 30 was a full day and we rejoiced when another was reinstated. Following was the examination service, preparatory to the feast; then the election for two deacons was held, the choice being in favor of Brethren Jesse Fisher and Henry Frye. The installation duly followed, being conducted by Eld. C. M. Suter. The evening least was much enjoyed, members from Polo, Dixon, and Franklin Grove being present; also Sister Lydia E. Taylor, of Mt. Morris. Brethren J. J. Johnson, G. L. Wine, C. M. Suter and C. A. Bryan were with us, Bro. Johnson officiating. Altogether we had a day of rejoicing and encouragement, with many spiritual blessings.—H. B. Mohler, Sterling, Ill., Dec. 10.

INDIANA

Auburn.—Auburn, the county-seat of Dekalb County, is a flourishing little town of about six thousand population. Its many factories afford employment to hundreds of working people, and the constant demand for more laborers makes it an inviting place lor those who must in this way earn a livelihood. Situated in one of the best parts of the city is the mission church of the Brethren. The members are few in number, but they have labored faithfully, and are now rejoicing to see others coming into their midst. Bro. J. C. Shull, of North Manchester, Ind., has charge of the work at present. The prospects are bright and we feel that the little vine here will he abundantly fruitful. Those who may be considering a change of location will find at Auburn not only a pleasant home, and advantages for earning a livelihood, but abundant opportunities for service in the Lord's work.—Clara M. Shull, North Manchester, Ind., Dec. 8.

Bachelor Run church met in council Dec. 3, with Eld. Ira Kreider presiding. One letter was granted and Sunday-school and church officers were elected, with Bro. Emerson Wagoner, superintendent. Our present elder was retained for the coming year.—Pearl Sink, Flora, Ind., Dec. 8.

Green Grove church has reasons for rejoicing, since Thanksgiving Day was such a Spirit-filled day. In the morning our evangelist, Bro. Hoppis, spoke on " World Heroes." A collection was taken and the money devided equally between Bro. J. W. Shepherd, of Marion, Ind., and the late Eld. Geo. E. Bowman's family. The Sunday-school also sent $7 to Bro. O. F. Helm, of Georgia. At the noon hour a basket dinner was served in the basement. In the afternoon a praise service was conducted by our elder, Bro. Morris. One young man came forward and reconsecrated his life. In the evening our young people gave a short program, after which Bro. Hoppis spoke. On the following Sunday three came forward. Dec. 6 we held our regular council, with Eld. E. O. Myers in charge. Bro. Marion Norris was elected superintendent of the Sunday-school. All officers were reelected for the Christian Workers' Meeting. We also organized an Aid Society, with the writer as president. Immediately after services two came forward for baptism. Our revival services are now in progress.—Mrs. Edna Norris, Fortville, Ind., Dec. 8.

Camp Creek church met in council Dec. 6, with Eld. Christian Metzler in charge. Bro. Swihart, of Elkhart Valley, and Bro. Reuben Shroyer, our evangelist, were elected. New officers for the coming year were elected: Bro. Metzler, elder; Bro. Dan Flory, Sunday-school superintendent; Bro. Owen Harley, Christian Workers' president. Our three weeks' series of meetings closed last Friday night. Attendance and interest were very good. There were no accessions but the members were greatly strengthened in zeal for the Master.—Laura Harley, Etna Green, Ind., Dec. 8.

Red River church met in council Nov. 30, with Eld. Amos Freed presiding. Elders C. F. Eiler, F. D. Butterbaugh and Moyne Landis assisted. Six letters were granted, and officers were elected for next year: Bro. Amos Freed, elder; Bro. Mervin Freed, Sunday-school superintendent. Nov. 16 Bro. Aaron Moss, Manchester College, was with us both morning and evening, and gave addresses along Sunday-school lines. The following Sunday Bro. Aaron Moss preached for us. Thanksgiving Day Bro. Moss was with us again and gave us a fine sermon. On the evening of Dec. 24 we expect to render a Christmas program.—Laura Miller, North Manchester, Ind., Dec. 6.

Kewanna church met in council Dec. 5, with Eld. Geo. Swihart presiding. Our pastor, Bro. Roy S. Mishler, and wife, were ordained to the eldership by Brethren J. G. Stinebaugh, Ira Kreider and Silas Fisher. The election of officers for the coming year resulted as follows: Sunday-school superintendent, Bert Gorsline; church clerk, reelected; " Messenger " agent, Mrs. Ida Arnett, Myrle Mishler; Christian Workers' president, Bert Gorsline.—Susie Gibbs, Rochester, Ind., Dec. 8.

Manchester.—Our evangelistic campaign began Sunday, Nov. 9. Bro. J. E. Henry, of Washington, D. C., was with us in seven meetings, the last one being held Thanksgiving eve. Twenty-five accepted Christ. Bro. T. E. George delivered our Thanksgiving sermon on Thursday morning. An offering of $50 was lifted for the Poor Fund and we went over the top, in payment of our additional pledge to the Annual Conference Missionary offering. Nov. 30 Bro. Roger Winger gave us a splendid address on the " Call of the World," showing the present needs arising from the great world war, and the opportunities for leading men to the real God. Thursday evening, Dec. 4, was our regular quarterly council, at which Eld. T. E. George presided. We have been favored with a number of reports and all of the various committees were read and accepted. The usual church officers were elected.—Ivah M. Grossnickle, North Manchester, Ind., Dec. 6.

Notice.—The Ministerial Association of Northern Indiana will hold the next regular meeting at the Goshen City church, Saturday, Dec. 20. Owing to the fact that this is the time for the election of officers, and because of the important subjects to be discussed at this meeting, we hope that all of the ministers in attendance at the ministers of the District.—H. L. Hartsough, Secretary, Nappanee, Ind., Dec. 9.

Peru church met in council Dec. 4, with Eld. Ira Kreider presiding. Officers for the Sunday-school and church were elected for the coming year: Sunday-school superintendent, Bro. Marvin Dailey; Sunday Department superintendent, Sister Martha Barnhart; Cradle Roll, Sister Esther Cripe; clerk, Sister Catherine Erb; " Messonger " agent, Sister Martha Barnhart.—Mabel Neff, Peru, Ind., Dec. 8.

Pine Creek.—I wonder how many of our " messenger " readers read the President's Thanksgiving Proclamation. If you haven't, read it yet. You will find it in the issue of Nov. 22. I am wondering, too, how many of our church doors were open on Thanksgiving Day for services? We surely have much to be thankful for. We met for services on Thanksgiving morning at the East house. Bro. Arthur Long preached a splendid sermon and an offering of $31.24 was taken. We also had a treat of nothing, as cakes, pies, baked beans, butter, lard, meat, dried and canned fruit, sweet potatoes, cookies, apples and $42.10 to provide a Thanksgiving dinner for some of the poor people in Chicago. We expect to have a Bible Institute during the holidays. Bro. J. Hugh Heckman, of Oak Park, Ill., will be our instructor and will preach for us on Saturday evening, Dec. 27; also Sunday morning and evening. Monday morning the Institute will begin—The meetings to be held at the East house.—M. S. Morris, North Liberty, Ind., Dec. 10.

Pleasant View church met in council Dec. 6, with Eld. J. A. Snell presiding. The Sunday-school was reorganized with Bro. Noah Kreider, superintendent. Other officers and committees were elected. Bertha Snell was elected correspondent and " Messenger " agent. Bro. W. W. Peters, of North Manchester College, preached for us on Thanksgiving morning. Subject, " Our Debt." Bro. Robert Sink, also from the College, preached an inspiring sermon, which was much appreciated.—Bertha Snell, South Whitley, Ind., Dec. 9.

Roann church met in council, with Eld. J. D. Rife in charge. Bro. C. C. Kindy, of Huntington, Ind., is expected here Jan. 11, to begin a series of meetings for us. Eld. E. F. Warner was elected " Messenger " agent. Sister Tressie M. Hoeter resigned her office as superintendent of the Cradle Roll, and Sister Della Fugett was chosen in her stead. We distributed the Christmas envelopes among the children on Sunday evening, Dec. 28. Dec. 7 the Sunday-school offering was sent to the General Mission Board. Eld. J. D. Rife handed in his resignation for the coming year, and Eld. E. F. Warner was chosen to serve for the next three months. Dec. 7 Mr. U. S. Bonsib, of Indianapolis, Ind., a national prohibition lecturer, gave us an interesting and entertaining talk. We reorganized our Sunday-school for the first six months of 1920, with Bro. Ray Figert reelected as our Sunday-school superintendent. The reorganization of the Christian Workers' Meeting resulted in Bro. C. C. Miller being retained as president.—Sarah C. Miller, Roann, Ind., Dec. 8.

Rock Run.—Nov. 31 was Missionary Day. A blizzard was raging all day Sunday, so we had a very small attendance—only thirty-three being present. Bro. Otho Winger gave a very good missionary talk, after which an offering of $23.21 was taken. Dec. 4 was our quarterly council, when new officers for the year were elected, with Bro. Frank Phillips superintendent; Bro. Elmer Yoder, Christian Workers' president. We recently started a Sunday-school library, and have about seventy-five volumes. Our elder, Bro. Berkey, donated about one dozen books, which we appreciate very much. We expect to hold our installation services Dec. 28.—Mrs. Clarence R. Cripe, Goshen, Ind., Dec. 5.

Shipshewana church met in council Dec. 6 and elected all new

d employment to hundreds of working people, and the constant nd for more laborers makes it an inviting place for those who in this way earn a livelihood. Situated in one of the best of the city is the nation church of Brethren. The members ew in number, but they have labored faithfully, and are now re- g to see others coming into their midst. Bro. J. Peru church met in council Dec. 4, with Eld. Ira Kreider presiding. fficers for the Sunday-school and church were elected for the coming ar: Sunday-school superintendent, Bro. Marvin Dailey; Home De- artment superintendent, Sister Martha Barnhart; Cradle Roll, Sister esther Cripe; clerk, Sister Catherine Erb; "Messenger" agent, ister Martha Barnhart.—Mabel Neff, Peru, Ind., Dec. 8.

Pine Creek.—I wonder how many of our "Messenger" readers read e President's Thanksgiving Proclamation. If you haven't, read it ow. You will find it in the issue of Nov. 22. I am wondering, too, ow many of our church doors were open on Thanksgiving Day for rvices? We surely have many things to be thankful for. We met r services on Thanksgiving morning at the East house. Bro. rthur Long preached a splendid sermon and an offering of $21.24 as taken. We also sent one barrel of clothing, twenty-seven chick- ns, butter, lard, meat, dried and canned fruit, sweet potatoes, ookies, apples and $42.40 to provide a Thanksgiving dinner for some f the poor people in Chicago. We expect to have a Bible Institute uring the holidays. Hugh Heckman, of Oak Park, Ill., will be our instructor and will preach for us on Saturday evening, Dec. 7; also Sunday morning and evening. Monday morning the Institute will begin—the meetings to be held at the East house.—M. S. Mor- ris, North Liberty, Ind., Dec. 10.

Pleasant View church met in council Dec 6, with Eld. J. A. Snell residing. The Sunday-school was reorganized with Bro. Noah reider, superintendent. Other officers and committees were elected. ertha Snell was elected correspondent and "Messenger" agent. ro. W. W. Peters, of North Manchester College, preached for us on Thanksgiving morning. Sunday morning, Dec. 7, Bro. Robert Sink, lso from the College, was an inspiring speaker, which was much appreciated.—Bertha Snell, South Whitley, Ind., Dec. 9.

Roann church met in council, with Eld. J. D. Rife in charge. Bro. C. Kindy, of Huntington, Ind., is expected here Jan. 11, to begin a series of meetings for us. Eld. E. Hoover was chosen "Mes- senger" agent. Sister Tressie M. Hoeter resigned her office as superintendent of the Cradle Roll, and Sister Della Fwert was chosen in her stead. We decided to have a Christmas entertainment by the children on Sunday evening, Dec. 28.—Dec. 7 the Sunday-school of- fering was sent to the General Mission Board. Eld. J. D. Rife handed in his resignation three months ago and Eld. I. E. Warren was chosen to serve for the next three months.—Dec. 7 Mr. H. S. Bowlby, of Indianapolis, Ind., a national prohibition lecturer, gave us an in- teresting and entertaining talk. We reorganized our Sunday-school for the first six months of 1920, with Bro. Ray Figert elected as superintendent. The reorganization of the Christian Workers' Meeting resulted in Bro. C. C. Miller being retained church, Sunday-school and Christian Workers' officers for next year. We are without a minister at present, but are expecting Bro. C. S. Lehman to locate with us next spring. Sister Bessie Sherek is church correspondent and "Messenger" agent.—Nora Bollinger, Shipshewana, Ind., Dec. 9.

Turkey Creek church met in council Dec. 7, with Eld. Henry Wyland presiding. The Sunday-school election resulted in Bro. Geo. Bisher being chosen superintendent. The last hour of the meeting was given in trying to draft plans whereby the church could get in closer touch with the home life of the people. A committee was selected to study this problem from all angles, and report as early as possible.—Mrs. H. L. Hartsough, Nappanee, Ind., Dec. 9.

Upper Deer Creek church met in council Dec. 6, with Bro. Ira Kreider presiding, assisted by Bro. John Flora, of the Howard church, and Bro. J. G. Stinebaugh, of Lower Deer Creek church. Sunday-school and church officials were elected for the coming year: Bro. Ira Kreider, elder. Bro. John Smith was elected deacon.—Mrs. Geo. R. Murphy, Lincoln, Ind., Dec. 8.

West Eel River church met in council Nov. 29, with Brethren Amos Freed, Abraham Miller, Emanuel Leckrone, T. D. Butterbaugh and C. F. Eiker presiding. Reports of different committees were read and accepted. Some of the officers elected are, Bro. Abraham Miller, elder for the coming year; Bro. Roy Kline, Sunday-school superintendent; the writer, church correspondent; Bro. Roy Kline, church clerk; Bro. Clarence Rush on the program committee of the joint Sunday-school Meeting. Our revival meetings begin Dec. 14, and are to be conducted by Bro. J. W. Norris, of North Manchester.—Ruth Metzger, Claypool, Ind., Dec. 8.

West Marion church had an all-day service on Thanksgiving Day. Eld. D. A. Hummer, of North Manchester, was with us and preached two inspiring sermons. Dinner was served in the basement. Following the afternoon session a Sunday-school scholar was baptized, and in the evening we had a very spiritual love feast, with Eld. Hummer officiating and our pastor, Bro. R. E. Gotschall, assisting. The following Sunday two more were elected to the church. We are expecting our new pastor, Bro. J. K. Ikenberry, from Iowa, to begin his work with us Dec. 1. Bro. R. E. Gotschall is moving to the Bethel Center church, near Hartford City, Ind.—Mary Norris Gotschall, Marion, Ind., Dec. 6.

IOWA

English River church met in quarterly council Nov. 22, with the writer in charge. Steps are being taken to assist in carrying out the "Forward Movement" program. A Mission Study Class has been organized. Bro. Sam Brower is our Sunday-school superintendent, and Bro. Frank Brown our Christian Workers' president. Our Thanksgiving offering to the General Mission Board amounted to $42.52. We expect Eld. J. W. Lear, of Chicago, to be with us in a special Bible term during the holidays.—J. D. Brower, South English, Iowa, Dec. 4.

Greene church met in council Dec. 6, with Eld. W. H. Lichty presiding. Church and Sunday-school officers were elected as follows: Sister Rosie Klingery, clerk; Bro. Buntain, "Messenger" agent; the writer, correspondent; Bro. Paul Shook, superintendent; Sister Amanda Blickenstaff, Primary superintendent; the writer, Home Department superintendent. New officers were also elected on the Missionary, Temperance and Pastoral committees. Three letters were granted. The church is looking forward to a revival meeting in June, 1920, to be conducted by Bro. J. W. Lear, of Chicago. We also expect to secure a singer to take charge of the music. Bro. J. F. Eikenberry, who is past eighty-eight years of age, has been among the most faithful ones in attendance at services since his return from California last Easter, which is an inspiration to all. The Sunday-school is preparing a Christmas program. We also expect to have this a "giving" Christmas. Dec. 7 Bro. Lichty gave us a splendid sermon on "Satan's Traps." Owing to the serious coal situation our Sunday evening services have been dispensed with until further notice.—Elsie A. Pyle, Greene, Iowa, Dec. 8.

Monroe County.—Bro. W. R. Miller, of Michigan, was with us a week, beginning Nov. 24, giving us a series of illustrated Bible Land lectures, which we highly appreciated very much. Although we had some rather disagreeable weather, it did not seem to keep many of the people Nafinger, president of Christian Workers. At our Thanksgiving away. On Sunday morning Bro. Miller gave a splendid sermon and in the evening he told of his experiences in Arabia.—Mrs. Beulah Cook, Fredrie, Iowa, Dec. 6.

KANSAS

Appanooso church met in council Dec. 6, with Eld. C. W. Shoemaker presiding. Four letters were granted. A committee was chosen to confer with some one to hold our series of meetings the coming year. Church, Sunday-school and Christian Workers' officers were chosen: John Word, church clerk; John Word, Sunday-school superintendent; Henry the writer, correspondent. Sunday-school and Sunday-school superintendent; Henry Ward, president of Christian Workers' Meeting. Our Thanksgiving offering was sent to the Armenian-Syrian Relief.—Mrs. Cordelia B. Beckner, Overbrook, Kans., Dec. 8.

Garden City.—With the one previously reported, four have now been baptized as a direct result of the revival, conducted here by Brother and Sister H. F. Crist, of Colorado Springs, Colo. That, however, is but a small part of the good results of the meetings, for we have made a rededication of life.—H. D. Michael, Garden City, Kans., Dec. 5.

McPherson.—One of the most successful revivals, held in this congregation for some time, closed last night. Eld. J. Edson Ulery, of Ouckama, Mich., was the evangelist. For two weeks he held forth the Word with power. The large audiences were especially gratifying to both the minister and the members. As a direct result of the special effort, eleven were baptized—most of them adults. Bro. Ulery endeared himself to this church and made many friends while here. A simple message, striking illustrations, and a persuasive appeal, characterized his efforts. Our love feast, scheduled for Dec. 8, was postponed on account of the shortage of coal. During the absence of our pastor in Armenia, the pulpit is being filled by Dr. D. W. Kurtz and other local ministers.—E. L. Craik, College Hill, McPherson, Kans., Dec. 8.

Morrill church met in council Dec. 3, with Bro. W. H. Yoder presiding. Sunday-school and church officers were elected, with Bro. N. U. Saylor, superintendent; Bro. Forney, "Messenger" agent; the writer, correspondent. We had our first number of the lecture course Dec. 9. Rolf Abel gave a chalk talk, which was good. Our next number will be the McPherson Quartette and reader, Dec. 23. The McPherson Gospel Team was with us Sunday evening, Nov. 23, and gave a fine program to a full house. We give the Beatrice Assembly a hearty invitation to meet at Morrill next year.—Mrs. H. E. Bowers, Morrill, Kans., Dec. 3.

Navarre.—Nov. 2 Bro. S. E. Thompson, of Clovis, N. Mex., began evangelistic meetings at this place, continuing for three weeks. Bro. Thompson is a forceful and interesting speaker, and the attendance was greater than we have had for a number of years. Seven of our Sunday-school scholars were baptized Nov. 23, and two await the rite. Sister Jordan, who has recently moved to our congregation, led the song service in a creditable manner. Dec. 7 we had planned a Homecoming service, but it was postponed because of the bad weather. However, Bro. Forney and Bro. J. Clyde Forney, formerly of this place, were among us, the former preaching in the morning and the latter in the evening.—Orcu C. Rock, Enterprise, Kans., Dec. 8.

Overbrook church met in council Nov. 22, with Bro. Heckman presiding. [illegible]

MARYLAND

Broadfording.—Nov. 15 Bro. W. G. Group, of East Berlin, Pa., into our midst and began a series of meetings in the Broadfo church, which closed Nov. 30. Three became willing to come o the Lord's side and attendance received very large. Five were re into the church by baptism. Nov. 9 our church met in council. lection of over $129 was taken for church expenses and it was d to take collections at each of our regular services. Our love was held Nov. 16 and was very impressive, with Bro. Fike o ing. We had special services on Thanksgiving morning and lection of $8 was taken, half of the amount to go to the Relief and the other half into the church treasury. Bro. J. S. B of the Pleasant View congregation, preached for us on Sunday ing, Nov. 30, on the ministerial problem of our church. His ta very interesting and instructive, and we have a better concept the ministerial work and its needs, and the necessity of callin young men to the ministry and training them for service. Nellie S. Kaetzel, Brownsville, Md., Dec. 8.

Denton.—We enjoyed having with us, Nov. 23, Brethren C. D sack and E. C. Bixler, of New Windsor, Md., the former pre for us in the morning, and the latter in the evening. Thanks Day we joined with the Methodist and Presbyterian Protestant ch in a union service, held in the former church. Our pastor, Ele K. Ziegler, preached to a large audience. We also held a Than ing service in our own church in the evening, when Bro. Zieg livered another sermon. Nov. 30 a missionary program was dered, which had been arranged by the Missionary Committe the spring a dime had been given to each Sunday-school pu the superintendent, to be invested. At this time the proceed brought in and amounted to $150, to be used for Jewish Relief. evening, Dec. 5, we met in council, with Eld. W. M. Wine pre We elected our church officers and Christian Workers officers for the coming year: Sister Anna Brumbaugh, "Messe agent; the writer, correspondent; Dr. C. A. Whisler, Sunday superintendt; the writer, president of Christian Workers. arranging to have a Bible Term sometime during the winter r Bro. Rufus Bucher, of Quarryville, Pa., will be with us in a of meetings, beginning Dec. 28.—Mrs. C. A. Pentz, Denton Dec. 9.

Frederick church met in special couneil Dec. 6, for the pur installing into the ministry Brother and Sister Robert Zigler, T. S. Fike, H. C. Early, A. P. Snader and our pastor, Bro. J. Miller, took part in invoking the voice of the church. Brethre and Early gave the charge and conducted the installation s a very impressive occasion. Bro. Early remained over Sund gave us two very timely sermons on "The Big Needs of the of the Brethren." Our pastor is conducting special studies Book of Galatians, which are being highly appreciated by number of our people.—Lucy Arnold, Frederick, Md., Dec. 8

Green Hill.—Our series of meetings, in charge of Bro. Ira E of the home ministry, closed recently from Mt. Morris, Ill., Nov. 2 and continued for three weeks, closing Nov. 23 with feast and communion. Three decided for Christ and were b into the church by baptism. The work here has revived members are very much encouraged. We have a live Sunday and preaching services every Sunday morning, and a very i ing Christian Workers' Meeting at night, in which both you old take an active part. It is especially gratifying to h young people take part, as it bespeaks Christian growth and future for the church. As usual, we will have a Christmas p —C. F. Filer, Rebobeth, Md., Dec. 8.

Long Green Valley church met in council Dec. 7. Eld. W. presided and preached for us both morning and evening. Br Breidenbaugh was reelected Sunday-school superintendent; Bro lauser, Gittings, Md., Sunday-school correspondent.

Manor.—Bro. Elmer S. Rowland, of Hagerstown, Md., Long congregation, came to our church Nov. 16 and commenced of meetings, closing Nov. 30. The attendance and interest excellent. Bro. Rowland preached nineteen sermons, in which us rich spiritual food. Five young people have been received church through baptism. Bro. Rowland is a young man ent work but is full of the fire for the Master's cause. He is now so that he can do evangelistic work wherever his services are On Thanksgiving Day Bro. Rowland preached a powerful after which an offering of $100.00 was taken for general missio the same time donations were received for our Old Folks' H San Mar. This resulted in $18 in cash, and baskets of pro Our Sunday-school is moving along nicely. At present we busy preparing a Christmas program.—M. Portia Rowland, Fa Md., Dec. 4.

Pipe Creek.—As we are closing another year, we report th ing that time we have received into the church thirty-one n came with well-filled baskets and then all went to the hom pastor and ate dinner. All were agreeably surprised to Bro. Carney and family, of Ottawa, Kans., had moved into ou borhood. Our Sunday-school is preparing a Christmas pr Merle Stouder, Cherry Box, Mo., Dec. 8.

MONTANA

Grandview.—Nov. 30 letters were granted to Brother an Swank and family who have moved to Florida, and whom miss very much in our work here; also to Bro. Raymond who has gone to Wenatchee to school. One letter was recei appointed a committee to look after the needy in town. T was also appointed to take the place of Sister Barley, having a teacher-training class every Wednesday evenin weather is quite cold, but we hope to keep up the evergreen school this winter, if possible.—Mrs. V. HOME AGAIN strong, but a chaoge has come over the older brethren and sisters, and many have said that they long for the opportunities which are made available for the younger, for they feel they could live a more useful life, had they their years to live now. But they have lived and builded well, and laid a strong foundation for the younger to build upon. Their prayers and encouragement are of much help to the younger.

I was strangely touched when an aged sister said to me: "I have not ceased to remember you in prayer daily, from the time you went to China until you came back." These silent but mighty forces touch our lives, and influence on the field in a wonderful way. The forces of the Lord are thus strengthened in a marvelous way, and his Spirit is convicting of sin and judgment, and leading on to victory. Being in touch with so many sympathetic people in the homeland has given us new inspiration for our work again, and we were made to feel that we were not living so far apart after all, for our interests are so united.

We were happy that our family could come together to Cbina. Tbere was a time when we almost decided to leave Esther, our thirteen-year-old daughter, at home for her education, but during tbe last montbs there seemed to be definite leading for us to bring ber with us, and it brought great joy to the child not to be left behind. So she is in Cbina, in a boarding-school, where she is taking her second year high scbool work. It is a school for American children and these are largely missionaries' cbildren. We can not have ber in our home except at Cbristmas and summer vacations, but are glad that she is only four hundred miles away, and that but a few days' time is needed to pass letters back and forth. The advantages such schools bring are worth a great deal.

Are missionary hearts lacking in tenderness toward their children when they leave them behind in the homeland or put them into a boarding-school until they are grown up and mature? Nay, verily. Often our hearts yearn over them in anxious concern, but for their development and usefulness in life it is necessary that these things be endured. The communications that pass between children and parents are an unwritten story, known to God only. For Christ's sake these sacrifices are made.

Life is full of memories, beautiful and otherwise. Some are a constant benediction to us, and such were the parting moments with my aged parents, as we left them and gave them "good-bye." Ahout one month after our landing, the cable flasbed the message that my father had gone to his rest. How glad we were that we could spend a year with him! It was a great joy to him to have us home again. God is good in all the providences that come to us.

We are bappy to be at work here again, and to become settled in our home. Our little son was glad when we could finally tell him we had reached home, for he often asked in our travels where home was. It was a joy to meet the native Christians again, as well as the coworkers, and to greet the new little missionaries who had made their advent into the mission family during our absence. And now we are again in this great and needy field, wbere we daily hear the bells ringing to awaken belpless gods. These devout, though superstitious, worshipers need a knowledge of the Christ. May God speed the day when the kingdom of these people and the people of the earth shall be his Kingdom!

WICHITA, KANSAS

For the past two montbs the writer and wife have been in Wicbita, living with our daughter, Mrs. Harvey Lichty, who recently moved from Wellington, Kans., with her two sons.

The East Side cburch in tbe city is now without a resident pastor. Regular servicea are held and the pulpit is being filled by preachers mostly from McPherson. Eld. M. J. Mishler, of Newton, preached an excellent sermon on Sunday, Nov. 24, and continued the meetinga until Thursday evening, closing with a love feast, at which about 100 communed. Bro. Mishler officiated. Bro. H. J. Brown is superintendent of the Sunday-school, and makea the scbool interesting.

During our atay here we have attended services several times at the West Side church, where Bro. J. R. Wine is pastor, who, with his good wife, is working up an interest there. At the regular services, last Sunday evening, two confessed Christ. There are about seventy-five members in this congregation, and the average attendance at prayer meeting is thirty. Some big churches can not do better.

The writer was very much touched here, as he entered the church, to behold, written upon the blackboard back of the pulpit, the following: "Jehovah ia in his holy temple. Let all the earth keep silence before him. [Signed] J. Edwin Jones." Bro. Jones died about three years ago, but the above words still remain on the blackboard, to his honor, and in sweet memory of him as their beloved pastor.

Bro. Mishler preached an appropriate aermoo here on Thanksgiving. At the close a splendid basket dinoer was served in the basement. For a church family thus to dine together, is very commendable. Io the afternoon a splendid Thanksgiving program was rendered. Such work ought to receive more encouragement from all the members, because it prepares the young people for more efficient work io the church.

Bro. E. E. Wade is superintendent of the Sunday-school, and is active in the work. The average attendance exceeds the entire membership by twenty-five per cent, averaging one bundred. In these churches there ought to be well-paid pastors, who would put in at least five hours every day, calling on people who do not belong to any church.

SOUTH WATERLOO, IOWA

Work at this place continues to grow. Three were baptized and one reclaimed recently.

Bro. Frank Sargent, of Chicago, who has been with us for the last week in the interests of Bethany Bible School, gave several splendid talks, which were much appreciated.

Thanksgiving Day was observed in a manner which will not soon he forgotten. In the forenoon a large and attentive audience listened to a program rendered by the Sunday-school. At the close an offering was taken which, together with the money raised to help feed Chicago's poor, amounted to over $300. At the oaon hour a basket dinner was served in the basement of the church. So liberally were the baskets filled that the inmates of tbe County Home were remembered in a substantial way.

In the afternoon a praise service was held. Many responded to the opportunity given, of expressing individual reasons for thankfulness. Following this service, Bro. A. P. Blough presented diplomas to the nineteen graduates of the Mission Study Class. This class, under the efficient leadership of their teacher, Sister S. M. Harbaugh, did very commendable work.

The services of the day were concluded with the demobilization of the Service Flag—the thirty-two boys of the community who were called to the colors, all having returned.

ELSIE, MICHIGAN

Saginaw church convened in council Nov. 21, with Eld. Samuel Bollinger presiding. Since our church name is rather misleading, it was changed to Elsie, instead of Saginaw. Several items of Sunday-school equipment were decided upon, among which was a library. A church announcement board is to be used.

Bro. David P. Schechter was chosen to serve our church as elder for the coming year. Sister Olive M. Schechter was reappointed Christian Workers' president.

For some time we have been looking for an evangelist to hold a series of meetings, but were unsuccessful. We did, however, secure the able services of Bro. Warren Slabaugh, of Bethany Bible School, Chicago, for over our communion. Beginning on Saturday morning, Nov. 22, we had services preparatory to the feast. Bro. Slabaugh gave us four strong sermons, and conducted a Bible Study on the Lord's Prayer at our Christian Workers' hour, Sunday evening. A goodly number communed on Saturday evening, at which time Bro. Slabaugh officiated.

Bro. Samuel Bollinger also remained with us over Sunday. He conducted the children'a service in the morning and delivered a practical address io the afternoon.

Dinner was served at the church both Saturday and Sunday, and it was a pleasure to mingle in a social way with our isolated members, who came to enjoy with us this spiritual uplift.

Sister Schechter, not being present at the ordination service of her husband, in September, was duly installed at our Saturday afternoon service by Bro. Bollinger.

Within a radius of five miles of our church are several unused churchhouses, and there are many people in the community, adjacent thereto, who are in great need of a spiritual awakening.

We are glad for tbe return of another worker—Sister Flossie Albaugh. We also enjoy the visit of Sister Bertha Albaugh, of Indiana. Mrs. David P. Schechter.

Tarbell's Teachers' Guide

By Martha M. Tarbell

The thoroughness in research and carefulness in detail that have marked the work of Miss Tarbell in the past volumes will be found in this new book. There is graded help for teachers of all grades by an accomplished teacher. The lessons are made vivid and real through the skill of Miss Tarbell. Late discoveries in archæology add light on the lessons. Many maps and illustrations assist the teacher. The suggestions are practical. Oriental life is drawn upon to illustrate the lessons. Good type and binding. Cloth, $1.60 postpaid.

The Practical Commentary

On The International Lessons

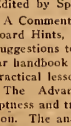
Edited by Specialists in the Various Departments

A Commentary that is full of Comments, Blackboard Hints, Applications, Maps, Bible Dictionary, Suggestions to Teachers, Questions, etc., this popular handbook has for many years provided a really practical lesson handbook at a very low price.

The Advance:—"Remarkable for two things: aptness and truth exposition, pertinence of application. The analysis also is natural, the catchwords capital, style concise, pointed, animated." Substantial Cloth Binding. Price, postpaid, 80c.

The Gist of the Lesson

By R. A. Torrey



The continued success of this vest pocket help on the Sunday-school lessons attests its worth. Not merely notes but full of questions provoking thought. Convenient for study on the road or wherever a few minutes may be found.

Of this commentary Margaret Slattery writes: "I use it personally, and know of nothing beter." Cloth, 30c, postpaid.

Harrisburg.—Nov. 28 the members convened in council, with Bro. Conner presiding. Bro. H. Wagner, of Hummelstown, was present to assist in the work. Bro. Conner was reëlected pastor and elder for two years. Two letters were granted. Dec. 1 five applicants were baptized, Bro. Conner officiating. Nov. 30 Mr. and Mrs. Henry returned from Chicago, where the former has been taking treatments. He is now able to see and is much improved in health. For the benefit of any one wishing to correspond with him we give his address: Mr. J. G. Henry, 1234 Derry Street, Harrisburg, Pa.—Sallie E. Schaffner, Harrisburg, Pa., Dec. 4.

Heidelberg congregation joined with Richland and Myerstown in a Thanksgiving Day service, held in the Richland house. A collection was taken for the Children's Aid Society. Our regular council meeting was held Dec. 1, with Eld. John Herr presiding. Sunday-school officers for the ensuing year were elected. Besides the regular program of business, the ministers requested to have assistance, and an election for minister was held by Elders John C. Zug and Wm. H. Oberholtzer, and resulted in electing Henry King, one of the deacons. This left the church with three deacons, and one of these will move into another congregation. Arrangements were then taken and Brethren Peter Heisey and Wm. O. Krall were elected deacons and, with their wives, duly installed. We now have three ministers, one of whom expects to enter the foreign mission service.—Alice I. King, Lebanon, Pa., Dec. 3.

In Grateful Acknowledgment.—On Sunday, Dec. 7, a delegation from the Hanover church, occupying five automobiles, came to the Brethren Home, Carlisle, Pa., bringing with them gifts of various kinds, oranges, bananas, candies, and $14.75 in money. The kind donors certainly gladdened the hearts of the aged people at the Home, and their kind acts were greatly appreciated by all the Home family. After eating a lunch, they repaired to the chapel, where divine services were held. Bro. Lytle gave an inspiring sermon to encourage the aged pilgrims. All certainly appreciate such kind acts. May their visit arouse surrounding congregations to follow the good example set by our Hanover people.—H. K. Miller, Huntsdale, Pa., Dec. 9.

Indian Creek.—The members met in council Nov. 15, with our elder in charge, on special business. Elders F. P. Cassel and S. H. Hoover, from the adjoining churches, with us for the purpose of ordaining Bro. Elmer M. Meyer to the eldership. Dec. 6 we met in regular business session for the election of Sunday-school officers. Brethren D. N. Cassel and F. P. Meyer were elected superintendents; Bro. Waldo Zeigler, Christian Workers' leader for six months. Our missionary solicitors, Sisters Ella Keyser and Sallie Price, reported having received $130.66 for home and foreign missions. The church treasury was also replenished. We will have the interior of our church redecorated in the near future. Bro. Samuel Cassel was elected church trustee for five years.—B. M. Boos, Vernfield, Pa., Dec. 8.

Lewistown church enjoyed another love feast Oct. 19. Two were baptized in the afternoon. We had a good attendance and a spiritual meeting. Our pastor, Brô. H. B. Heisey, has been working hard since coming to us, and is creating quite an interest not only among the members but also among others. Our regular attendance at both Sunday-school and church services is increasing. Of the nine Sunday-schools in town we rank fifth in attendance. At the council meeting, prior to the love feast, it was decided that our pastor hold an evangelistic campaign, beginning Nov. 2 and closing Nov. 23. We had special prayer meetings during the week in three different parts of the town. Bro. Heisey began the campaign by delivering a few splendid and much needed revival sermons, directed more especially to the members. The interest was splendid and audiences large. Forty-four confessed Christ. Of this number four were reconsecrations, and one was reclaimed. Just prior to the revival four united with the church, making a total of forty-eight decisions.—Mrs. H. A. Spanogle, Lewistown, Pa., Dec. 4.

Lititz church held an interesting and very helpful series of meetings, beginning Nov. 16 and closing Dec. 2, with Bro. Samuel G. Meyer, of Johnstown, Pa., in charge. Sixteen accepted Christ. Dec. 3 we held a church meeting for the reception of the new members, at which time one more came forward, and a brother and sister from another denomination applied for admission into the church. The following Sunday morning two more confessed Christ and one was reclaimed. Eld. L. W. Taylor preached the morning sermon, and at the close another came forward. The new applicants were then received by the church. Following this the brother and sister who changed their church relationship were received. In the afternoon baptism was administered to nineteen, Bro. Harvey Eberly officiating; one awaits the rite. Bro. Meyer preached on Thanksgiving morning and an offering of $45.31 was lifted for home missions. At the evening service an offering of $46.77 was lifted for the benefit of the Lancaster General Hospital. We expect to have exercises for the children on Christmas evening.—Florence B. Gibble, Lititz, Pa., Dec. 8.

Meyersdale.—Nov. 23 was Rally Day in the Sunday-school, when a special program was rendered. The first number was entitled "The March of the Departments," when, in their order, came the Cradle Roll, Primary, Junior, Intermediate, Senior and Home Departments. Suitable hymns were rendered by each, after which the pastor conducted the devotional exercises. Following this Bro. Meyers B. Horner gave an excellent talk on "Reorganization," or the proper grading of the Sunday-school. There was special music and other exercises. The attendance was about 400 and the offering was $142.57, which is to go to the building fund. A week later was Rally Day in the church. There was a large attendance. Bro. T. R. Coffman preached an excellent and very helpful sermon.—Mrs. D. J. Fike, Meyersdale, Pa., Dec. 6.

Neffsville.—Nov. 15 we held our love feast at the Home, with about seventy-four communing. Eight communed in their rooms. One was baptized before the love feast. Eld. Amos Hottenstein officiated, and Elders Cyrus Gibble, Amos Kuhns and Wm. Zobler were also present.—Mrs. A. H. Hoffer, Neffsville, Pa., Dec. 6.

Norristown church met in council Dec. 3. Sutcliff Wilson was chosen auditor for three years. Raymond Ellis trustee for three years. The following were chosen for one year: Corrie W. Ellis, president of Christian Workers' Society; the writer, correspondent and "Messenger" agent. An itemized budget for 1920 was adopted and a committee is to be appointed to look up and recommend a site for a new church, which is needed to accommodate our growing Sunday-school.—J. Howard Ellis, Norristown, Pa., Dec. 6.

Notice to All aid Societies.—We believe that each Aid Society has received its assessment of the $24,000, to be paid for the Boarding School in India and the hospital in China. We hereby notify each society to send all money to their District Secretary, who will forward the money to the General Mission Board, Elgin, Ill., where proper recognition will be given each society. We want to urge every society to be prompt in paying its amount.—Mrs. M. C. Swigart, President, Philadelphia, Pa., Dec. 6.

Spring Creek.—Our love feast, held Nov. 1, at the Palmyra house, was most enjoyable. Four ministering brethren from adjoining congregations were present. Bro. Levi Mohler, of Elizabethtown, officiated. Bro. Hiram Gibble preached for us on Sunday morning in the German language. Nov. 27 Thanksgiving services were held at the Spring Creek house. We were glad to have with us Brethren George Weaver and Nathan Martin. Bro. Weaver preached first, his text being, "Forget not all his benefits." Bro. Martin followed with "What shall I render for his benefits towards me?" He also referred to the first Thanksgiving Meeting held in America. At the close of the meeting an offering was taken for the mission at Lake Ridge. We pledged ourselves for $100. Dec. 1 the church met for council at the Spring Creek house, with Eld. Longenecker in charge. Much business was disposed of. Three letters of membership were granted. Sunday-school officers were elected for 1920. It was decided to call for the Ministerial Meeting for 1920.—Elizabeth A. Blauch, Palmyra, Pa., Dec. 8.

West Greentree.—We began a series of meetings Nov. 8 at Rheems, which was continued for two weeks, with Bro. John Zug, of Palmyra, in charge. He preached the Gospel Messsge to good-sized audiences and one confessed Christ. Dec. 2 we met at Florin in regular council, at which Eld. Hiram Kaylor presided. The following brethren were appointed as delegates to the District Meeting: Nathan Eschman; for Rheems, Bro. Harry Bechtel; for Florin, Bro. Almus Earhart; for Marietta, Bro. David Koser.—S. R. McDannel, Elizabethtown, Pa., Dec. 8.

TENNESSEE

Central Point.—Dec. 6 the members in the bounds of Central Point, formerly known as Bells, met for the purpose of organising a church from a part of the Pleasant View congregation. Having a good house and quite a few members, it was thought best to thus organise them, that more and better work might be done. Eld. A. M. Laughrun and the writer were present, to assist in the organization. One minister, Bro. Henry Collins, was elected, and five deacons: Brethren Zed Oukt, Isaac Swearingen, Byrd Bayless, Orlin Patterson and David Miller. They were all duly installed. Amanda Bayless was chosen church clerk; Robert Hilbert, pastor; A. M. Laughrun, elder. There are now well equipped with officers, three six deacons, including T. J. Bell, who also lives within the bounds of the congregation. This makes the sixth organized church in Washington County: Knob Creek, Limestone, Pleasant View, Flat Creek, New Hope and Central Point.—P. D. Reed, Limestone, Tenn., Dec. 6.

Limestone.—We met in council Nov. 22, with Eld. A. E. Nead presiding. Two letters were granted. Bro. J. R. Jackson, of Rutherford Co., N. C., and Clayton B. Miller, of Campobello, S. C., were with us Nov. 26. Their visit was greatly appreciated by us. Bro. P. D. Reed preached on Thanksgiving Day.—Honoria Pence, Limestone, Tenn., Dec. 2.

VIRGINIA

Burks Fork church met in council Nov. 15, with Eld. A. J. Weddle presiding. All officers were retained for the year 1920. On the Sunday following Bro. W. E. Lackey, of Patrick County, Va., began a series of meetings, which continued for two weeks. Seven accepted Christ and eight reclaimed. Two were Sunday-school scholars. The church has been greatly encouraged by this meeting. The Thanksgiving offering was $14.08. Bro. S. P. Reed, of Floyd, Va., met with us in an election meeting Nov. 22. Bro. H. B. Hylton was elected to the ministry and with his wife was duly installed.—Hattie E. Hylton, Floyd, Va., Dec. 5.

Midland church met in council Dec. 6, with Eld. J. A. Hinegardner presiding. Bro. W. A. Andes was elected superintendent of the Midland Sunday-school. Ira Weimer, superintendent of the Sunday-school at Mt. Hermon.—Mrs. A. J. Andes, Beaseton, Va., Dec. 8.

Mill Creek church met in council Dec. 9, with Eld. C. E. Long presiding. The Sunday-school and church extension committee gave their report of the organization of the Sunday-school for the coming year. The following officers were elected: Superintendents of Bible Department, Dr. C. P. Harshbarger and T. I. Bowman; Primary Department, Ida Wilberger." The same committee was instructed to study the needs of our young people and to suggest ways by which they can be helped to become more active. It was decided to give a Christmas program Dec. 28. Because of conditions, the question of elders was reconsidered, and Bro. H. C. Early was unanimously chosen. Brethren C. E. Long and Samuel Pence were with us. It was decided to take an offering for the Armenian sufferers Dec. 21.—Ida Wilberger, Port Republic, Va., Dec. 10.

Sangerville church met in council Dec. 5, with Eld. J. W. Wine presiding. Three letters of membership and three were granted. Nominations were made for Sunday-school superintendents at each of the three schools and will be voted upon later. A furnace has just been installed in the Sangerville house and funds were raised at this meeting to pay for the same. The Sangerville and Beech houses have just been given a fresh coat of paint. Our secretary reports a membership of five hundred. On Thanksgiving Day an all-day singing was held. Dr. Paul Bowman gave an address in the morning and in the evening a program was given by the Sangerville Sunday-school.—Meda G. Argenbright, Bridgewater, Va., Dec. 8.

Topeco church has been greatly strengthened and built up by a series of meetings, conducted by Bro. E. C. Crumpacker, of Roanoke, Va. The meetings opened Nov. 16 and closed Nov. 30. Brother Crumpacker preached fourteen sermons. Fifteen confessed Christ and were baptized on the Sunday following. Our Thanksgiving offering amounted to $18.20. Our Sunday-school is preparing a render a Christmas program.—Almeda Alderman, Floyd, Va., Dec. 4.

WASHINGTON

Okonogan Valley church met on Thanksgiving Day for service. An offering of $104 was raised to pay for the seats in our new church. As a congregation we are especially thankful to have our own house of worship, after having used schoolhouses so long for our services.—Mrs. Alice Brumbaugh, Omaks, Wash., Dec. 4.

Outlook.—We held services on Thanksgiving Day, which consisted of a program, rendered by the "Soul-Savers," the intermediate class of our Sunday-school, and a sermon by Bro. A. H. Puterbaugh. An offering of $42.50 was lifted. Nov. 24 the Sunday-school teachers and officers met at the home of Bro. J. B. Myers, in honor of our superintendent, Bro. Arthur Myers, it being his birthday. The evening was spent in a social way.—Mrs. C. A. Wagner, Outlook, Wash., Dec. 3.

Spokane (First Church).—According to previous arrangements our elder, Bro. C. F. Rupel, of Plain, Wash., came to us, and preached for us Nov. 30 morning and evening. Sunday-school were present at the morning service. At the close of this, an offering of $10 was lifted, to aid in home mission work. Following this a Thanksgiving dinner was arranged at the church, which had been prepared and brought by friends and neighbors. This was certainly a refreshing time, to the soul as well as the body, as we have had only a few sermons since last April. Arrangements are being made for a Christmas program. We have a very interesting Sunday-school and Christian Workers' Meeting, but have no regular preaching, not having a resident minister. This is a great hindrance to the Sunday-school work. It is lamentable to see one perishing for want of the Bread of Life. Our church is at 2920 W. Sixth Avenue. Take the Fort Wright car, one block north on B Street.—Geo. D. Aschenbrenner, 109 S. G. Street, Spokane, Wash., Dec. 1.

WEST VIRGINIA

North Fork.—Bro. E. S. Kiracofe and Sister Ollie V. Kerlin, of Bridgewater, Va., began a series of meetings June 22. Bro. Kiracofe preached twenty inspiring sermons and six were added to the church by baptism. August 30 and 31 we held our Sunday-school Convention, which was one of the best meetings we have ever had. A number of our brethren and sisters came from Bridgewater and Dunkard's convention for us. Sept. 19 we met in council, with Eld. H. G. Miller, of Bridgewater, presiding. The visiting brethren gave a very favorable report, and six letters were granted. Bro. E. A. Hartman was elected to the ministry, and Bro. E. A. Lambert was ordained to the eldership. Eld. Peter Garber, of the Valley congregation, assisted in the election and ordination. Bro. Garber gave a very interesting talk. Sept. 20 we held our love feast, with a goodly number present. Bro. Garber officiated. Since our meeting in June seven have been baptized and two reclaimed through the efforts of our home workers, Bro. E. A. Lambert.—Martha Hartman, Circleville, W. Va., Dec. 4.

STUDIES IN DOCTRINE AND DEVOTION

is being ordered in lots of a dozen or more by many churches. The book is especially useful, and may be even used as a text book for class study.

As a manual for new converts Studies in Doctrine and Devotion will be found to be just what has long been needed. The book was especially prepared with the needs of new converts in mind, and churches holding revivals could not do better than put a copy of this book in the hands of every new convert. A handy sized cloth bound book of 40 chapters and 299 pages. Price per copy, 50c.

Adieu and Welcome

THE first year of the post-war reconstruction period is about to pass forever from our sight. Let it pass! Don't try to hold it back! And do not shed too many tears over its going. It has been too full of disappointed hopes and new forebodings to make us want to keep it longer.

But how could we have done without it? There had to be a first reconstruction year or we could never hope to have a second or a third. Why didn't we think of that? And how did we ever fail to see, at its beginning, that the ground was all covered with debris and everything?

If we must say: "Good riddance, nineteen nineteen," some day we'll have a kindlier word for you. When the ground has been better cleared, as well as the mists from our own eyes, and we see the walls of the new Christian civilization begin to rise, we'll understand. We'll know then that your part was as needful and as noble as that of those distant years whose more conspicuous glory it will be to put on the capstone.

Take this word yet before you go, nineteen nineteen. If you thought to chill our ardor by your dilatory tactics, you are badly fooled. Our flesh is weak, we know, but not our spirits. For they are fed from the big storehouse of faith in a good God.

Welcome, nineteen twenty! We know not what you have in store, but we are ready. We believe in God.

Rest, Work, Heaven and Happiness

SOME foolish people have looked forward with eagerness to the time when they would not need to work. But all wise people know that the rest of inactivity is a miserable sham, compared with that delightful sense of satisfaction and peace which comes to those who are engaged in some noble work and love it.

It must have been one such who conceived the definition of heaven which I found the other day. According to this man's conception of it heaven is "a place where a man can work all the time at his best and never be tired."

Oh, for a hundred thousand Christians with such an ideal of happiness as that! How the ramparts of unrighteousness would fall before them!

How the General Mission Board Closed Up the Year

IF certain good-hearted people who are now dead, had been more careful about writing their wills, the late meeting of the General Mission Board would have been considerably shortened. No little time was given to several estate matters, and this was in part due to the failure of donors to state the Board's legal name correctly. Many complications and misunderstandings arise when some other name than the General Mission Board of the Church of the Brethren is used. Brethren and sisters who give money to the Board, can not be too careful about this point.

The new Home Mission Secretary, Bro. M. R. Zigler, was present at the meeting, and some time was given to the consideration of his duties. After becoming familiar with the office routine, one of the first objects of his attention will be the work in the Southland. Bro. Ralph G. Rarick and wife are to be with the members of Fruitdale, Alabama, and vicinity for the first four months of 1920.

Considerable business from the China field came before the Board. Several small appropriations were made for buildings, etc. A very careful and definite policy in the matter of educating the children of the missionaries was recommended by the mission and approved by the Board. Bro. R. C. Flory and family were granted a furlough for 1921.

Recommendations with reference to the needs of the field are brought to the Board through the medium of a field committee. At this meeting it was decided that these recommendations should be submitted to the mission for approval before being sent to the Board. This decision, arrived at by the missionaries themselves, gives wider latitude for the discussion and determination of matters to be submitted to the Board for final consideration.

The cost of living rises in China as it does in America, and the question of support allowance for our missionaries was discussed at some length. The subject was deferred until further information can be secured, but the Board sincerely desires to make proper provision for its missionary workers. It may be interesting to our readers to know, in this connection, that whereas formerly one dollar gold purchased two dollars Mexican, the standard of exchange in China, now one dollar of gold, or American money, purchases only ninety-seven cents Mexican. It can readily be seen how seriously this affects missionary finances.

The Board also decided that hereafter, so far as practicable, it shall appoint for this field missionaries who have prepared themselves for definite lines of work. China's request for new workers was granted—these to be sent out as they are found and equipped, in the following order: One kindergartner, one man evangelist, two nurses, a woman worker and two doctors.

Sister Ida Buckingham, of Sweden, was granted a furlough for the spring of 1920. Sister Buckingham's friends will rejoice, as will all of us, in the prospect of seeing her at the next Conference.

One of the most important actions of the Board was its decision to employ a man who shall give his entire time to the solicitation of missionary endowment funds. It believes there are many brethren and sisters who would be glad to place funds with the Board, either outright or on the annuity plan, if they understood the work and its needs more fully.

In order to promote the cause of evangelism, and meet the Forward Movement goal of 15,000 new converts annually, a committee on evangelism had been appointed at the September meeting. This committee, consisting of Brethren J. H. Cassady, J. W. Lear and the Secretary of the Board, presented a report at this meeting, looking toward a simultaneous evangelistic campaign in the winter of 1920-21. The recommendations of the committee were approved and it is hoped and believed that this campaign can be promoted in such a manner as to meet the approval and coöperation of the entire Brotherhood.

Several appropriations were made for assistance to State Districts.

Heretofore, when any church or organization gave funds to a student, in preparation for mission work, said funds not going through the General Mission Board, no acknowledgment of the same was made through our publications. A plan has now been worked out, whereby such funds will receive recognition through the Missionary Visitor, if they are reported to the Board, whether they go through the hands of the Board or not.

The foreign mission fields have not been visited by members of the Board since the visit of Brethren Early and Royer in 1913-14. The Board has appointed Bro. J. J. Yoder and the Secretary, Bro. J. H. B. Williams, to visit these fields during 1920-21. This step seems imperative, in order that the Board may be kept in close touch with the missions. The amount of money now being expended on the foreign fields, through our noble and rapidly-increasing force of missionaries, is so large and the plans for future expansion so urgent and extensive, that both the Board and the workers on the field unite in the judgment that the proposed visit is greatly to be desired.

The subject of our prospective mission in Africa, decided on at the September meeting, was taken up and considered further. The committee which had been appointed on this subject, presented a well-prepared report, which clearly showed how carefully the Board is moving in the matter and how thoroughly the whole ground is being canvassed. The project is under review from every angle. Some of the questions raised were: Does the Board have men and money in sight for the needs of India and China in the near future? Is the Forward Movement well enough under way? Is the church far enough on the road toward securing the needed pastors? Are men enough of the right calibre ready? Will there be a doctor ready?

These are but a few of the points raised. The Board is not acting hastily. The brethren who visit the mission fields the coming year are also to visit Africa and investigate possible locations for the proposed mission. They are authorized to call to their assistance, in this investigation, a representative from both our India and China fields.

A good brother whose name will be announced later, has been desirous of establishing a memorial for his son, in the shape of buildings on the foreign field. Definite measures were taken at this meeting to meet the wishes of this brother and it is hoped that the memorial will be established in the very near future.

A request from the American Bible Society that it be placed on the list of benevolences of our church was referred to the joint meeting of the Church Boards, to be held in Elgin April 15, 1920.

One of the subjects which consumed a great deal of the Board's time at this meeting was the study of the matter for a revised missionary manual. This was carefully gone over and the manual will be issued in due time. It is designed especially for missionaries and missionary candidates, but will be available for any one who may desire it.

The Board also took notice of the great International

A New Year

BY B. F. M. SOURS

Year of our warrings, year of prayers and sorrow,
Yours have been the anguish, yours the glorious tokens
From out the skies, of happy angel succor,
Year—O thou Year—now gone!

Year? On thy birthday, when we said good morning,
Thine were the promise and the hope of glory,
Thine were the vision and the goal outreached for,
After the thaw would come.

Then came the springtime, then the days of glory,
Poplar-bells, ringing chimes for birds at dawn-song,
Birds warbling praises over wood and meadow,
Singing that God is good.

Then came the harvest: granaries are bursting;
Love gave the grain for armies of the nations;
Apples of autumn fill the bins, and sunsets
Make the year's eve rejoice.

All is out-passing; months and days are ended;
Wended the year is to its final story;
White is its record; Heaven poured down blessing;
Year—O thou Year—farewell!

Hail to the comer! Hail the happy comer!
Over the far lands, like a victor riding
Glad in his triumph, pure from stain and sorrow,
Hail—O thou Year—untrod!

What has the New Year? What of light and gladness?
Dark is the spectral nightmare of past anguish—
Look! Glory breaks! Afar the flags are waving,
Telling of hope for men.

Father in heaven, thou art Victor always;
Thine are the flags, the armies of the nations,
Thine be the glory! We will ever trust thee,
Why should we doubt and fear?

Humbly we pray, O Father, hear our pleading,
Spare our dear boys and bring them home to love us;
So shall the Year be glory and be gladness,
Neath the sweet rainbow given.

So shall our years, and all the coming morrows,
Swell with the psalmody of praise and gladness,
Praising the Father, and our Lord and Savior—
Come, O sweet Year of joy!

Another Year Has Passed and Gone

BY LEANDER SMITH

"This I say, brethren, the time is shortened, that henceforth both those . . . that weep, as though they wept not; and those that rejoice, as though they rejoiced not; and those that buy, as though they possessed not" (1 Cor. 7: 29, 30).

All things are passing away rapidly. When we contemplate this subject, our thoughts launch out, and we gather images which have long since passed from earth. It causes us to exclaim, "How diverse are the vicissitudes of life!"

Man is the most noble and also the most complicated work of God. His mind emanated from the Deity. It has ascended the celestial regions and sought out the magnitude and revolutions of the most distant planets. It has meditated upon the laws of nature, even down to the most minute animals and plants. Men, like the multitudinous waves of the ocean, pass away. Generation after generation succeed each other, and nothing remains but traces of their genius, talents or good deeds.

If we inquire for the good and great men who lived not less than ten or fifteen years ago, whose noble deeds will ever kindle the flames of love and ardent zeal in the hearts of their contemporaries, we will find that they, like their fathers, have been consigned to the charnel-house of the dead, and nothing save their great and good deeds are left to remind us of their existence. So family after family have been made to mourn by the devastation of the power of nature—death.

When we reflect on time, we realize that 1919 has gone. Its footprints are vanishing as rapidly as the early dew and as the soft zephyrs over the tranquil lake. As we listen with hushed breath to the dying notes of its last song, we are made to contemplate the rapid passing of time. Yes, the year which opened with such promising auspices is now completed. We can grasp the broken links from the chain of memory and gather to our hearts each dear memento it has left. Yes, another year has gone, and we are much nearer our eternal home. How have we improved its hours? Have we spent them as though we knew it would be the last year we would be permitted to live? And now, since its hours are forever gone, do we remember that every thought and act of ours was known in heaven and has been registered in the book of records? Could we but open the book and read the accounts of the past year, how we would fear and tremble! Then, how necessary it is that we guard well each thought and act of our lives!

As we now review the past year, we see the great shadow that death has cast on many a family circle. Memory is furnishing us with fresh blossom leaves; on which the hand of affliction has traced deep and abiding characters. These lovely ones hailed with delight the dawn of the past year, but now are sleeping the great sleep of death, and live to memory alone. Let us pause a moment and view the noble ones of our immediate vicinity who have fallen by this enemy—death. They are gone from earth, but their memory is honored among us. Many a heart feels the sadness which it can not overcome. Places that knew those dear friends are now clothed in a garb of sadness and desolation and a deep shadow rests on the homestead. The Heavenly Pilot has steered many to Elysian fields of everlasting repose. They are now safe from the storms of life, for no tempestuous winds shall ever reach the shores of that eternal land.

The new year will burst on us as the soft lulling of the midnight gale. Its rustling will be heard among the leafless trees, and it speaks in accents low of the joy and sorrows that are in store for us. The pathway of life appears green and untrodden before us and each one is setting forth with anxious thought to the accomplishment of much during the present year. We know not what is in store for us in the future—whether joy or grief—but we may be certain that many will be the disappointments which shall befall us. Let each of us, therefore, set forth with renewed zeal to face the tempestuous world. We should take judicial notice of each moment and let each act of our lives stamp some memento on the face of time, to lead some wanderer to the Land of Promise.

The grim reaper, with his scythe, is, as formerly, performing his office. We know not who may next fall by his relentless hand, so let each of us endeavor to make our passage to the tomb a beautiful and love-lighted pathway, so that, when we are called from earth, and the grave closes over our last remains, the immortal soul may be wafted to the clime of never-fading glory, there to roam amid the perennial flowers of Eden.

Another Palestine Project

BY J. H. MOORE

A bit over one year ago we had something to say relative to the practicability of cutting a ship canal across the southern part of the Plain of Esdraelon, and letting sufficient water flow from the Mediterranean Sea into the Jordan Valley, to make of this famous valley the finest inland seaport in the world. Lately engineers have been making further investigations and now another scheme is announced.

This involves the boring of a tunnel through the mountains of Judea, and directly under Jerusalem, from the Mediterranean Sea, on the west, to the valley of the Dead Sea, on the east. The level of the waters of the Dead Sea is given as being 1,367 feet below the surface of the Mediterranean. The dimensions of the tunnel, as proposed, would be about ten by thirteen feet, and the length thirty-seven miles. Now, supposing the tunnel to have a fall of 300 feet, from the time it leaves the Mediterranean until it reaches its opening just above the Dead Sea, the water would even then have a direct plunge of over 1,000 feet before reaching the surface of the water below. This would give the water nearly three times the force of the current, employed to produce power at Niagara Falls. It would mean an enormous power, capable of generating enough electricity to light up a dozen cities like Jerusalem and to turn the wheels of scores of factories, to say nothing of operating a few trolley lines.

The cutting of this tunnel, through solid rock, nearly the entire distance, would cost about $40,000,000 and could probably be made to pay good dividends on the investment, and especially so when the country becomes more densely populated. The power, thus furnished, would be constant, and would not cost a pound of fuel of any sort. Possibly the electricity generated might be cheap enough to justify its use for heating and cooking purposes. This would be an enormous saving of fuel for all the cities and manufacturing establishments, to be connected with the power plant.

The tunnel would be at least 2,600 feet beneath Jerusalem, and it is thought that no difficulties would be encountered in the construction, save the possibility of tapping some of the hot springs more or less common in the tunneling of mountain ranges. There might be a possibility of tapping some strong streams of water, but these could be taken care of. The water coming from the Mediterranean might produce a slight rise of the Dead Sea, causing it to cover more of the low, level land to the south. The tendency of this would be to increase the evaporation sufficiently to take up all the extra water. More than likely the rise in the Dead Sea would hardly be noticeable.

The men having the project in view have still other visions. They propose to utilize the whole of the River Jordan for power and irrigation purposes. A large power plant can be operated by the 680 feet plunge of the water at the north end of the Sea of Galilee. The same water can be used to irrigate the plains bordering on Galilee, and the portion of the valley just below the sea. And all along the valley, even down to the Dead Sea, there are many square miles of fertile land that need only water and skill to make the whole plain a veritable garden spot. It is a section where frosts are unknown and here the banana, the orange, lemon and many other fruits may be made to grow most luxuriantly. In fact, with plenty of water and skillful tilling of the soil, the present almost desolate Jordan Valley might easily become a marvel in productiveness. Even the fertile plains, north of the Sea of Galilee, can be irrigated from the abundance of water flowing from beneath the mountains beyond.

The men of ample means have before them two wonderful propositions. One is to cut a great canal across lower Galilee, let the waters of the Mediterranean Sea into the Jordan gorge, and make of it the finest known harbor for sea-going vessels, or piercing the mountains of Judea with a tunnel and creating a marvelous power plant, for the good of the whole country, and, instead of making a great harbor of the Jordan Valley, convert it into a famous garden spot and thus help feed the hungry. All these projects are within the range of possibilities, and since men of ingenuity and means are looking the country over, we may expect something out of the ordinary to happen. In the way of developments the next decade or two may mean something marvelous for the Promised Land.

The Fullness of Time and the Forward Movement

BY WM. KINSEY

By the fullness of time is meant: the completion of an era, the rounding out of a cycle of time, the closing up of one epoch, preparatory to the opening up of another. As illustrations of this let us consider two:

1. The Birth or First Coming of Christ.—When the fullness of time came, God sent forth his Son, born of a woman, born under the law (Gal. 4: 4). This fullness of time was marked by

(1) A preparation of Judaism: (a) The Jews had the prophecies concerning the Messiah's coming. (b) Their worship had become ritualistic—just an empty form and order. (c) The Jews had many synagogues. These afforded Jesus a ready place to enter therein, and teach. (d) The Mosaic law had a special time to end.

(2) Heathen Religions, They were tried and had been found wanting. Not broad enough and deep enough for human needs.

(3) Greek Culture. (a) Greek art and culture did not satisfy. (b) The gods were unjust in their punishment. (c) Furthermore, and quite important, the Greek language had become universal. It was understood everywhere, and so was a ready vehicle for carrying the Gospel of Christ.

(4) The Roman State. (a) All principal territory was Roman. (b) There were good highways for travel. Possibly none better, up to that time. (c) There was universal peace.

As set forth in the four points above, such was the hour that God matched with his Son. Such were the conditions at the time of the Great Event. It was the fullness of time.

2. The Reformation.

(1) In the year 1453 Constantinople fell. As a result the learning of the East was practically emptied into the lap of Europe. This date marks the beginning of the Renaissance.

(2) In about the year 1450, movable type for printing was invented. This served as a means of spreading knowledge. People began to read, to think, and to make comparisons for themselves. They were in bondage, held subject to dogmas. Truth makes free.

(3) In 1492 America was discovered. This event was not ahead of time, nor behind time, but in due time. It was providential.

(4) In 1517 Luther posted his ninety-five theses (his convictions), which resulted in the Reformation.

Thus, in practically fifty years, four great events came to pass—rather three—that the fourth might take place. When learning came, light came. God found a way to disseminate this knowledge through movable type for printing. And in the light of the hour, people were ready to break with the dogmas and authority of the day. This, of course, meant nothing less than religious persecution. And for the persecuted, God provided a land of refuge—America was discovered, and consequently was settled by many peoples who suffered because of their religious beliefs.

All these events marked the completion of an era, a fullness of time when the apostate church became again apostolic. The Reformation was primary and the end God had in view. The discovery of America, etc., was secondary.

If, as a result of Judaism having spent herself, and the inefficiency of heathen religions, and universal peace, and Jewish synagogues everywhere—if in such a time the great event of the birth of the Son of God took place, and there began a new era; and if, as a result of the fall of Constantinople, and the invention of movable type for printing, and the discovery of America—if in such a time the Reformation came, WHAT IS TO HAPPEN in the day when there are still more favorable conditions?

(1) Practically a universal language. One can journey around the world today and speak the English language. Furthermore, back of the language idea there is the greatest of efficiency in printing. Also today the Bible—or parts of it—is printed in about five hundred languages and dialects. It is ready for all peoples.

(2) Good highways. There are good highways on land and sea—in the air and under the sea and land. There are the tunnels and the canals. Over these travel the modern railway train, the modern steamship, the modern automobile, and the modern aëroplane, all at an unprecedented efficiency. By these the world has shrunk and become small.

(3) Wireless telegrophy, and telephony. One may stand upon the shores of one continent and speak to the peoples of another. It is not a day of planting poles or stretching wires and cables, but something speedier.

(4) Medicol skill. Never has there been a day of such medical skill. For example, we really live in the day when organs of the body may be transferred. This has become possible since discovering how to unite blood vessels. For such an accomplishment Dr. Alex. Carroll, of the Rockefeller Foundation, received the Nobel Peace Prize. The recent war has filled the world with marvelous illustrations of medical skill.

(5) And what shall I say more? for the time would fail me to tell of electricity and her thousand uses; of the day of such social upheavals as we are now passing through; of the day of such evangelism—the Sundays, the Biederwolfs, the Stoughs, the Gypsy Smiths, etc.; of the day of such a war as has just closed—a war which is bringing democracy to the world—the form of government which guarantees religious freedom (this is favorable to missions); of the day when the heathen religions do not satisfy. Islam does not satisfy and is calling for something better. India, China and Japan are open, and call as never before. What is to happen? Is it not significant that, along with all this there is the Forward Movement, a Gospel program, not only of our own church, but of the church universal?

A few days before Jesus was crucified he uttered a literal, abstract statement which is, therefore, easily understood, and must not be overlooked. It is: "This gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in the whole world for a testimony unto all the nations; and then shall the end come" (Matt. 24: 14). Whether the end of the age comes next year, or a hundred years from now, Jesus' prophecy must be fulfilled before that time. Since the end has not yet come, the Gospel has not as yet gone to the whole world as he meant it should, and the part of the world, more than any other to which it has not gone, is the Moslem world. Yea, it even shuts out Christ at the point of the sword, and enthrones Mohammed. But that Christ's words may come true, the Islam world is overridden, and is turned inside out today. Palestine, for example, is in the hands of England. Christ will go into the Moslem world. Christ's prediction must come to pass, and that before the end of the age. He made that prediction in answer to a sincere question, asked him by the disciples, viz., "What shall be the sign of thy coming and of the end of the world" (Matt. 24: 3)? The "when" of that text is answered by the "then."

With practically a universal language, with the Gospel ready in all languages and dialects, with the greatest efficiency in printing, with adequate means of travel, with the wireless, with such great medical skill, with an unprecedented scientific skill in general, with the world's door open, and with a providential hour, is there not a fullness of time? And is not the Forward Movement the Christian church's response in matching the hour? God can today, with the material means at his hand, do in one year what it would have taken him a hundred years to do, a hundred or two hundred years ago. God uses material means. In Paul's day the Gospel did not go about on "angel's wings," but in wooden ships, and over roadways, as the Appian highway. God's cause and Kingdom are primary; all else that is physical, is secondary, but is an instrument and becomes a means to an end—the end the extension of the Kingdom.

Contemporary with Livingstone's era was "Tyndall, Huxley, Darwin, Herschel, Agassiz, Mores, Spencer, Fichte, Lincoln and Gladstone. These names are superlatives in science, invention, philosophy, philanthropy and statesmanship. Furthermore, Livingstone's life extended over most of the nineteenth century—that wonderful period which gave the world five-eighths of all the first-rank discoveries and inventions of human history previous to the twentieth century—the steamship, railway, telegraph, telephone, phonograph, lucifer matches, gas and electric lighting, heating and power, photography, and like wonders." But contemporaneous with the present day these all stand out in their perfection, plus many new scientific means. Great eras are not to be considered apart from God's cause. Never before has there been such an era as the present one. What construction shall we put upon it in the light of the Divine? Surely there is a fullness of time—a fullness of time far the dissemination af the Gospel in all the world. God is ready, perhaps as never before, hence the inevitable Forward Movement.

It is a blessed privilege to have a part in it. God could get along without us, but we want to be used of him. It will be better for us. Let us get busy! Almost one year of the program is already in the past.

The Wall of Pride

BY G. W. TUTTLE

The wall of pride not only shuts in, but it shuts out as well. It is a self-built wall. Pride says: "I will be exclusive!" It has not learned that an exclusive palace is an exclusive prison.

Pride is a hard wall to scale—bring on the scaling ladders of kindness, thoughtfulness, tact and Christian courtesy. Gospel ammunition now—the love that "seeketh not her own"; the Christ-lit eyes which remember to "look not every man on his own things, but every man also on the things of others"; the burden-bearing backs; "Bear ye one another's burdens, and so fulfil the law of Christ."

Pride balks at the call of duty. Pride says: "What will people say?" or, "They will think I am queer; they will call me peculiar!" A high wall and a strong wall—this wall of pride—but so were the walls of Jericho. Down with the wall of pride! What have we that we have not received? Proud of our talents—they are of God! Proud of our position in life—so was Nebuchadnezzar. "Pride goeth before destruction, and a haughty spirit before a fall." Quite a contrast with that verse that breathes the fragrance of the humility that was afterward taught by Christ—"And before honor is humility."

The walls of pride often shut in an aching heart—a heart that longs for companionship, for sympathy; yes, one that longs for the self-expression that pride forbids. All that is best in a man withers and dies when the walls of pride are built high. You must raze the walls of pride before you can get soul-provisions into the citadel of life. The gold and the silver and the cattle upon a thousand hills are our Father's, but before we can become almoners of his bounty we must learn the lesson so fully expressed in this verse: "God resisteth the proud, but giveth grace unto the humble."

"For none of us liveth to himself, and no man dieth to himself." You can not "cabin, crib, and confine" the soul of a man, or it will die. Ever the soul cries: "More room, more usefulness!" It is the voice of God in the soul of a man.

Pride shuts out, but humility invites knowledge. Pride says: "See what I have attained!" But humility reaches out, and even in the realm of things not strictly spiritual, echoes the words of Paul: "Not as though I had already attained, either were already perfect," in eagerness for greater knowledge or attainments.

"According as a Man Hath"

BY A. B. MILLER

The Apostle Paul is commending the sacrificial example of giving, on the part of the Church in Macedonia. His purpose is to provoke the Church at Corinth to follow Macedonia's example and to provide a liberal offering for the saints at Jerusalem. "The size of the gift does not determine its acceptableness," he declares, "but the self-denial it represents is the determining factor as to its value." "According as a man hath, and not as he hath not" (2 Cor. 8: 12). It is the statement of a great principle, namely, that God is well pleased when men do their best with what they have.

Many people never experience the reward of joy that comes from obedience to this very principle. They are always wishing for an opportunity to come that they may do something bigger than at present lies within their power, and as a result they never do anything. This is presented in a most forceful manner by Dr. Russell H. Conwell in his lecture: "Acres of Diamonds." It is simply an hour's presentation of illustrations from actual experience, with perhaps one exception, of this truth. The lecture begins with the exception, the legend of a certain Hindu who had a vision of a land "off to the west," where there were "acres of diamonds." So he sold his farm, gave the money to the priest to keep, and started on his quest. He was never heard of afterwards, but the man who purchased his farm discovered on it one of the richest diamond mines in the world. The illustrations that follow are from actual experience.

Success is ahead of the man who will use that which he hath. There are "acres of diamonds" at his very door. Not only so, but this is the only way to rise to that which is higher, nobler and better.

What is true of the individual is also true of the church. We are grappling today, as never before, with the problem of Christian Education. The Training Schools and Vacation Bible Schools, that are springing up, the echoes from the recent Y. M. C. A. Convention at Detroit, and the voices of other Christian leaders all over America, bear testimony to the deep need of Christian education.

The great purpose of this program is to teach to all men the Christ, so that they will receive him, love him, trust him, obey him—to be, to talk and to live as the Christ. Specifically, the great task at present is, first of all, to train men and women who can so teach—in a word, to develop Christian leaders.

This is vital to our own churches, and it is pressing for solution right now. We are undertaking it in a spirit of earnestness that has not been so manifested for many years. We want leaders. The church is calling for them on all sides, especially for pastors. "The ——— church wants a pastor; can you recommend one for our field?" is the repeated question from all over our Brotherhood.

Now, where are our three thousand ministers? Some of them feel that they have passed the age where they can successfully adapt themselves to the work of the pastorate; others feel keenly their need of preparation and, doubtless, the churches sometimes feel that these ministers are correct. Then there are still others who feel that they can not break away from the business life into which they are settled, and doubtless, the church hesitates to urge them to make the sacrifice.

It would be a very fine thing if we had a thousand college-bred, Bible-trained men who are deeply consecrated, full of spiritual power, "good mixers," great and strong teachers and preachers. However, these we do not have. Only one American in one hundred, on the average, completes a college course, and but three in one hundred finish even high school. American educators are trying to lift this standard, and our church has set herself nobly to the task of getting fifteen hundred prepared ministers for the pastorate and mission field. If we succeed in calling this number—and who says we shall not?—it will be on an average, ten years before they are prepared to enter upon their task. A leading educator of our church told me that he believes it would be twenty years before we are able to supply the demand, even if we push forward at accelerated speed. I believe he is correct, in the light of the experience of other denominations. Presbyterians, Methodists and Baptists have had supported pastors and have urged a high standard of preparation for a century and more, and yet—churches without prepared pastors galore!

"There will be a demand for one thousand pastors for our churches very soon," said one of our best known church leaders. Now we are going to pray "that the Lord of the harvest may send" fifteen hundred to prepare themselves to meet this demand. God grant that the request and the effort to meet it may both be realized. But what ought we to do in these five, or ten, or twenty years, that intervene before we have these men and have them prepared as we desire them? Place a great big bunch of these faithful ministers we already have in the pastorate now. No one knows their lack of training better than they do themselves, but it is unreasonable to think that it would not be infinitely better to set apart some of these men to devote all their time to the work than to continue our present arrangement.

It may be true that some are too old, others too poorly equipped, still others not naturally adapted to the work, but we do have a number of men who are spiritual, faithful, good speakers, knowing their Bible sometimes more thoroughly than folks who have had greater advantages. They are experienced, good executives, who would make good pastors if they had the chance. This would tide us over our present crisis and be "acceptable according as we have and not as we have not."

Here are "acres of diamonds" on our own farm. Let us search for them HERE and NOW, and use those from the mine that lies "off to the west" when they are ready.

The accomplishing of this means several things:

First of all it means a survey of our fields to discover those willing to be, and capable of being, used.

Again, it means that those selected may need to get more training at short periods at our colleges. This can be done if we really desire to do it. The faith and courage of men who take even longer courses, challenge us all to prepare more fully. Eld. J. W. Lear thrilled our audience recently by telling his own experiences, namely, graduating from Mt. Morris College last June at the age of forty-nine, and now at Bethany pursuing his Seminary (B. D.) Course. Brother, we can afford to get more training and we can get it if we will.

Further, it will mean that our colleges shall provide such short courses as shall be found practical for our present needs, either in extension or in direct work.

Still further, it will mean a great spirit of charity and earnestness, on the part of the ministers themselves. It is up to us to lead off. It will require grace to get this started and to coöperate after it is started, but I believe we can, by God's power and grace, do it.

Finally, it will mean the acid test of the church itself, especially the laymen, as to their willingness adequately to support the men who are so chosen to serve. It requires more faith on the part of a brother who is settled on the farm to undertake such a change in his life's work at forty than it does at twenty-five. The sacrifice is, doubtless, greater also. The church, therefore, should be willing to show her appreciation by adequately supporting him financially, so that not only the needs of the present, but the needs of the years just ahead may be provided for honorably, and the necessary training may be secured.

Let us bring this principle to bear on this question now, remembering that to our Lord our ministry, in every line, is "acceptable according as a man hath, and not as he hath not." Let us make the best possible use of what we actually have.

The Winona Auditorium

BY J. E. MILLER

SEVERAL questions have been asked, with reference to the Winona auditorium. I will try to answer these questions at this time:

1. Will the pledges, which were made at our last Conference, be applied to this new auditorium, as contributions from our people? Yes, if you or your congregation pledged a certain amount for the new auditorium at Winona Lake, at the last Conference, that amount will be applied as a part of the $10,500, which our people are asked to contribute.

2. Should we not have more than one representative on the board of directors? That depends on how you look at it. When you consider the large amount of money that has been invested at Winona Lake, and then think of the small amount that we are raising for the new auditorium, one representative on the board of directors seems to be a very liberal allowance on the part of the Assembly. The representation must be somewhat in proportion to the representation that is granted other organizations. One man can represent us well.

3. When an individual becomes a stockholder, by making a contribution, is that stock assessable? No, the stock is not assessable. You assume no other financial responsibilities when you make your contribution to this new auditorium.

4. Does the stock pay dividends? The Winona Assembly is not a money-making institution and as a result it does not pay dividends. The Assembly tries to make Winona Lake the center where the very best in religion and morals may be had. Worldly organizations would be very glad to have a controlling interest in the Assembly, but the managers always planned to have religious people in control. Winona is a religious center and not a summer resort in the popular sense.

5. Why should the nine Districts of the central section make their contribution towards this new auditorium? Because Winona Lake has been pronounced as an ideal place for holding our Conference. The only objection that has been raised is the small auditorium. We hold the largest denominational Conference in America. Because we are going to the central section every three years, as a rule, these nine Districts owe it to themselves and the Brotherhood at large to provide an auditorium that will meet the needs of the occasion. By making our contribution now, we secure the use of this auditorium at a very nominal expense. The Conference has been self-sustaining, and in that way these Districts are saved the trouble of raising money for equipping a place where the Conference shall be held when it comes to the central section.

Convention of Student Volunteers, to be held at Des Moines, Iowa, Dec. 31 to Jan. 4. It will be represented at the Convention. From present indications from sixty to eighty delegates from our colleges will attend, and it is planned to have a sectional conference of our own students and church members, in connection with the Convention. How best to conserve the benefit of the Convention for our own church work, will be the question to be considered.

It was a busy meeting of the Board, as all the Board meetings are. With it the Board's work for nineteen nineteen was brought to a close. But there was no sign of stopping the work. The eyes of the Board were on the years to come. "Thy Kingdom come," in ever-increasing measure!

"Sound Doctrine" at Funerals

BY J. O. CULLER

THE preaching of sound doctrine is always commendable, but spurious doctrine, never. Whatever may be the teaching of the Gospel, or inferred from its teaching, as it pertains to love, mercy, sympathy, etc., the preaching of anything but sound doctrine is never justifiable. However great the grief of the family may be—caused, perhaps, by the sudden death of a very dear one in the family, without a single hope for a happy future, which fact is keenly realized by the family—yet with all that, the minister who preaches the funeral sermon is not justified in leaving one impression, to comfort the friends, without doing injustice to "sound doctrine," and, in a sense, ignoring or criticizing the work of God, who fixes the destiny of the dead in harmony with justice and his Word.

As well might one attempt to comfort the friends of "the rich man in hell," as the friends of those who die out of Christ, because there is no comfort to give. The friends of the departed one would be comforted with a false hope, and sinners would be encouraged to continue their ungodly lives. It would be much better, in such cases, to preach a short sermon from the Word, and leave the dead entirely in the hands of the Lord, where they belong, and "stand clear of the blood of all men."

Under no circumstances has a congregation the right to expect of a minister any assertion, as to the eternal condition of the dead, whether saint or sinner. That has not been delegated to man. If he has complied with the conditions of salvation, he is saved, but who knows that? God knows, and his record is true. But man has no access to God's records. Surely, no one would pretend to know what is there. In all cases one can truthfully say: "The Lord will reward according to the deeds done in the body, whether good or evil."

Then there are those who were members of the church for a number of years, and the obituary says they have been faithful until death. The sermon follows with a very promising hope for the future. Perhaps, during his life-time, he indulged in all manner of worldlyism and ungodliness. Perhaps he was inconsistent in his conversation. Perhaps he manifested no regard for the principles of the church and Bible. Perhaps he attended church occasionally only, but was in no attitude to enjoy religious services. It was immaterial to him whether the standard of the church would be raised or lowered. Quite frequently that kind of a fruitless, reckless, indifferent life is condemned by ministers and evangelists to be no more than a mere shadow of religion, with no promise of eternal life and joy whatever. When, finally, sickness comes, and when, in his dying hour, the inconsistent one calls for the anointing, he says: "I am ready to go and meet my Savior." The minister, who saw him mostly on Sunday, emphasizes those dying words, and says: "Surely he died the death of the righteous." But how about the Lord, who saw him on seven days of the week? The Word says: "If the righteous scarcely be saved, how shall the ungodly and sinner appear?"

The above picture represents an extreme case of unfaithfulness, and yet it may prove the more dangerous for a minister to commend the life of one who is almost saved, but lost in the end. He should beware, therefore, of the influence of "unsound doctrine" in cases of this kind.

Then we want to consider those who claim to come at the eleventh hour, and who expect to be rewarded the same as those who came early in the morning. Some one may serve Satan until the close of his life. Then, by hurried arrangements, he may be baptized Then, he dies, and is regarded as an "eleventh hour servant." But the eleventh hour is between ten and eleven o'clock, and they labored at least one hour before they were entitled to a penny. But they that are putting off serving the Lord until they feel their dying hour has come, are coming at the close of the twelfth hour, when the servants were called in to receive their wages. On that point, please remember that no wages were promised any one who had not labored in the vineyard. No more can we expect to be rewarded when the day's work is done. Remember that God is merciful to all, but that justice demands impartial judgment.

Justice is distinctly manifest in the case of two men: The one had opportunity, time and again, to surrender his life and will, and to serve the Lord instead of Satan, but he preferred to serve Satan. At the close of his life he asked the Lord for admittance, but was rejected. The other had no invitation until the eleventh hour and immediately went and served until the evening, and justly received his reward for faithful service. Would we consider God a wise and just Judge if he would pass judgment otherwise?

How many are there, with Christian intelligence, who do not want to be saved when they see they have to die? Are there any who prefer to be damned? The Lord knew this to be the condition when he gave his Word. Why did he give conditions of salvation when he would save man just the same without them? If modern preaching concerning the dead is correct, then Christ's teaching concerning the "broad and narrow ways" is reversed.

Is there not enough evidence to prove that the sum and substance of the various sermons, assertions, consolations and songs, given upon funeral occasions, are, in a large measure, responsible for the careless, self-satisfied, indifferent disposition of the people generally? This is true not only among people outside of the church, but also among the members of the church as well. It is supposed by the masses that the minister knows what he says, and that he says nothing but the truth. Every statement of the minister is closely scrutinized, and every conceivable encouragement is taken advantage of, therefore remember the danger and folly of preaching anything but what the Lord approves—"sound doctrine."

Consecration

BY JACOB FUNK

CONSECRATION is the balance wheel of Christianity. Renunciation is not enough. To sacrifice is a noble thing, but it is all in vain if to sacrifice is the end of your religion. Self-denial means to serve yourself last. It gives up that some one else may have. What a wonderful spirit it is, and how much it is needed today, when so many individuals and organizations are saying, by their actions, that self is dominant. While other religions have sought to please their gods by giving something, Christianity has sought to please God by giving self. This is an all-inclusive act, that means when we give self, we give everything else.

Today we are living in an ease-loving, pleasure-loving, self-seeking atmosphere. We truly need an epidemic of self-denial. We have lost the meaning of the term; it seems to be an old-fashioned thing that we have outgrown, and yet, if we are to get anywhere with ourselves or with the church, we must bring it into existence again. We must make self-denial a duty. We must suffer the loss of ease and comfort, yes, even life itself, that righteousness may be a reality in the lives of men.

But to deny self must also carry with it the idea of taking up the cross and following Christ. The young man needed not only to get rid of the barrier that separated him from eternal life, but he must do something. Right here is the place where so many fail. A selfish, self-contained, self-owned, self-used soul is a lost soul, so also is a lazy, empty, careless, do-nothing soul a lost soul. Only by renouncing self and getting busy is there salvation. He that loseth his soul shall save it, because he loseth it in Christ, and Christ dwells in him—a well of living water that nourishes and comforts all that come in contact with him. In self-renunciation the church must lead if she is to perpetuate her life. Daily her strength and power must go out in unlimited volume, in order that the present wrought-up, chaotic, strike-ridden world may be drawn to Christ. War has not settled anything except to confirm the truth that it is a most cruel, barbarous, and inhuman method of settling things. But consecration, which means a giving up of self and a taking up of the cross, will mean a glorified, redeemed and saved world. We have the example of him who died for us. May we follow him!

How May We Get a Larger Vision of Our Opportunities?

BY MRS. O. L. SHAW

(Read at District Meeting of Middle Iowa)

THE wise man said, "Where there is no vision the people perish" (Prov. 29: 18).

Look at the importance attached to visions that are Spirit-filled! What do we mean by a vision? Seeing great possibilities of advancing the work of the Lord, then surmounting all difficulties' and hindrances, through Christ, to push that work along which has been pointed out to us.

But how may we get a vision? First, we must recognize our own littleness, be emptied of self, be poor in spirit, that our temples may be filled with the glory of the Lord. Then, in humble submission, may we say, "Lord, what wilt thou have me do?" Or, "Here am I; send me." When we reach that stage of preparation, God will not long withhold the vision; and if we then serve faithfully in the little things, God will just as surely open the door to larger fields and greater opportunities.

We are responsible to Zechariah for the saying: "For who hath despised the day of small things?" A woman's life is made up in doing the little things; and how many women, in the daily round of trivial duties, have not, at some time or other, despised the limitations that seemed to hold them slaves to the insignificant things of life? From morning until night the tired feet hurry from one small task to another. Baby's rattle must be picked up, and his tears turned to smiles by seeing the toy in mother's hands for a few minutes. Little sister's apron needs a button, and before she is sent away to play, a shoe lace has been tied, the unruly hair brushed back, and there has been time for the mother to instill by precept and deed, if not by word, a lesson in personal tidiness. Brother's cap is lost and his temper ruffled, but the day suddenly brightens when mother's intuition suggests the hiding place, and her love sends him away to school with the frown kissed away. And while she is performing the necessary round of household duties, numerous block-houses rise and fall, the picture book is thumbed, "pieces" are spread, cut fingers are bound and stories are told.

Did you, whose lives are made up of a multiplicity of small things, ever stop to think how important, in itself, each small thing is? Suppose all the mothers in all the world, who ever spun tops for lonely children, should be assembled in one place at one time, all spinning tops for children—the ring of childish laughter would surely resound through the very streets of heaven itself, in a chorus of joyfulness. And then, suppose, if you can, that no mother, in all the world, ever took time to do these little things, can you imagine the tears that would never have been dried? Can you count the sobs that would never have been stilled? Can you hear the moan of childish grief, had not countless mothers, in moments of baby woe, left other tasks to do these apparently foolish things?

Can you picture to yourself all the buttons you have ever sewed onto little garments in your life? How big a basket do you think they would fill? Would it seem like such a little task if you were told to sew them all on at one time, before you took up anything else, either work or play?

They are only little tasks, as they are done singly, interspersed with other little tasks seemingly as insignificant. But every button sewed on meant not only convenience and comfort, but stood as a lesson in neatness as well.

Estimate, if you can, all of the sagging garments—worn with what degree of discomfort and shame you can never guess—had you never taken time to sew on a button; and then multiply it by all the women in the world who have put on missing buttons for helpless little children. If you can make your imagination take out of the world every bit of gladness, given by somebody's fifteen-minute call in a sick-room, by every flower bestowed, by every lullaby crooned to sleepy babes, and substitute therefor all the sorrow and loneliness that this gladness dispelled, calls and flowers and songs might not seem like such small things as they do now. Day after day, until the weeks stretch themselves out into unbelievable years, the women of the world have been doing the small things—such an unutterable, impossible number of small things.

By and by the little bodies will grow into temples fit for the Lord's indwelling. After a while the prattling tongues will add their quota to the praise that daily ascends to the throne—then in the light of temple building, as the godly man of old suggested, the day of small things looms big and important.

A seer indeed was he who said: "The hand that rocks the cradle rules the world." During the rocking-time characters are moulded by the picking up of rattles, and destinies are determined by the building of block-houses.

During the terrible struggle of the world war the door of opportunity swung open to women. The Red Cross sprang up and received the honored title of "The World's Greatest Mother." People responded nobly to the call. You know the result—women worked and knitted everywhere, seeming loath to lose even a moment's time, so great the need and urgent the call. Many responded who, perhaps, had never before given mankind a lift, but the arrow struck close home and they became interested.

If such a noble work could be done to aid humanity in a material way, how much more important and greater should be the effort put forth to aid them in a spiritual way, for Christ's sake? "Inasmuch as ye did it unto the least of these, ye did it unto me." This should be an inspiration to all church members, all Aid workers, not only to do their bit, but to do their best.

God has opened the great door of opportunity to the women of the church. They have been faithful in the little things. We will not cease rocking the cradle, but we are now ready also to "launch out into the deep"—to do greater things. Our Aid Society is a recognized factor of the church organization and we, too, have entered into the great "Forward Movement." This will mean an effort on our part, but are not God's promises all-sufficient in this line of work, as well as any other, if it be for the advancement of his cause?

Can you imagine anything more noble than the mothers and women of our beloved Fraternity stepping out and saying: "We are still going to keep on feed-

THE ROUND TABLE

"Good Will Toward Men"

BY JULIA GRAYDON

Last Christmas we thought a great deal about peace and we talked much about it and of what it meant to the world at that time. This year our thoughts turn especially to good will toward men, for in these times of unrest and strife we need to think much of good will toward men, not only at Christmas time but every day.

Have you ever looked up the meaning of good will, as related to law? The dictionary says that "it is a benefit acquired by an establishment beyond the mere value of capital or stock, in consequence of the general public patronage and encouragement."

A man sells his property and his business together, and with it goes the good will which is absolutely necessary in order to make it of any value to the purchaser. That is good will from man to man.

Ah! How we need it today in plain terms—a friendly feeling toward each other—a friendly feeling between employer and employé.

I read the other day of a unique Christmas gift from one woman to another, which illustrates my point. The one was so busy with her Christmas duties that she did not see how she was going to get through in time for Christmas. The day before Christmas the phone rang and a voice said: "This is your laundress. Merry Christmas to you. I haven't a present for you, but I want to come over and do a couple of hours' ironing for you." And when the woman went back to tie up her gifts, "the ribbon and laces, the silver and gold looked cheap to her, as she thought of the richness of the other woman's offer."

Good will from one to another! And when we all experience it we can sing:

"The Christ is born, the Lord has come
Good will on earth to bring."

Now as Then

BY REBECCA C. FOUTZ

One of the interesting things about the Bible, and one of its great outstanding facts, is its true portrayal of human nature and people a few thousand years ago, as we know them now. Both good and bad things are told with equal fidelity and impartiality.

We have not advanced beyond the credulity of Mother Eve, who believed the plausible and seducing argument of the tempter. For what idea is more prevalent than the one that God does not mean exactly what he says, even though we see how greatly deceived our first parent was.

There are the present-day Noahs, who preach to a yet indifferent, scoffing people, bent on pleasure-seeking.

Also, nearly all who work for the Lord feel at some time like Elijah—ready to throw up their hands in despair and give up the fight because of the great odds against them and the fact that wrong seems always in power.

And how many, since Solomon, have had to declare that all is vanity, after having tasted of the honors and riches and pleasures of this world. They have had to learn over again that there is no real worth in them.

What sounds more familiar than the story found in 2 Kings 3? No matter how far the kings of Israel and Judah went, in their disobedience and idol worship, yet they were quick enough to call upon the Lord and his prophet for help when they got into trouble. Do we wonder that, when they appeal to Elisha, he asks them why they didn't go to the prophets of the gods they served, for deliverance?

For no matter how much they may worship and serve them in the time of "all's well," who goes to the movie star, fashion designer, dancing-master or pleasure-resort manager when the dark days of trouble come? The Lord's servant is the refuge sought then.

Now, as then, there is a bright side to any chronicle of human affairs. There are the modern Abrahams of faith, the Josephs who conquer seemingly overpowering temptations—men like Moses, who give up all that the world offers, so that they may serve God and his people. Then there are the Davids who repent and try again, each time they fall, the Daniels who do not "do as Rome does when in Rome," besides many faithful teachers and prophets who warn the people of sin, and call to repentance.

These are only a few instances. One could multiply and duplicate indefinitely, but these are enough to show us what lessons, both of warning and inspiration, there are for us in this great Book if we will only take time to look for them.

Tunnels

BY PAUL MOHLER

Did you ever go through a tunnel? You may have been carried along in the sunshine, following a mountain stream. You are thrilled with the beauty, first of the liquid green of the pools and the snowy crests of the rapids, then with the deep green of the pine and fir, spotted with the tamaracks' autumn gold. Which is the finer—the river's green and white, or the forest's green and gold? You can not say, so you end by trying to see it all.

Then, presto, gone is the vision of beauty. Sunshine is gone, and river and mountain. Egyptian darkness has come upon you. Every sense is stunned. A moment passes—a minute—minutes. Will it never end?

What beauty is there in nature? What joy in life? What glory in the season? Only existence remains. You are in a tunnel.

Then suddenly again—a gleam, then a glare! A flood of light, and you are blinking. The sun is still shining. The world is still beautiful and more fair than ever, by contrast.

Your life is in the sunshine. Its course is lined with beauty. Every day is a delight. Every night you rest in peace. A calamity comes upon you! The sun hides from sight. Your course is blocked. You can not see one step ahead. Has God forgotten or forsaken? Will joy return? Is there a single gleam of hope? A month passes, a year—years, perhaps—and still the darkness reigns. How hard it is to pray, when nothing seems to come!

Then, just a ray! Can it be possible? Is light returning? The darkness pales; it trembles; it is gone! And the sun floods in! You were in a tunnel! Thank God for the light again! Thank God that it is always just a tunnel when his children are in the dark!

Are you in a tunnel now? Wait for the light, and while the darkness covers you, just trust! The sun is shining yet. Life is full of joy and beauty. God can see in the dark. He will never lose his own. Your tunnel may be named sorrow, or tribulation, or persecution, or sickness, poverty, or sword—dark, very thick and dark. But it is just a tunnel, if you are his. Trust him for the coming of the light!

A Lone Figure

BY A. V. SAGER

The eyes of the world are focussed on a little hamlet in Holland. There is a man without a country—an unwelcome guest in a foreign land. Hated and despised by some, and regarded with mingled feelings of scorn and pity by others. This man of blood and iron—William Hohenzollern—fought desperately with fate and lost. A tyrant by nature, his end was that of all tyrants. He well deserves the opprobrium of all God-fearing people. Millions of innocent men, women and children have gone down into untimely graves because of his fixed resolution and ambition to make the world bow at his feet.

Whatever the primary causes of the war, whatever the contributing influences that made the war possible, by England, France or Russia, it is conceded on every hand that the Kaiser, by his wonderful force, political power and strong personality, could have averted the war, and thus avoided the censure and reproach that have been heaped upon the German people as a whole, by the unspeakable brutality and the ruthless destruction of property, both public and private, by his armies. Sacred places of worship, cathedrals, centuries old—the wonders of the world for their architectural and symbolic beauty—were fiendishly and deliberately destroyed. And all this with the approval, directly or indirectly, of this man.

Statesmen and others of the world's wisest and best men are puzzled what to do with him. Is he sane, or a man with the brutality of the beast? A madhouse would seem to be the most appropriate place for him. His blood can never atone for the unspeakable horrors of four years that make one shudder even to think of them.

There is a man with the amazing egotism to proclaim himself in partnership with God, and equal with him—professedly Christian, a follower of the meek and lowly Christ. It would be a ghastly joke, were it not given in such seriousness. We wonder if he ever read the eighteenth chapter of Matthew. Perhaps he was like some more of us—forgot to clean his spectacles—or like the old mammy reading her Bible upside down.

William Hohenzollern's life should leave a lasting impression on the mind of every young man and woman. Our responsibility to our fellow-man should be newly impressed on our minds—we should realize that we can not live selfish and exclusive lives without reaping the reward of our folly. Retribution always follows disobedience to God's eternal laws. If we sow to the wind, we shall reap the whirlwind.

New Year Retrospection

BY IDA M. HELM

It is well for us to stop occasionally, in the midst of the cares and pleasures of life, to think of the fearful reality of life and of the fact that we shall never pass this way again, except in retrospection, till the scenes of our life, done in indelible colors of white and gold, or scarlet and black, are unrolled before the assembled world, to witness either for or against us.

The year 1919 is about to take its place in the long line of sister years, clasping, in its unrelenting fingers, the record of each day. Wrapped in its winding sheet it is secure from the tamperings of those who would fain steal from it some pages that glare with marks of sin. Scenes of momentous import have taken place in our lives, scenes of gladness and triumph, scenes of adversity and sorrow. Some of us have followed Christ in the regeneration. It's a glad memory. "For godly sorrow worketh repentance which bringeth no regret" (2 Cor. 7: 10).

Some of us have witnessed the baptism of our friends and welcomed them into the Kingdom. Death has entered many homes, taking away those who were least expected to die. On New Year's Day, 1919, they had as fair prospects to live, and to bid adieu to the dying year, as any one, but the grim reaper called and they went—prepared or unprepared—to meet the King. And we are made to wonder who will be next.

Life is uncertain, death is certain, and some of the Messenger readers must lie down in their last long sleep, wrapped in the cold mantle of death, ere 1920 silently slips away to make room for its successor. Hence, the importance of living a life acceptable to God during the year 1920. We should live such a life as will make death, if it should come to us, an open gate to more abundant, everlasting life. It has been said, and it is true: "It is a fearful thing to live," and if we live not in Christ, it is an awful thing to die.

There is a death that should concern us more than the death of the body—that is the death of the soul. We should remember that "there is a way that seemeth right to a man, but the end thereof is the way of death." The way over which Jesus went, the narrow way of the cross, is the way that leads to life. It is our privilege to walk in the narrow way—the way that is lit up with the "Sun of Righteousness," the way of life. "Be not afraid of them that kill the body, and after that have no more they can do. But I will warn you whom ye shall fear: fear him who, after he hath killed, hath power to cast into hell; yea, I say unto you, Fear him,"

Oh, if the scales could but fall from the eyes of all the poor souls who are living without God in the world, that they might comprehend the Savior's language: "What will a man give in exchange for his soul?" We may gain wealth, popularity, honor, fame, here in this world; but if we do not accept them as talents given to us by God and use them in his service, we will be held accountable to God for them in the great day of reckoning.

The year 1920 will be fraught with tremendous responsibilities. What it has in store for us individually, for our mighty nation, for the wide world, none can tell. Mighty powers of earth may be shaken to their foundations. But those who trust in God and are loyal to him, will find his mercy and his protection unfailing. The foundations of God are secure. God has a work for each one of us to do who have reached the years of accountability. Let us be earnest and active about our Father's business every day, that we may never need to look back over past days with bitter tears and regret! In God's strength each one of us can face the future with all faith and hope and courage, knowing that he is faithful who promised: "Lo, I am with you always."

"Oh, make me glad, dear Lord, that every passing day,
Brings me a clean page in thy book of life;
A chance to turn the blotted pages down,
And start again refreshed for the great strife."

Following Fully

BY ELIZABETH McDANNEL MARTIN

SOME time ago, in a certain place, were placed the following words: "I do not oppose smoking, but I do oppose cigarette smoking." These words were placed very conspicuously, so as to be seen and read by the public. Permission to smoke was not forbidden, only the use of the cigarette. We all know that the cigarette is very poisonous, yet we also know that the entire smoking habit is injurious to one's health, and should not be engaged in at all, whether it be a cigar, a pipe or a cigarette.

We were made to wonder in just how many instances people do right a part of the way and then fail in the other part. We think of the many brethren who say: "It is wrong to use tobacco," and even try to teach their boys that way, but, at the same time, they raise tobacco by the acre, for some one else to dispose of. These brethren—at least many of them—are not doing it with a clear conscience, yet they persist in raising it against better knowledge, simply because they are not willing to condemn the whole business as wrong, which would be the only right thing for them to do.

Again; there are many people who believe it is a sin to become drunk, as taught very plainly in the Bible, but we find them entering the saloon for an occasional drink, not willing to regard the whole business as sinful. No Christian man should ever be found entering the saloon. We are thankful that the day is fast approaching when the awful curse of drink shall be wiped from the earth.

Then there are people who firmly believe in keeping the Sabbath holy, which is right; yet, on Sunday morning, they allow themselves to be sidetracked somewhat by hauling milk to the station or creamery, as the case may be, just as on any week-day. We have seen this thing done many times, and in most cases, at least, it could have been avoided.

And then we have known sisters who had to do some baking and cleaning on Sunday morning, that should have been done the day before, but, on account of the warm weather, they say the custard or pudding would not look as nice if it were made the day before.

Many other things could be mentioned here, but let this suffice. Why not keep the Sabbath Day holy altogether, as the Bible teaches we should?

Then, too, there are those who will admit that chewing tobacco is wrong and would never think of indulging in the filthy habit, but they allow themselves to be tempted by the unbecoming habit of chewing gum. This applies to both brethren and sisters. Without thinking of their influence on others, many of our beloved and well-thinking members indulge in the practice. We wish they might see the inconsistency of God's children engaging in this questionable habit which we should all condemn.

A very good plan for all of us would be to ask ourselves on all questions before the final decision: "What would Jesus do?" In many instances we would find ourselves doing quite differently from what we usually do.

"For whosoever shall keep the whole law, and yet offend in one point, he is guilty of all" (James 2: 10).

Our Entangling Alliances

BY OLIVE A. SMITH

CONSCIENTIOUS objectors to the league of nations are fond of quoting the words of George Washington: "America should avoid entangling foreign alliances."

Just as reasonable would it be to quote these words from the same great source: "A stage coach is the best means of locomotion." It was in 1790. But times have changed. The world has become one, and no one part of it can suffer without the suffering of the whole. The time has passed when we can, with a clear conscience, withdraw ourselves for the preservation of our own comfort and safety, regardless of the needs of our brothers across the Atlantic.

We should not forget what our American boys said when they were over there, facing every moment the great realities of life and death. At such times, men have clear vision. They were asked to vote on the question of the greatest sins and the greatest virtues. With this burden of a national task upon them, they agreed that the greatest virtue was unselfishness and the greatest fault selfishness.

Poets look into the future and see the conditions with which statesmen and all other world workers have to deal. Alfred Tennyson turned abruptly from the consideration of a personal theme, to the picturing of a vision which filled his mind long years ago.

"For I dipt into the future, far as human eye could see,
Saw the vision of the world and all the wonder that would be.
Saw the heavens fill with commerce, argosies of magie sails,
Pilots of the purple twilight, dropping down with costly bales,
Heard the heavens fill with shouting, and there rained a ghastly dew
From the nations' airy navies grappling in the central blue;
Till the war drum throbbed no longer and the battle flags were furled
In the parliament of man, the federation of the world."

Your Picture

BY ELEANOR J. BRUMBAUGH

A LITTLE girl was busy making a picture. Her mother asked: "What are you doing?"

"I am making a picture of God," was the reply.

The mother was surprised, and said: "We do not know what God is. No one knows what God is."

"Well, people will know when I get this picture finished," said the child.

Each one of us is making a picture. Each day's actions are adding to the picture something for or against righteousness. We are telling the world what we think of Christ—not telling it in words, but in actions. What will your picture be like? Will people know more about God when they see your picture of him? Are you representing him truthfully? How sad, if those who look at your life are led the wrong way! This will be sad not only for you, but for all who copy your picture. Paul said: "For me to live is Christ." Can it be that he imitated Christ so well that he could say this? He surely did. What a beautiful life! What a charming picture! Copied by people yet today! Admired by all who know him!

As we pass off the stage of action, one by one, we leave a picture where all can see just what we thought of Christ. Is our time spent beautifying our picture with precious jewels we have brought to him? Or, have we spent too much time on the things we eat, and making beautiful garments for these material bodies? These things, so insignificant, are taking too much of our time. Let us spend more time on things that endure. Make the blessed Christ the central figure of your picture, and when it is finished, people will know just what you think of him. What a worthless life it will be if he is left out of your picture!

THE QUIET HOUR

Suggestions for the Weekly Devotional Meeting Or for Prayerful, Private Meditation.

Power in Prayer—"Whatsoever Ye Will"

John 15: 7

For Week Beginning January 4, 1920

1. A Broad Promise.—"If ye abide in me, and my word abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you." Do you see how it touches every are of life's horizon? It reaches to the very limits of God's grace. It is one of the blessed "whatsoevers" that only the omniscience of the All-Mereiful Father can define.

2. The Wonderful "Whatsoever."—No surveyor has ever drawn a chain around it. Like the blue sky above us, it overarches us wherever we go. If we reach the uttermost ends of the earth we are still in the center of that far-reaching, all-encompassing, infinite "whatsoever"! When, in the path of life, we come to God's "whatsoever," we have struck a mountain range that is as high as heaven, over which no foot of man has ever ventured. Science can not build a pathway over its crest, and even the seers of Jehovah have not succeeded in getting beyond the foothills. The apostles could only stand still on its uplands and cry: "To the hills I lift mine eyes." The martyrs climbed high upon its soaring cliffs, until, strangled by the fumes of the pit, they cried aloud: "How long, O Lord, how long!"

3. We Must Link up Our Lives with God's Plans.—If, therefore, God measures the blessings of our prayers by this unscalable "whatsoever"—this horizon-wide, this heaven-high promise—then we should all avail ourselves of whatsoever blessings our confidence in God can obtain. It is not ours to inquire whether this thing or that can be obtained by prayer, or whether we are justified in pleading with God for certain longed-for blessings. The thing for us is to put ourselves in line with the "whatsoever" of God's plan, and then trust God to fulfill his promises. Surely, we can obtain nothing if our eyes are not toward the hills. If we are not striving to do the will of God, the greatness of the "whatsoever" will be of no value to us.

4. We Must Trust God Absolutely.—There is nothing gained by idle speculation about the "wideness of God's mercy." There is much gained by bringing ourselves into the presence of God and letting the very aroma of his presence fill us with its celestial ecstasy. We know that men of prayer have been the men whom God has used mightily in the history of his Kingdom. We know that such are the people whom he is using today. These servants of his are the evidences of the power of prayer. They are his witnesses to the blessedness of prevailing prayer. They are the "infallible proofs" that his promises, like the trees by the river's side, "yield all manner of precious fruits"—how luscious and refreshing, only those may know who, like Nathanael of old, prayed under the fig tree, and were seen of the Lord Jesus. The world movers have been men of prayer. Do you want power? Ask for it. The great need of today is prayer, prayer, prayer! What we need in the church today is prayer—more prayer!

5. Suggestive References.—God's willingness to hear (Psa. 34: 15). "Commit thy way unto the Lord" (Psa. 37: 4). "In all thy ways acknowledge him" (Prov. 3: 6). "Seek ye the Lord" (Isa. 55: 6). The Lord's readiness to answer (Isa. 65: 24). A great promise (Jer. 33: 3). An assurance that can not fail (Lam. 3: 25). Ask and you will receive (Matt. 7: 7, 8). The power of united prayer (Matt. 18: 19, 20). The Spirit's help in our prayers (Rom. 8: 26). Ask for wisdom (James 1: 5-7).

Seventy-five came forward, forty-seven of whom have been baptized and two reclaimed in the Roanoke City church, Va.,—Bro. E. S. Coffman, of Harrisonburg, same State, evangelist; seven have been baptized since the meetings.

OUR EVANGELISTS

Bro. A. B. Miller, of Bridgewater College, to begin Dec. 30 in the Huntingdon church, Pa.

Bro. J. Edwin Jarhoe, of Chicago, to begin some time in January in the Laton church, Calif.

Bro. Wm. Lampin, of Polo, Ill., to begin some time in January in the Goshen City church, Ind.

Bro. Frank Sargent, of Chicago, to begin some time in February in the East Wenatchee church, Wash.

Bro. Hiram Eshelman, of Mt. Joy, Pa., to begin Dec. 27 in the Millbach house, Richland congregation, same State.

PERSONAL MENTION

Bro. F. E. Miller changes his address from Mt. Grove, Mo., to Cabool, same State.

Brethren Merlin G. Miller, Elgin S. Moyer, H. E. Keller and Roger D. Winger, of Bethany Bible School, attended some of the sessions of the Mission Board Meeting.

Bro. Charles E. Delp is in a position to do evangelistic work in such of our churches as may wish to make arrangements to that end. He should be addressed at Shannon, Ill., at as early a date as possible.

Bro. S. C. Miller, of Roseville, Ill., after delivering the evening sermon for the Elgin congregation on Sunday, Dec. 14, visited the Publishing House next day, favoring the "Messenger" rooms with an appreciated call.

Sisters Anna M. Eby and Anna V. Blough, missionaries on furlough from the India and China fields respectively, attended the Mission Board meeting last week and favored the "Messenger" rooms with pleasant interviews.

The General Mission Board meeting, last week, filled two days, Wednesday and Thursday, brimful, with morning, afternoon and night sessions. The full membership of the Board was present, except the Life Advisory Member, Bro. D. L. Miller, who is spending the winter in California.

The First District of China has selected Eld. Ernest D. Vaniman as its Standing Committee representative at the 1920 Conference.

Mission Board Meeting is always too busy a time for much "visiting." We managed to have a few words with each member of the Board, however, the largest opportunity being given by Bro. Yoder, who came early to confer in advance with the Secretary about that proposed visit to the mission fields.

The Yearbook for 1920

Borring some new kind of striko, or other similar calamity, the 1920 Yearbook will ho ready for mailing by the time this issuo of the "Mossenger" is in your hands. Evory reador of the "Messenger" will need it.

It is tho reforence manual of our church activities. It contains an introductory review of the year nineteen nineteen, the Forward Movement Program, a summary of past achievements and future plans in Home and Foreign Missions, the Sunday School Work, Education, and the Christion Workers' Society.

It tells of our reform and relief activities in Temporonce and Purity, the Peace Movement, Child Rescue Work, Dress Reform, tho Sistors' Aid Society, and our Relief and Reconstruction Work in Armenio.

It gives biographical sketches of Elders John Colvin Bright, David F. Hoover, H. B. Brumbaugh and Steven P. Berkebile.

It contains the corrected Ministerial List, the List of Churches ond Missions with Their Pastors and Elders, the District Mission Boards, the District Ministerial Boards, and a list of the Gish Fund Books.

It includes on Almanoc for 1920, a calendar for 1921 and other miscellaneous information.

The price, with a "Gospol Mossenger" subscription, is only ten cents. If your order has not been sont in olreody, simply odd ton cents to your "Messenger" subscription and send both promptly. If you have already renewed your "Messenger" subscription, you need send only ten cents.

But you need the 1920 Yearbook.

The Intercollegiate Anti-Tobacco Association has appointed Bro. J. B. Moore, of Sterling, Colo., Field Secretary for that State. In that capacity Bro. Moore stands ready to address the churches of Colorado, as well as the high schools and colleges, on the nicotine problem. He is prepared to offer substantial awards to colleges engaging in anti-tobacco oratorical contests.

Bro. F. D. Anthony, of 1020 Falls Road, Baltimore, Md., after more than seven years of faithful service as pastor of the Woodberry congregation of that city, has decided to close his pastoral labors and devote much of his time hereafter to evangelistic work among the churches. Bro. Anthony is now open to engagements for such services and ready to begin the work at once.

ELSEWHERE IN THIS ISSUE

Members of Southern Illinois will please note the announcement of Bro. E. E. Brubaker, Secretary of the District Mission Board, as given among the Notes.

The Bible and Sunday-School Institute of Southern Illinois is to be held at Astoria Dec. 28-31. A choice program has been provided, as may be seen by referring to page 828.

The Manchester College Special Bible Term is to be held Jan. 6-16. Competent speakers have been provided, and ample provisions at reasonable rates have been made for all who may wish to attend. See notice on page 828.

MISCELLANEOUS

The Bible Institute of Bridgewater College, Bridgewater, Va., is to be held Jan. 11-17. The program reached us too late for this issue, but will appear next week. Watch for it!

The East Wenatchee church, Wash., reports an offering of $1,010.10 for the Armenian orphans. Such striking liberality by a church far ont on the frontier, is certainly praiseworthy. "The Lord loveth a cheerful giver."

We are requested to announce that the Bible Institute at Sebring, Fla., to be conducted by Bro. Jas. M. Moore, begins on Monday, Jan. 26, and will continue two weeks. Bro. Moore will preach each evening during the Institute work.

"The year 1920 is before us. We want to make this the best year in the history of the church." Seems to have the right ring, doesn't it? But nothing in the little circular, containing this statement, impressed us more than the thorough, business-like way in which the budget of the church expenses for 1920 is itemized. It is not a very large congregation either, but the total budget is $2,500. And besides such homely but necessary items as coal, gas, water rent, repairs and other things, home and foreign missions, education and such matters are also liberally provided for. Most assuredly this church is interested in the Forward Movement.

Since our mention of the "Home Study Course for Ministers," many are availing themselves of the excellent advantages to be gained thereby. It should not be forgotten, however, that a tuition fee of $6 per year has been decided upon. This is necessary to make the course self-supporting, and should be paid when the work is entered upon.

From the Official Directory of the Eastern District of Pennsylvania for 1920 we glean a few interesting facts: The largest congregation, White Oak, has a membership of 465. Three others have over 300 members and ten others have over 200. The total membership of the District is somewhat over 6,400. There are 120 ministers not elders, and 73 elders.

With the last number of each year we usually give some editorial attention to the year's tendencies or events in their general relation to the church life. We are using our space this week, however, for a report of the Mission Board Meeting. Such observations as we have to offer, on the significance of the year as a whole, are reserved for our next issue, the first of the New Year.

"Early Educational Endeavors of the Church of the Brethren," by Bro. Jno. S. Flory, is the latest booklet published by the General Educational Board, Elgin, Ill. It is full of information and interesting details of both early and late educational efforts among our people—facts that none of our readers can afford to miss. A copy is yours for the asking by addressing the Board as above.

Special Notice.—The elders, pastors and treasurers of the thirty-seven congregations of Western Pennsylvania are hereby notified that the three cents a member apportionment for the Annual Meeting treasury, is now due, and should be paid before the end of February. Also give the Treasurer the number of your members. Send all funds to Jerome E. Blough, Treasurer, 1309 Franklin Street, Johnstown, Pa.

Jan. 5-9 inclusive, the Special Bible Session of Daleville College, Va., will be held. The announcement of this most interesting annual gathering reached us just before closing these columns, and can not be given in full until next week. We take pleasure, however, in stating that during the five days of intensive work, six able speakers will render their very best efforts, to make the sessions truly worth while for those in attendance.

Along with the more urgent need of pastors, another is coming to the front. Some congregations, which have had the advantage of competent pastoral leadership, are beginning to realize how much it would help the work along to have equally efficient service in the direction of the music. One of our live pastors has just written us, expressing his desire to get in touch with a good song leader. As a church utilizes its possibilities for service, it is sure to find its vision of those possibilities widening.

Special Notice.—During the past few weeks a number of important mail trains have been discontinued. Weather conditions have also delayed trains. The mails are always heavy during the holidays, so if your "Gospel Messenger" does not reach you on schedule time, please consider the conditions mentioned and do not censure us too severely. We are doing all in our power to have the paper reach you regularly, but we can not be responsible for conditions beyond our control. We believe when things become normal again you will find everything O. K.

A BYSTANDER'S NOTES

Good Advice.—A noted church worker, in a recent address, made use of the following expressive phrase: "Don't back out just when you ought to go forward." The terse admonition applies with special significance to the Forward Movement upon which we have entered. As it appears to the Bystander, no danger is more threatening, at this critical time, than the very common one of REACTION—standing still for the time being. Not to advance, means to "back out." That is a truth so obvious as to need no further proof. Our only hope of success in the Forward Movement is a continual "pressing onward," with all the energy at our command.

Following Jesus All the Way.—In conversation with an earnest Christian, recently, the growing laxity of many professors of religion was deplored. Our final conclusion was that in many cases the Divine Pattern has, unfortunately, been lost sight of, and consequently there is a lack of fervent consecration to the work of the Lord. While, literally speaking, we can not walk in Christ's steps in many of the steps he trod, we can certainly live in his spirit amid all the vicissitudes of our mortal life. In our attitude toward God and our fellow-men we can live in the spirit of Christ. His spirit was reverence and love toward God, and sympathy and love toward his fellow-men. He kept his heart ever open toward the Father, so that he never doubted the presence of heaven in his life; and he kept his heart ever open towards his fellow-men, so that he uttered no word and did no deed in relation to them that was not inspired by love. And by God's help we may imitate him in this, and thus live the Christ-life before the world.

AROUND THE WORLD

Forty-Four States Sign Ratification Act

Despite the oft-reiterated claims of the "wet" element that the prohibition amendment is constitutionally illegal, one fact stands out clearly and unassailable—forty-four States have officially notified the State Department of their ratification. Virginia occupies the place of honor in the illustrious enrollment of States on the side of decency and sobriety. New York's report, received Sept. 8, last, closes the list. To any right-thinking mind, the showing is a most significant one. It seems clear that an overwhelming majority favors prohibition, and it is strange indeed that the saloon-men should still cherish a forlorn hope that through some sinister move the prohibition enactment might be defeated.

A Growing Danger

Radicalism, by whatever name it may be known, is always a danger to the nation as well as to the individual. Whether these extremists are known as rank Socialists, Syndicalists or Bolsheviki, their ultimate trend is ever towards destruction. Their chief aim is the overthrow of organized Government and of wealth in partteular. As might he expected, the church, too, is marked for the same destruction. "The British Weekly" quotes the frank avowal of Ferdinand Pellontier, a radical agitator, as follows: "We are rebels all the while, men without God, without master, and without fatherland, irreconcilable enemies of all despotism, moral or material, individual or collective, opposed to all law and authority."

Growing Old Graeefully

Humanity is, as a rule, greatly interested in any suggestion that has proved of value in lengthening the brittle thread of earthly existence. The testimony of Dr. Stephen Smith, a famous Civil War surgeon, now in his ninety-sixth year, should, therefore, be of decided value: "Keep alert, keep occupied, keep in touch with your environments! Read the news and associate with men and women who are active. So occupied, your health, in ninety cases out of a hundred, will take care of itself." The doctor, in our opinion, omits a very essential factor—complete dependence upon the Lord and the ordering of our entire life according to the precepts of his Blessed Word. That practically insures our present and eternal well-being.

An Encouraging Outlook

Statistics, as a rule, are not specially interesting, and yet, once in a while, something may be gleaned therefrom, inferentially, that is decidedly significant. As we all know, mission work has been of slow growth, despite the Master's emphatic "Go ye," and one is not greatly surprised when the statistician assures us that it took ninety years to make the first million converts in heathen lands. For the second million there was a perceptible "speeding up" in the process, for only twenty-three years were required to gain that goodly company of converts. At the present rate of mission conquest, souls are won for the Kingdom at the rate of a million every four years. Now if we could but Christianize modern civilization itself, the great world family would have an exceedingly bright future.

Mitigating the Horrors of Penitentiary Life

A nation-wide campaign, to put each of the fifty-nine State Prisons and the five Federal Penitentiaries upon a humane basis, is being ushered in by Thomas Mott Osborn, the noted prison reformer. He interprets the precept of Christ, in reference to visiting "those in prison," as involving active effort looking to the amelioration of the distressing conditions, so commonly incident to prison life, and he hopes to give material assistance along that line of reform. The entire fortune of a wealthy ex-convict "known from one end of the country to the other" and a man of influence in Washington, has been placed at Mr. Osborn's disposal. Sixteen hundred former prison inmates, now in New York City, all of whom are "making good" with reputable firms, are giving their entire strength to the crusade by which more humane methods are to prevail in the penal institutions of our land.

How an Uprising in India Was Quelled

A number of the British journals are greatly agitated because—according to a report just made public—an English military officer in India, a few months ago, ordered his troops to fire at random on a large assembly of civilians, causing the immediate death of five hundred, and the wounding of fifteen hundred others. He admits that he "did not attempt to care for the wounded or dead. That was their business: they have hospitals, he supposed." Just what the details of the gruesome affair are, or what the provocation, we are not told by the gentleman in question. But as considerable time has elapsed since the unfortunate occurrence, it would hardly be expedient, perhaps, at this late date, to venture upon a discussion of the unfortunate happening. Conditions in India are complicated, at best. It will be obvious to any thinking mind that it is no small task for the thirty million British to keep in check the three hundred millions of India. British papers admit that gentleness does not always meet the needs of the situation. It is but fair to concede, however, that the British are the world's best and most just colonists, the most tolerant, good-natured foreign rulers, if the people, thus paternally cared for, will but take that view of the matter. But in India, as elsewhere, the agitator freely sows his seed of riot and rebellion.

Papers and Magazines Suspending Daily

A number of causes are contributing to conditions that make the publishing of periodicals exceedingly expensive, nowadays. In fact, for some publications the greatly enhanced cost has become practically prohibitive, and regretfully they have passed out of existence. In the case of some, that cater chiefly to the desire for entertainment rather than instruction, the loss is negligible. In the case of others, that labor for the highest interests of humanity, their suspension is a distinct loss—one that the country can not well afford. The printers' strikes, the "Zone Postage Law," paper at seven cents or more a pound, and the vast increase in cost of newspaper publication in general, are responsible for defunct periodicals.

Will China Be a New Korea?

Anxiety is felt in all parts of China, among Chinese and foreigners alike, that American intervention in Mexico will at once be followed by Japanese intervention in China. Already Nipponese officials are peremptorily warning China that Japan can not hold herself responsible if the boycott of Japanese goods is not immediately stopped. Japanese propaganda is right now filling the Chinese papers with rumors about American aggression in Mexico, hinting that China is in the same condition with relation to Japan. Fearing the worst, the Chinese are urging their Government to force Japan to give a guarantee that Nipponese subjects in China will cease carrying arms. Japanese warships are also to retreat from China's waters. A subjugation, similar to that of Korea, is greatly feared by the people of China, and will be resisted by every means possible.

Further Triumphs of Air Navigators

New interest in aërial flights was aroused recently when Lecointe, a Frenchman, attained a rate of speed exceeding 225 miles an hour, averaging 200 miles during his entire trip. Expert aëronauts declare that this is but a fair start towards the coming speed of 1,000 miles an hour. This, they say, will mean that Paris may be reached in three days from New York, some day, while a trip around the globe may be made while the sun is shining overhead all the while. Preposterous as such a prediction may seem, who would say that it may not be done, in view of past accomplishments? By the way, some really valuable utilizations of the aëroplane are made nowadays. At San Diego, Calif., large schools of fish were thus located, keeping fishermen busy all day. Patrolling of timber tracts, with a view of checking incipient fires, is also successfully accomplished.

The Profiteer in Ancient Rome

Hoarding of the necessities of life, and "cornering the market" were offenses severely punished in Ancient Rome. That picturesque old emperor, Diocletian, who rose to the throne which made him master of the then known world, issued an edict in 301 A. D., that clearly defines his idea of profiteering. We quote in part: "If the raging avarice which, in utter disregard of humane principles, continues to increase, as it has been doing, by leaps and bounds, could be held in moderate check, or if the condition of the people were such that they could bear the burden, there might be justification in ignoring the situation and saying nothing. . . . It is our pleasure, therefore, to decree that the prices, herewith submitted, be regarded as prevailing rates, and that any excess is strictly forbidden. We also ordain that if any shall violate the law he puts his life in jeopardy."

The Story of Armenian Cities

A relief worker, who has personally investigated conditions in Armenian cities, has found ample proof that the dreadful stories of massacres by the Turks have not been exaggerated in the least. Ourfa, Diabekir, Harpoot and Malatea—once flourishing cities—now places of devastation, give silent testimony to the terrible wrongs inflicted upon the Armenians, and also make a most eloquent plea for the relief of the dire need of those still left alive in them. If it were not for the fact that each of the four cities referred to is a center for the work of the Near East Relief Committee, the sight of the devastation in these places, and the pathetic tales of wholesale destruction, wrought by the Turks, would be harrowing in the extreme. The recitals of brutal butchery, as revealed by the piles of human bones in each locality, would be too horrible to contemplate. Beginning with the city of Ourfa, only a glance is needed to demonstrate at once why it is known as the "City of Death." In the mountain-side, near the city, there is a vast cave, within which there is a deep well—the common grave of hundreds of former citizens. The ground around the cave, still littered with human bones, bears silent testimony to the carnival of death, here staged by the remorseless Turks. Diabekir, a beautiful city in the interior, also testifies to the wanton cruelty of Turkish fiends incarnate. Scattered human bones, and even entire skeletons, tell their ghastly story. Workers of the Committee for Relief in the Near East, in all the Armenian cities, are recognized as Americans by their uniforms, and treated with obsequious respect by Turkish officials. These men always hasten to explain that they were not present at the times of these massacres. Harpoot, a magnificent mountain city, repeats the terrible record of crime. A little ravine, amid the hills, is half filled with the bones of Armenians who were massacred when the city was taken.

Churches to Observe Child Labor Sunday

As now arranged by the National Child Labor Committee, Sunday, Jan. 25, will be observed by churches throughout this country as "Child Labor Sunday." The many demands for the presentation of great public causes, may make it impossible, in most cases, to devote a full sermon period to the consideration of the important subject alluded to above. It is hoped, however, that the consideration of the claims of childhood at its best, may be given at least a few minutes of the sermon period. The great harm, resulting from the employment of children in industrial pursuits, while physically unfitted for such a task, should appeal to every lover of childhood. Further information on this important topic may he had by addressing the National Child Labor Committee, 105 East Twenty-Second Street, New York City.

Science Again to the Fore

According to a recent press report, an Asiatic scientist has perfected an instrument, magnifying, by a hundred thousand, the highest power of the microscope, thus making it possible actually to see the growth of a plant in its minutest details. This will enable the Burbanks of the future to watch from hour to hour the effects of different fertilizers, of water, of electricity, and even of alcohol, on plant life, instead of waiting an entire season for the final results. With this new "crescograph" to watch a plant's growth, the X-ray to look inside of it, and the whole science of chemistry to do his bidding, it would seem that man would soon be on a fair way to solve the food problem. What a pity, however, that there is not an equal anxiety to solve other problems that vitally affect the well-being of mankind. "Man's inhumanity to man makes countless thousands mourn," said Burns, and that is true even today.

One Is Made to Wonder

General surprise was aroused when it became known that a Vermont clergyman, after a vain attempt to keep his family on a $600 a year salary, abandoned the ministry, became a veterinary surgeon, and now earns $3,600 a year. It is no compliment to the intelligence of humanity that a minister should he paid $600 for the shepherding of a flock, while there is no hesitancy in allowing him six times that amount to insure the best interests of cows, horses and hogs. If you inquire into the matter, you will soon learn that finances are a leading factor in the latter case. Something just as amazing crops out in Governmental affairs of the United States. Expert advice of the best specialists is placed at the disposal of any family that is worried about diseased livestock, while mere sympathy, and none too much of that, is given to a mother, worried about her children. Logically and rightfully, children should come first, but do they?

Chinese Home Missions

A growing missionary spirit among Chinese Christians has led to the formation of Chinese Home Missionary Societies. One of these—in Nanking—is not only an entirely Chinese organization, but is interdenominational, and aims to evangelize distant and unoccupied parts of China. Its officers and members are prominent Chinese Christians, and the work is entirely supported by the native churches. The following appeal has been sent out by them: "Christ's instructions are: 'Go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that disbelieveth shall be condemned.' These are not words to be idly repeated, but call for action. Nor are we to limit ourselves to any one corner and take comfort therein. When we think of the multitudes to whom life is but a drunken sleep, and death a fateful dream, whose is the responsibility if not that of the 300,000 Christians of China? Day and night this thought presses on one with increasing agony. Jesus is the world's Savior and his disciples must share his task. His Word abides as a sacred commission for us. . . . Of the 12,000,000 people in Yunnan, there are only 7,413 Christians. Foreign missionaries are proportionally few, and there is not one ordained Chinese preacher, nor western-trained doctor. . . . Christians of China, does not such a pitiful situation quicken your benevolent instincts?" May we not continue along the same line of reasoning, by appealing to the Christians of America: "Does not the zeal of those earnest Chinese Christians put to shame the indifference so often seen among church members in the United States?"

The New Year Bells

BY J. O. BARNHART

The North Star twinkled and looked down
That winter night on the old town.
Its hundred roofs, weighed down with snow,
Like army tents in moonlight glow.
Above the snows the church towers rise,
Their steeples pointing to the skies.

And the old schoolhouse, too, stands near
And 'tis the last night of the year.
The schoolhouse windows blankly stare
Out through the clear and frosty air;
A youth at one tall window stands,
Where he can watch the town-clock's hands,
As gleaming in the silvery light,
They tell the hour of drear midnight.

The youth's hands back in darkness grope,
And firmly clasp the old bell-rope.
Impatient, he the stroke to hear,
To toll the knell of the dying year.
He reaches forth the rope to pull,
His young heart running over full
Of joy because the old school-bell,
The New Year's birth is first to tell.

But scarce his bell begins to sound
When other bells take up the round.
Loud their reverberations roll,
And thrill the listener's inmost soul
As faster still they ring and sway
Each to the other seems to say:
"The old is dead; the new is born!
Proclaim, O bells, the joyous morn!
All things material must decay;
The old must to the new give way,
Nothing endures but Hope and Truth,
Then let each soul renew its youth.
The old is dead, the new is born,
Proclaim, O bells, the joyous morn!"

And to and fro, and back again,
Each bell replies, "Amen! Amen!"
And in each heart an echo swells,
While listening to the New Year bells.

Oh, joys of youth! Alas, too few!
Among the pleasures that I knew,
Nothing my youthful bosom thrilled,
Or my small world with rapture filled,
Like running through the frosty air,
Climbing the old school belfry-stair,
And ringing out the New Year chime,
Of all earth's songs the most sublime.

But all material things decay,
The schoolhouse old has passed away.
A larger one stands in its place,
A thing of beauty and of grace,
But there's no belfry and no bell,
The happy New Year's birth to tell.
A gong electric, with its rattle,
Calls children now with tasks to battle.

But on the last night of the year,
That old schoolbell to memory dear,
Shall still sound in my fancy's ear,
A chime as sweet, a song as clear,
As it sang in the long ago,
On New Year's Eve across the snow.
And till my life's last day is done,
And watchers say: "His race is run!"
When mournful ringing of the bells,
The time of my departure tells,
The New Year chimes shall give me joy
As great as when I was a boy.
'Tis long since I the fountain found
The Spaniard sought the world around,
In which to plunge his wasted frame,
And regain youth, wealth, power and fame.
Searching, great hardships he'd endure,
And died decrepit, old and poor.
But long ago I found the spring
Which speeds the drooping spirit's wing.

While yet an humble child and meek,
That fountain I was taught to seek.
And leaning on a trusty guide,
I found the spring a Rock beside,
I plunged beneath the sparkling tide.
And now, though years have passed away,
With wrinkled brow and locks all gray,
At heart, a youth I still remain,
Hale and triumphant over pain.
And still shall live, though ages roll,
With youth eternal in my soul.
And when my latest hour is nigh
And to this world I close my eye,
When the old sexton rings the bell,
Let no one say: "It is his knell."
But listening with enraptured ear,
Let each exclaim: "'Tis his New Year!
His body's dead, his soul is born,
Into a happy New Year morn!"
An endless morn, unmarked by years,
Where come no sighs, nor pains nor tears.
Where bells of hope and love and truth,
Ring out the chimes of vernal youth.
And ransomed souls with rapture swell,
Listening to heaven's New Year bell!

Love and Law

BY BESS BATES

BROTHER REED had preached a stirring sermon on "Love and Law." Uncle Jim Lovelock had listened with pleased attention, for he agreed with every word that had been said. Deacon Brown had frowned through the first half of the sermon, and leafed through his Bible during the last half, in a vain effort not to listen. He did not like these sermons that left him feeling as if he were not doing all that he should. He gave his share to the expenses of the church, and they were heavy enough. He attended all of the services, and took an active part in the running of the church. What more could be expected of him? Certainly, that was all that any church member need do. But Bro. Reed thought differently and preached differently, and he had a disquieting number of Bible references to back up his views.

As soon as the services were over, Deacon Brown hunted up Uncle Jim and began: "That young preacher isn't getting enough doctrine in his sermons."

"I wondered how soon you'd bring up that point," smiled Uncle Jim, "and I'm ready for you. Half of his sermons have been on doctrines since he has been here, and I'm right here to tell you, deacon, you would have to go a good ways before you would hear a better or more uplifting sermon than we had today. I say Bro. Reed is a find, and I'm not going to listen to any kicking about his preaching."

When Uncle Jim smiled, even Deacon Brown couldn't get angry, but he still retained an argumentative mood.

"Where will such talk get us to, as he put up today?" he said. "To hear him talk, you would think we didn't need any laws at all but could just run things on love. There isn't any question about it, it couldn't be done that way. We must have laws and stand by them. That is what I think about it."

"All right. All right. I agree with you and so does Bro. Reed, as far as you go. We have to have laws and we have to stand by them, for there are people who haven't love enough in their hearts to do any other way." Uncle Jim paused to push his hat back meditatively. "But it's a mighty poor sort of Christianity that only lives up to a set of laws. When I was a little fellow, struggling along to lead the right kind of a life, I used to think if only the Bible was a set of rules, like the teacher used to write on the blackboard, I could just live up to those rules and that would be enough. I could feel as I pleased. I was always good at living up to a set of rules and getting around them, too, for that matter. Seems like I remember you were about the same, deacon. I remember how much trouble we used to give old Jenkins and he couldn't do anything because we always obeyed his rules to the letter. There were always enough things he couldn't think of, to tell us not to do, for us to have a pretty good time."

"I can't see the connection," began Deacon Brown.

"I'm going to tell you how I see it," went on Uncle Jim, "and mebbe you can see the connection then. Remember Jenkins made a rule that every person he caught whispering had to stay after school. Well, he didn't catch very many of us and you know there was a lot of whispering going on, too. And so did he know it, but he couldn't help it. Now just suppose Jenkins had loved us squirming kids, and we had admired and loved him. Just suppose that. Now, if he had said to us: 'Boys, whispering disturbs this school. We are going to work together to make this a good school. 'I want to help you and I want you to help me. How many are going to do their part?' There wasn't a one of us who wouldn't have done our best to quit whispering. We knew that Jenkins wanted to do the right thing by us and so we would do the same by him. It would have been a matter of love. He loved us and we loved him in return. Therefore, we would do what he said and do it just as hard as we could. But when it came to obeying his rules, that was another matter. We felt he hated us and we likewise hated him, and consequently we obeyed his rules just enough to escape punishment. Do you begin to see, Deacon?"

"Go on and finish, Jim."

"It looks to me like it was a good deal that way with being a Christian. If we had a set of definite rules laid down for us to follow, we would always try to do just that much and no more. Lots of people live just that kind of a Christian life, too, doing just what they think they have to and no more. Don't you remember Jesus said: 'Ye have heard that it was said by them of old time, Thou shalt not kill; and whosoever shall kill shall be in danger of the judgment: but I say unto you, That whosoever is angry with his brother without a cause shall be in danger of the judgment.' Christianity means feeling right toward others on the inside as well as acting right on the outside.

"When we talk about living up to laws, every one of us will justify himself by saying: 'I'm as good as so and so.' That's one of the most common excuses made by people outside of the church about those inside. It isn't a question of how good you are, but a question of how much you love God and how much he loves you. We are always talking and singing and praying about how much God loves us, and I sometimes wonder how often we stop to think just how much of ourselves is worth his loving. There isn't a one of us but that would feel mighty little when we look into our hearts and see just how much is really worthy of God's love. We wouldn't have much of the 'I'm as good as you' feeling then. Just remember that commandment about loving God with all your heart and your neighbor as yourself. We can't think about that too much."

Uncle Jim paused for breath.

"That may be all true, but nevertheless you got to have your laws, Jim, and live by 'em. Look at that boy, Allen, of mine. If I didn't have a set of rules for him to go by and make him go by 'em, I don't know what he would do."

"All right, deacon. But that boy Allen may teach you some lessons before he is grown," retorted Uncle Jim, and proceeded to his car, with Aunt Nancy following.

"You're right about Allen, Jim," commented Aunt Nancy, who had heard most of the conversation. "He's already into things his father doesn't know about, and he doesn't have very much true love for his father to keep him out, either."

The Work-Year's June

BY OMA KARN

"When the boughs are bare and the rustling leaves
Flit over the fields where they bound the sheaves;
And the stars shine keen and cold and high,
Where the pale moon sails through an alien sky,
And the sun lags late in the morning's chill,
And sinks too soon in the evening's still."

THE recent autumnal season was unusual in regard to the long-delayed coming of Jack Frost. When, in his stealthy way, he did put in his appearance, it was to make only a very short call—just the lightest touch of his magic-colored brush.

Light, however, as was this touch, it was sufficient to paint the entire earth with glory. At a distance, the panorama of color blended into a nature tapestry, as softly rich and beautiful to the eye as any silken one woven by the master-weavers of the East. Nearer at hand the various colors separated themselves from the gorgeous whole, standing out in varying degrees of beauty, the flame of the maples, the dark red of the oaks, the yellow of the chestnuts, the browns of shrubs emphasized and accentuated by the changeless green of the pines and the hemlocks. The sky was as blue as that of the month of June. The rays of sunlight shone down on the glory through air which seemed a part of the color, so pure and wineklike it was. On the gusts of intermittent breezes detached bits of color floated downward toward the earth, as if some one were breaking a kaleidoscope, and scattering its jewel-like fragments about. One was made to think, as one gazed on the beauty and the bounty, abounding on every side, that the four seasons had met and united forces to show forth their triumph in the way of achievement, which is really the way it is. Autumn is both preparation and completion. It is the time of seeding and it is the time of harvesting. The seasons blend into one another, much as the colors of the autumnal glory become a part of a gorgeous whole. How much we have to be grateful for, as the result of this union of seasons each year!

The glory this year lasted but a short time. A soft, smoky haze gathered over the face of nature. Gradually the blue of the sky was obscured by heavy, low-hanging clouds. For three days the rain fell. When the weather cleared, the glory lay underfoot, a sodden mass. The rising wind sighed a requiem over its remains. The trees, stripped of their foliage, stood gaunt and bare-limbed, and the air carried the unmistakable tang of the near approach of winter. What perishable produce remained outdoors, was hastily gathered in. Stoves were put up, furnaces and hot air plants were set to going, and homes were made close and cozy, in anticipation of the cold, freezing weather of winter.

What an opportunity this last-named season holds withing its keeping! For the cultivation of the intellect and the improvement of the mind it is the best of all the seasons. Especially are the long indoor evenings conducive to study, and to the development and the fulfillment of many cherished plans and desires, mapped out during the busier season of physical labor. The outdoor stormy days are times for the task put aside for "some other day." The more weather-favored, sunshiny days provide a time for the cultivation of the "community spirit," now so popular, and for the looking after of the various benevolent and philanthropic ventures in which, if we are wise, we are heartily interested. The seed planted in the field is lying in the dark earth, awaiting the spring time, and the summer in which to grow and to mature. So should the seed planted in the mind while the hands were busy with spring and summer time tasks, grow and develop during the leisure hours of the winter-time. Weather specialists predict a cold, hard winter for the season whose threshold we have just crossed. The muse of learning sits in the chimney corner, waiting. It waits at every fireside where there is any chance of finding a pupil. There are schools which furnish free manual training, and there are free public libraries in every town of any size in the United States. There are correspondence courses and mind improvement helps galore. Most beneficial of all, there is the precious Word of God and the opportunity for quiet times alone. Are we alive to the advantage of these opportunities? Will we use them?

"Then the pulse beats strong and the eyes shine bright,
And the hands are strong, and the feet are light,
And the quick thought leaps, and the strong will springs,
And the work is wrought with a heart that sings,
And the doing of deeds makes life seem fair—
'Tis the work-year's June when the boughs are bare."

The Girl With an Ideal

BY LULA R. TINKLE

GRACE and Rose were very good chums, and were often together, yet they differed much in types of character. Grace was sweet-tempered, easy to please, and never emphatic or sure about anything. Everybody spoke of her as a "nice girl." Rose was an enthusiastic, jolly girl with ideals of her own, which were being built into her character. While she was not so sweet-tempered as her chum, she possessed that type of personality which makes people take notice and which demands respect.

One evening, as they were out for a walk with two gentlemen friends, their "new beaux," Frank Weston, the young man with Grace, suddenly pulled from his pocket a package of cigarets, deftly lighted one, and began smoking. Grace smiled and remarked about the skill with which he curled the smoke. Harley Wilson, the young man with Rose, was restless and uncertain as to whether he should indulge in smoking in Rose's presence.

Presently Frank called back: "Hal, why don't you have a smoke? Don't be so stupid."

Spurred on by the challenge, Harley turned to Rose with a searching "Do you care if I smoke?" Quick as a flash came the thought to Rose: "You might offend him if you refuse." Then came another voice: "Be true to your ideals."

There was no time for a mental debate. Looking him in the eyes, she answered in a kind but firm voice: "Harley, I never have been in the company of a young man who smoked." Harley's face grew red with embarrassment. Then he said: "Then—then I'll not smoke."

They walked on in silence. Rose wondered if she had been unjust, and whether she should explain to him why she did not approve of smoking. She, too, was flushed because of the embarrassing silence. Harley Wilson was having a hard struggle with himself. Presently his face brightened as if he had gained a victory. With conviction he said: "Rose, I wish all girls had such an ideal as you have. There wouldn't be so many cigaret fiends, and some of us fellows wouldn't have such a hard time giving up the filthy habit. I have been trying, for several weeks, to quit smoking, but everything seems to be against me. You are the first one to help me. Here's my hand to pledge that I'll never insult another girl, by asking permission to smoke in her presence, for I'll never smoke again."

"All Things Work Together for Good"

BY NORA E. BERKEBILE

THE boys were planning for several weeks to go to their uncle's for Thanksgiving, and then to another uncle over Sunday. The Sunday clothes were all pressed and out on the bed, baths were taken the evening before, play clothes were packed into the suit-case and everything was ready to take the train by daylight the next morning.

But the next morning something came in the way, and the trip had to be given up. The one boy cried and the mother cried, when the boys did not see her, but the oldest one said: "Well, it is all for the best some way, mother. Something serious might have happened. We might have taken some disease on the train or the train might have been wrecked, or my cold might have become worse, so I would have to miss school—who knows what might have happened to us? I know just how our cousins will feel. They will feel just like we did when we looked for company last summer and they did not come. But it is all right, some way, that we were not permitted to go."

How the mother thanked God for such a spirit in her son. He was trying to help the rest to bear the disappointment bravely. He had not been away from home for so long and the disappointment was as great to him as to the others, but he was his father's own son, for the father's favorite text had been: "All things work together for good to those who love the Lord and are called according to his purpose."

A few days later it was revealed how near the boy was right. A daily told us that there had been two wrecks on the road on which they had intended to go, and one collision was between their home station and the one to which they were going. No one was killed, it is true, but who knows what might have happened to them, had they gone. A wind-storm blew over their rabbit-pens in the yard, and a valuable rabbit was liberated, and would have escaped, had they not been at home to look after it. There were other damages the storm would have done, had they not been at home to care for things.

They had done their best to get ready to go, and when they could not, the only right thing to do was to try to make the best of it as cheerfully as they could. Because they took it so patiently, the mother hastily prepared the best dinner she knew how, from materials on hand, and they all thanked the Lord that things were as well with them as they were. And the mother? Well, who would not be thankful for a child with such a spirit? To look on the bright side even when the disappointment is keenest, is applying to one's life that wonderful text: "All things work together for good to those who love the Lord."

MEETING OF THE MUSIC COMMITTEE

The General Music Committee met at Akron, Ohio, Nov. 13 and 14. The committee organized as follows: Chairman, Mrs. Cora Stahly, North Manchester, Ind.; Secretary, B. F. Wampler, Mount Morris, Ill.; Treasurer, Eld. J. B. Miller, Curryville, Pa.

The committee has planned some definite work as follows: They purpose to hold two to three days' Institutes and Conventions over the Brotherhood. They also feel that an endeavor should be made to carry out the recommendations of Annual Conference, passed at Wichita, Kans. It was thought that it would be a fine thing to hold a Music Institute at the time and place of our Annual Conference each year, in view of some work that the committee plans to recommend to the Annual Conference.

The members of the committee hold themselves open to give suggestions and also to hold, and to assist in holding, Music Institutes in connection with Sunday-School Conventions, Bible Institutes, Ministerial Meetings, etc., whenever they have opportunity.

The committee had under advisement a number of things which they will probably recommend to Conference for confirmation.

The committee requests that all bills and funds be sent to the Treasurer, Eld. J. B. Miller, Curryville, Pa.

Mt. Morris, Ill. B. F. Wampler.

CLEVELAND, OHIO

While the progress of our Cleveland work has not been brought to your attention through these columns recently, yet we feel that the advancement in our work here has been sufficient to show how great an opportunity lies before us.

Our records now show between fifty and fifty-five members in the city, of which number about forty show active concern, and lend their support and attendance, as far as circumstances will permit. By circumstances we mean the disadvantage of our membership being scattered throughout the city, making it difficult for all to attend our services each Sunday.

However, refreshing seasons of worship during the fall months have been a strong factor in producing earnest effort on the part of each one of our number. Particularly helpful, in this respect, was the message brought to us on Sunday, Nov. 16, by Bro. H. A. Brubaker, just before his departure from Akron, Ohio, to take up his new work at Pasadena, Calif. This service was easily our best, thus far, in attendance, as well as in inspiration and encouragement for us, to move out and onward in our work. Sixty-three met with us on that day, in marked contrast to the number present a year and a half ago, upon Brother Brubaker's previous visit, when fifteen met together. Last Sunday, also, in our usual service, and despite the somewhat inclement weather, thirty-one were in our Sunday-school, as compared with thirteen—the number for the same Sunday, last year.

It is, indeed, a pleasure also, to have with us Bro. A.

MANCHESTER COLLEGE SPECIAL BIBLE TERM

The annual Special Bible Term of Manchester College will be held Jan. 6 to 16.

Elder W. S. Long, of Altoona, Pa., will preach two sermons daily, one to the students at the morning chapel service, the other for the general public in the evening, at the city Church of the Brethren. Prof. R. C. Wenger will teach two Bible classes daily. Prof. V. F. Schwalm and Eld. T. E. George will give lectures and conduct discussions on ministerial and pastoral problems. Professors C. A. Wright and L. W. Sbultz will give lectures and conduct discussions on the Sunday-school and its needs. Other able speakers will have a place on the program.

The purpose and plan are to make this a helpful Institute to all. Ministers, Sunday-school workers and all others will find the program helpful to them. You are invited to come and enjoy this ten day program.

Our people will note the change of time in opening from Dec. 31 to Jan. 6. Provision will be made for all at a reasonable expense. For further information, address:

North Manchester, Ind. Otho Winger, President.

KANSAS CITY, KANSAS

Oct. 23 the Sunday-school Board of the Central Avenue church met to discuss ways by which to increase the attendance of our schools. While different plans were suggested, the meeting finally drifted into an informal talk, relative to increasing the church attendance in general. The individual members of the Board felt that they, perhaps, bad not been as zealous as they should have been, along this line of endeavor, and decided to hold what would be termed a Home-Coming Day.

Nov. 9, with a large representation from the Kansas City, Mo., church, and a number from the Armourdale Mission, we met to celebrate a "Home-Coming Service" that will long be remembered by all those who attended. The service opened with our regular Sunday-school work —there being special music and readings. This was followed by a "Home-Coming" sermon, delivered by our pastor, Eld. Orin McCune. There was a spirit of home permeating the church, and we had a real "Home-Coming."

After the morning service we had a splendid basket-dinner in the church. We felt, we talked, we acted like just one big family. In the afternoon we had a Sunday-school Convention, with Bro. Wyatt, from the Missouri church, presiding. Many good talks were given. In the evening we were entertained by the scenes of the Passion Play. On the following Sunday, Nov. 16, we held our love feast, with Bro. Willis Devilbiss, of the Ottawa church, in charge. Ernest Goins.

How May We Get a Larger Vision of Our Opportunities?

ing the hungry, clothing the poor and caring for the sick and needy at our door, but we have had a greater vision: Mothers and children across the water need the uplifting hand. They need to be educated and placed upon a higher plane of living, and in order to enjoy these privileges as we have them, they too must feel the touch of a personal Savior." Can you afford to sacrifice the joy and blessing that God would bestow upon you, if you gave freely of your time and your talent, and "as the Lord hath prospered you," in advancing his cause and Kingdom here upon earth?

Claim now the wonderful promise of Mal. 3: 10: "Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing that there shall not be room enough to receive it."

A great challenge is made. Will we not take it up? Let us do his work first, then let us note how much time and strength we have left for our own. "All these things shall be added unto you."

"God gives his best to those who dare to stand the test; He has a second best for those who will not have his best."

Notes From Our Correspondents

As cold water to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country

CALIFORNIA

Glendora church has enjoyed a revival, conducted by Eld. Geo. Mishler, of Indians. Eighteen inspiring sermons were preached, including the Thanksgiving morning service. One young man was received into the church by baptism. The song services were helpfully conducted by our choir leaders, and a number of choice selections were rendered. Owing to the inclement weather and sickness, some were prevented from attending, but the services closed with a full house both morning and evening. An offering was taken on Thanksgiving Day, for the Home Mission work of the District.—Mrs. Sylvia L. Netzley, Glendora, Calif., Dec. 9.

Laton church met in council, with Eld. D. R. Holsinger presiding. Bro. Hallie Coffman, our present Sunday-school superintendent, was reelected for one more term; and Sister Nettie Pike, Primary superintendent; Bro. Blaine Marriott, Christian Workers' president; Brethren Clyde Marriott and Owen Vaughn, Missionary Committee. Four letters were granted, making a total of eight this fall. We are looking forward to a series of lectures, to be given by Bro. Virgil C. Finnell at the church Dec. 18-21; also to a revival, to be conducted by Bro. Justice and wife some time in January.—Verna De Hart, Laton, Calif., Dec. 8.

La Verne church met in council the first week of November to hear the report of the annual visit and to consider the question of a pastor. Eld. R. H. Miller was unanimously reelected as pastor for the ensuing year. Since our last report, Eld. J. F. Masterson, of Long Beach, occupied the pulpit during the Sunday morning service, and delivered an "object" sermon. Our Thanksgiving offering amounted to $82.62. Our new house of worship is progressing. They also reorganized the church, Sunday-school and Christian Worker officers: J. P. Dickey, elder; S. J. Lehman, clerk; Harvey J. Vaniman, Sunday-school superintendent; Welty Lefever, Christian Workers' president; Lottie Hoff, superintendent of Junior Christian Workers; Chas. Shively, superintendent of Intermediate Christian Workers. The work among our foreign neighbors seems to be progressing nicely. We have about a dozen Mexican boys and girls and three children in night school work. Seven Japanese boys are in night school and eight are enrolled in the Sunday-school. The Primary Department of our Sunday-school and a number of the Intermediate Christian Workers are anticipating a joyous time on Christmas morning. They expect to visit the Mexican corners of our city and tell the Christmas story in English and Spanish, and to leave a little remembrance with each Mexican home.—Grace Miller, La Verne, Calif., Dec. 6.

Live Oak church met in council Dec. 5. One letter was granted, three received, and a brother restored. The following officers were elected: Sunday-school superintendent, Bro. C. Simeon Davis; Christian Workers' president, Bro. A. A. Critzer; trustee, Bro. B. Carroll. Dec. 9 Bro. J. U. G. Stiverson, of Oakland, and Bro. Deardorff, of Empire, Calif., were with us in special council. Bro. P. S. Hartman was relieved of the ministry on account of failing health. Bro. A. B. Bieleschaff ordained Bro. Frank Hoff to the office in the full ministry of church and gave us a good sermon while here. Nov. 9 the Aid Society met at the church for an all-day meeting, and gave dinner to the men who were hauling our material during the church remodeling. Thanksgiving Day our elder, Bro. W. R. Brubaker, gave us a splendid sermon, which was followed by a basket dinner. The Aid Society held its session in the afternoon. The Christian Workers' Society met basket-social fashion and realized $20.00. They are now busy preparing a Christmas program, to be rendered on the evening of Dec. 24. Bro. Virgil C. Finnell will be here Jan. 12-15 to hold a Sunday-school Institute.—Cora Myers, Live Oak, Calif., Dec. 1.

Reedley congregation was favored with a visit from Virgil C. Finnell, traveling secretary for the General Sunday School Board, Dec. 1-4. Each afternoon he gave us a lecture on Sunday-school work, and in the evening presented various views on the "Forward Movement," all of which were of great interest to our school. An offering was lifted for the work of the Board.—L. M. Clark, Dinuba, Calif., Dec. 7.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

Washington.—The special council, held annually by the Washington City church, for the purpose of electing officers for the ensuing year, took place Dec. 7, with a good attendance. Two ballots only were two of special note. One was the decision to take the vote of the church at the next regular council in regard to the choosing of members in the ministry and as deacons. The other was a matter too long deferred—the matter of our responsibility in the full ministry —the congregation voting to have all of our four ministers ordained as elders. As the wives of most of the ministers were not present, the ordination was then postponed until such time as is convenient. Our pastor, Bro. J. M. Henry, is giving us a most excellent series of doctrinal sermons at the Sunday morning services, while at the evening service he gives us splendid evangelistic discourses. This program will continue until the latter part of January, when Dr. Paul H. Bowman, of Bridgewater College, will conduct a week's Bible study, which will, in turn, be followed by evangelistic sermons by our elder, A. P. Snader, for a short period.—Chas. E. Reaser, Washington, D. C., Dec. 15.

FLORIDA

Seneca.—Thanksgiving Day was spent in a profitable and appropriate manner. We met for work and worship, sixty-two members being present. Dinner was served at noon, the tables being spread beneath our lovely pines. Afterward we held our Thanksgiving service. In the absence of a resident minister, we invited two of our neighboring ministers to be with us, each of whom spoke for twenty minutes on the Thanksgiving theme. The attendance and interest over the meeting and the good singing and talks made the day one to be remembered by all. We will be glad to hear from any one wishing to change climate.—Ira W. Miller, Eustis, Fla., Dec. 9.

IDAHO

Bowmont church began a series of meetings Nov. 10, with Bro. M. Alva Long, of Weiser, Idaho, our beloved evangelist, in charge. He was with us about three weeks, preaching twenty-two sermons and visiting in many homes. Thanksgiving Day we had an all-day meeting. A bountiful dinner was served with an offering of $66.50 was raised for the Armenian sufferers. The attendance and interest were good and we feel that much good has been done. One confessed Christ. It should have been stated in the last report that our fall love feast will be held on the last Saturday evening in October each year, unless otherwise decided.—Nora E. Zimmerman, Bowmont, Idaho, Dec. 7.

ILLINOIS

Corro Gordo church met in special council Nov. 28, to elect officers for the coming year, with Eld. W. T. Heckman presiding. Bro. Herbert Moldier was elected Sunday-school superintendent; Sister Lydia Mohler, Christian Workers' president; Sister Emma Wheeler, president of the Sisters' Aid. A number of other officers were chosen to help in the work and four letters were granted. Dec. 14 Bro. John Heckman, of Polo, Ill., gave us an excellent message.—Nettie Leedy, Cerro Gordo, Ill., Dec. 15.

Cherry Grove church met in council Dec. 11, with Eld. I. R. Young presiding. Officers were elected, with Bro. Aaron Hawbecker, Sunday-school superintendent; Bro. Roy Frey, Christian Workers' president; Home Department superintendent, Bro. Geo. Finfrock; Cradle Roll, Sister Lillie Bloyer; Temperance, Bro. Chas. Shidler. Thanksgiving Day an offering of $80.39 was taken, to be used to relieve the suffering among the poor of Chicago—the funds to be distributed through the Bethany Bible School. Nov. 23 we began a two weeks' revival, with Bro. Ira Weaver, of Pearl City, as evangelist. Although the weather and roads were most the best, a splendid interest was shown. While there were no additions, we feel that much good was done.—Lanah E. Shidler, Lanark, Ill., Dec. 15.

Mt. Carroll church met in council Dec. 4, with Bro. Moore presiding. Officers were elected for the coming year, with Brethren Kehnel and Fierkeller, superintendents. Three have recently been received by letter. The church has appointed Brethren Wm. Bratton and Wm. Fierkeller ministerial committee to see to the filling of the appointments and also try to secure a resident minister.—Anna Fierkeller, Mt. Carroll, Ill., Dec. 16.

Mt. Morris.—Nov. 23 our pastor, Eld. F. E. McCune, began a series of meetings in the Columbia church. Bro. Samuel Fike, of Waterloo, Iowa, who during one winter worked among the members of this part of our congregation, assisted, Sister Anna Blough was present one night and gave a message. The meetings lasted two weeks, and although there were no accessions, we believe much good was accomplished. Nov. 30 we observed Bible Sunday in conjunction with the Methodist and Disciple churches. The offering, amounting to over $50, is being sent to the American Bible Society, with the belief that it goes to an important work. The annual Thanksgiving offering of our church was nearly $115.—Nelson E. Shirk, Mt. Morris, Ill., Dec. 11.

Notice.—The quarterly meeting of the Mission Board of Southern Illinois will be held at the home of Eld. H. Graham, Astoria, Ill., Saturday, Jan. 1. All reports from the workers on the field and business for the Board should be in the hands of the Secretary by Dec. 30. The Local Missionary Committees are requested to see that their churches send in at once the apportionments for the year 1920. —E. E. Brubaker, Secretary, Virden, Ill., Dec. 18.

Virden.—Nov. 30 our pastor gave us a splendid examination sermon, preparatory to our love feast, Dec. 6. Bro. Chalmer Shull, who soon sails to India, officiated at the table and in the preparatory service. The next morning he gave us a touching farewell message—one long to be remembered. We are happy financially to support Bro. Shull in India. Bro. H. A. Brubaker, recently of Akron, Ohio, now on his way to Pasadena, Calif., gave us two addresses this month.—Stella Brubaker, Virden, Ill., Dec. 17.

Yellow Creek church met in council Dec. 13, with Bro. P. R. Keltner presiding. Church and Sunday-school officers were elected for the coming year: Bro. P. R. Keltner, elder; Ira Weaver, pastor; August Kuhleman, Sunday-school superintendent. Our evening Sunday-school at the Pearl City house has been discontinued, and we will have Christian Workers' Meeting instead.—Minnie Kuhleman, Pearl City, Ill., Dec. 15.

INDIANA

Center church met in council Dec. 6, with Eld. J. F. Appleman presiding. Church and Sunday-school officers were elected for the coming year as follows: Bro. Ora Fisher, clerk; Sister Mary Mudley, "Messenger" agent; Sister Ruth Lane, correspondent; Bro. Brilles, Sunday-school superintendent. Six letters were granted. Bro. Albert Burke was chosen to make the valuation of the property of the membership, according to the District Meeting order.—Mrs. O. W. Gordon, Walkerton, Ind., Dec. 15.

Goshen City.—Our love feast was held Dec. 3, with our pastor, Bro. F. A. Vanders, officiating. Sunday, Dec. 7, was Rededication Day. The attendance at Sunday-school was 444 and the collection $44.44. The contest in the Men's Bible Class closed on that day with an attendance of 200. Bro. P. B. Fitzwater, of Moody Bible Institute, spoke to them during the Sunday-school hour, and preached a helpful, appreciated sermon on "The Church" during morning worship. Nearly $1,000 was raised in twenty-five minutes, which will more than pay the debt incurred in our recent improvements. In the evening the Women's Bible Class gave a splendid program during the Christian Workers' hour. Bro. Wm. Lampin, of Polo, Ill., will hold a series of meetings here during January.—Beulah Manahan, Goshen, Ind., Dec. 12.

Ladoga church met in council Dec. 13, with Eld. Goshorn in charge. The purchase of a parsonage was discussed and a committee of the brethren, consisting of three, was appointed to look into the matter as they think best. Owing to existing conditions it was deemed advisable to discontinue our Sunday-school until April—the Home Department and Cradle Roll to be continued. We expect to have a series of meetings next winter.—Mrs. Elizabeth Ashpaugh, Ind., Dec. 14.

Logansport.—At the series of meetings, held in the Logansport church by Bro. Silas Fisher, there were ten additions to the church by baptism. Two were also baptized by Bro. Oberlin before we moved into our new house of worship. According to arrangement by the District Mission Board, Bro. Chas. Oberlin now has the eldership of the Logansport church, instead of Bro. J. G. Stinebaugh, who served us so long and faithfully.—Josephine Hanna, Logansport, Ind., Dec. 14.

Middlebury church met in council Dec. 12, with Eld. J. H. Fike presiding. Officers were elected for the year: Bro. J. H. Schrock, elder; Sunday-school superintendent, Bro. Ora Metzler; president of Christian Workers' Meeting, Bro. Glen Kindy; leader for prayer meeting, Sister Emma Weaver. The visiting brethren gave a good report and one letter was granted. We are very busy getting ready for our Christmas program. Eld. Jacob Hoff, of Bethany Bible School, will be with us in a Bible Institute during the holidays.—Emma Skerck, Middlebury, Ind., Dec. 12.

Middletown church met in council yesterday afternoon. We now have our furnace installed and are comfortable in church. Bro. Reed was elected elder for another year. We set the time for our love feast, both spring and fall, May 22 and Sept. 25.—Florida J. E. Green, Middletown, Ind., Dec. 15.

Pipe Creek church met in council Dec. 11, with Bro. Frank Fisher presiding. Brethren J. C. Murray, Jacob Cripe and Ira E. Long were also present. Two letters were received and five were granted. Sunday-school officers were elected, with Bro. M. H. Huffman superintendent. Bro. D. P. Kiepinger and wife were duly installed to the eldership. An offering of $17.17 was taken for the Sisters' Aid Society. —Ruth Dailey, Peru, Ind., Dec. 12.

South Bend (First Church).—Our revival closed Nov. 30, with a full house. Seven confessed Christ at the closing services, and twenty-two were taken into the church during the revival, making a total of thirty-two additions since the coming of our pastor (August 1). Our communion services were held on Sunday morning evening with a good attendance. Our pastor officiated. The day following the pastor and some of the officials visited the sick and shut-in members. Dec. 1 we met in business session for the reelection of church and Sunday-school officers. Prof. P. C. Stahly continues as our Sunday-school superintendent. A Primary Department, with separate sessions, is being organized. Dec. 14 Bro. G. A. Snider, of Lima, Ohio, gave us a splendid sermon. We expect Bro. J. E. Miller to be with us Dec. 28, for the installation services of our Sunday-school and Christian Workers' officers in the morning. In the evening he will give us an illustrated lecture on Christian Consecration. Our program will be rendered on the evening of Dec. 21.—Mrs. Jacob Price, South Bend, Ind., Dec. 15.

Union Center.—We recently held a three weeks' series of meetings. The first week our home ministers conducted the services and the last two weeks we were fortunate in securing Bro. David Metzler, whose inspiring sermons were of much benefit to our church. Dec. 13 we held our fall council and reorganized the church, Sunday-school and Christian Workers' Society. Bro. John Fredrick was reelected to serve as our elder; Bro. Leander Bigler, church secretary; Bro. David Miller, Sunday-school superintendent; Bro. Everett Whitehead, Christian Workers' president; Sister Gladys Strycker, chairman of our Aid Society. Our Christmas program will be given on Sunday night, Dec. 21, and there will also be a service here on Christmas evening.—Geo. W. Anglemyer, Nappanee, Ind., Dec. 15.

Wakarusa church met in council Nov. 12, with Eld. Christian Metzler presiding. Two letters were received and one was granted. The following officers were elected for the coming year: Bro. C. Metzler, elder; Bro. Roy Metzler, Sunday-school superintendent; Bro. Geo. Bollman, Christian Workers' president. We have just closed a two weeks' revival meeting, conducted by Bro. E. C. Swihart, of Elkhart, Ind. He delivered nineteen Spirit-filled sermons. The meetings were well attended and the best of interest was manifested at each service. The song service was ably conducted by Sister Edith Fletcher. Twelve were added to the church by baptism.—Mrs. Chas. R. Metzler, Wakarusa, Ind., Dec. 10.

Walnut congregation met in council Dec. 13, with Eld. J. F. Appleman presiding. Four letters were granted and three were elected as follows: Bro. Appleman, elder; Bro. D. R. Rohrer, superintendent of the Sunday-school; Sister Emma Foust, superintendent of the Primary Department; Bro. Earl Bollman, president of Christian Workers' Society. Bro. Ezra Flory was with us Dec. 6 and 7 in a short institute. He gave us interesting lessons on Bible subjects and child study.—Levia Miller, Walnut, Ind., Dec. 16.

Yellow River church met in council Dec. 13, with Eld. David Metzler presiding. Officers were elected as follows: Bro. Isaiah Price, "Messenger" agent; Nora Price, clerk; Bro. Harley Elliott, the newly-elected Missionary Committee member; Bro. correspondent Bro. Gilbert Dillinghan, Sunday-school superintendent; Bro. Owen Price, Christian Workers' president. We decided to remodel the churchhouse in the near future.—Anna E. Hanawalt, Plymouth, Ind., Dec. 15.

IOWA

Fernald church held their business council Dec. 13, electing all new officers for the coming year: D. W. Wise, elder; Jacob Wise, Sunday-school superintendent. It was also decided to hold a Christmas tree for the Child Rescue Home at Ankeny, Iowa, Sunday morning Bro. D. W. Wise gave a talk about Bethany Bible School, which he had visited the previous week. Bro. Lester Fike, of Peace Valley, Mo., led our Christian Workers' Society Dec. 14.—Iva Sipling, Fernald, Iowa, Dec. 14.

Garelson church met for worship on Thanksgiving Day. As the weather was bad, not many were present. However, an offering of $36.50 was lifted, to be used for mission work at several places. The poor at home were remembered also.—Minnie Gnagy, Dysart, Iowa, Dec. 12.

Salem.—Dec. 7 the Sunday-school rendered a missionary program, entitled "Giving," which consisted of readings, recitations, duets and an address by Eld. Wagner, entitled "The Supreme Need of Giving to Missions." Afterward the Missionary Standard was presented to the school and an offering of $60.50 was taken for Worldwide Missions. Dec. 13 our council met granted and the elders were elected taken up. Two letters were granted, and officers for the church and Sunday-school were elected: Sister Mettie Caskey, superintendent and corresponding secretary. A Christmas program will be given Dec. 21.—Mrs. Chas. J. Wray, Prescott, Iowa, Dec. 16.

KANSAS

Ottawa.—Sunday evening before Thanksgiving, the Christian Workers' Society gave an appropriate program. Thanksgiving Day Eld. Throne gave a good sermon, after which a basket dinner was served in the church. A liberal offering was lifted for the home poor. Our Sunday-school and Christian Workers are preparing a Christmas program, to be given on Sunday evening, Dec. 21. Dec. 28 Prof. E. M. Studebaker, of McPherson, will begin a Bible Normal.—Olive M. Wheeler, Ottawa, Kans., Dec. 15.

Washington Creek church met in council Dec. 13, with Eld. I. L. Hoover presiding. The following officers were elected to carry on the work of the year: I. L. Hoover, elder; H. W. Behrens, church clerk and correspondent; Lucinda Behrens, Sunday-school clerk. Bro. Bro. J. Clyde Forney is to hold a Sunday-school Institute in January.—H. W. Behrens, Lone Star, Kans., Dec. 15.

MARYLAND

Baltimore (Fulton Avenue).—While our pastor, Bro. A. L. B. Martin, was conducting a revival at Frederick City, during November, Brethren J. A. McKenney and Wm. Hollinger had charge. The interest and attendance have been good during the fall. We have been fortunate in having other good speakers to preach for us. "Nov. 23 Bro. H. Lechrone, of Ashland, Ohio, preached both morning and evening. Nov. 30 Bro. Edw. Bixler, of New Windsor, Md., delivered a sermon in the evening. Our Sunday-school is taking an active part in a District Convention, held once a month in the various churches' in the District, consisting sure Sunday-pupils. The December meeting was held at our church with a good attendance. Miss Wilson' was the speaker of the evening, her subject being "Worship," which was interesting and enjoyed by those present. The object of these meetings is to promote a more spiritual and efficient work in the Sunday-school.—Darius C. Angle, Baltimore, Md., Dec. 16.

Hagerstown.—Bro. John H. Cassady began a series of evangelistic meetings at the Hagerstown church Nov. 9, and closed on Sunday, the 30th, preaching a sermon each evening through the week and three each Sunday. A great interest was manifested during the meetings. Thirty-four were baptized and a number of others are awaiting baptism. Several have been received by letter. Dec. 7 we held our love feast with the largest attendance we ever had—525 being present, including a large number of visitors. Eld. Caleb Long, of Boonsboro, officiated at the service. At the close a missionary offering of $335 was taken.—Kathryn Yourtee Lindsay, Hagerstown, Md., Dec. 15.—

MICHIGAN

Elmdale church met in council Dec. 6, with Eld. C. H. Deardorff presiding. Church officers were elected for the coming year: Bro. Deardorff, elder; Bro. Stephen Weaver, clerk; Bro. Wilbur Tyler, trustee; the writer, correspondent; Bro. Stephen Weaver, Christian Workers' president. We decided to organize a Home Department and Sister Dorothy Weaver was chosen as the superintendent.—Emma Weaver, Alto, Mich., Dec. 15.

Sunfield church met in council Dec. 6, with Eld. H. W. Smith presiding. Two letters were received and church and Sunday-school officers were chosen: Bro. Smith, elder; Royal Frantz, clerk; member of the Missionary Committee, Fanny Hoover; Temperance, Royal Frantz; Sunday-school superintendent, Viola Gow; Home Department, Ida Smith; Cradle Roll, Lucille Snavely; Mary Fouratman, Ohio, "Messenger" agent, John Harrison; correspondent, Fanny Hoover. At our October love feast, which we failed to report, Bro. J. M. Smith, of the Woodland church, and Bro. John Robinson, of Ohio, were present. An election was held for a minister and Bro. Royal Frantz was called and installed in that office. Bro. Smith stayed with us and presided at the love feast, at which several from the Woodland church were present.—Mrs. Jennie Frantz, Vermontville, Mich., Dec. 15.

Zion congregation enjoyed an all-day meeting on Thanksgiving Day. The forenoon was spent in hearing several fine Thanksgiving readings and recitations, after which an offering of $10.80 was taken for the Armenian sufferers. After dinner the time was spent in singing hymns.—Mrs. Melvin Martindale, Prescott, Mich., Dec. 9.

MINNESOTA

Bethel church met in council Dec. 6, with Eld. M. L. Hahn presiding. Officers were elected as follows: Bro. M. L. Hahn, elder; Bro. Floyd Miller, clerk; Bro. Ed. Miller, trustee for three years; Bro. John Holmes, trustee for two years. Four letters were read and accepted. Thanksgiving Day the Sunday-school met at the church, where Bro. O. E. Stern opened the service with a short talk, followed by a testimonial meeting. Afterward the members went to the home of Eld. M. L. Hahn with well-filled baskets, where we had a social repast, which was very much enjoyed by all. In the afternoon we had a song service which was very inspiring and helpful, led by Bro. Earl Fiora, one of our ministers. If any of the brethren and sisters wish a better location, correspond with M. L. Hahn, Blackduck, Minn. The climate is fine, land is cheap and we have a good prospect for the Brethren cause.—Florence Miller, Bloes, Minn., Dec. 11.

Deer Park church met in council Dec. 10, with Eld. D. F. Landis presiding. Four letters were granted and one was received. Officers for Sunday-school and church were elected: Bro. Landis, elder; Bro. J. H. Harper, Sunday-school superintendent; Bro. J. A. Vancil, "Messenger" agent. Brethren J. H. Harper and J. A. Vancil and the correspondent were appointed on a colonization committee. Any members passing through or coming to this community, arriving at Nemadji, will find the pastor's home sixty rods north of the depot. The Deer Park church will be known hereafter as the Nemadji church. The Teacher-training Class has been reorganized and plans have been made for our part of the "Home and Missionary" We held union services in the church Thanksgiving Day.—Pearl M. Ramer, Barnum, Minn., Dec. 12.

Lewiston.—We held our regular church council Dec. 6. Bro. D. F. Landis was unanimously elected elder for the coming year. Our church will be on a more sound financial basis this next year, as we have changed our church year from Jan. 1 to Sept. 1, thereby receiving all assessments in advance. Under present new arrangements our church activities ought to take on new life. Church officers were elected, many retaining their former offices. Sister Landis was chosen Sunday-school superintendent. There was also a active temperance committee of three, who report regularly. In keeping with the "Forward Movement" program we are about to choose a missionary committee to look out for money for missionary purposes, and to keep the brethren posted on what the church is doing along the lines of missionary activity. One of the young people's Sunday-school classes is preparing a Christmas box, to be sent away to needy children. Brethren Bollen and Ellis will obtain a tree for a poor family. Through the untiring efforts of our pastor and others we hope for a prosperous church year.—Olive Albert, Lewiston, Minn., Dec. 13.

Worthington church met in council Dec. 6, with Bro. J. A. Eddy as moderator. Bro. Harry Strom was elected superintendent of the Sunday-school. We decided to procure some one to conduct a Bible institute during the singing class at the holiday season. The young people's class will render a Christmas program in the church on Christmas night. We greatly enjoyed having Sister Anna Blough with us. She is the first missionary from China that we have had the pleasure of having with us. We hope the time will soon be here to have some members from Sheldon with us at our love feast, at which Bro. Jesse Rolston officiated.—Ruth Eddy, Worthington, Minn., Dec. 11.

MISSOURI

North Bethel church, near Mound City, Mo., met in council Dec. 13, with Bro. G. W. Ellenberger, our pastor, presiding. Election of church officers resulted as follows: Bro. J. A. Ander, elder; J. H. Crist, "Messenger" agent; the undersigned, correspondent. Among the more important things brought under consideration, we decided to hold one series of Bible lectures during the year, in the term of music taught, if possible, between now and spring (will be glad to cooperate with other churches in the District in this); to devise ways and means to give an impetus to our missionary spirit, our Sunday-school and Christian Workers' department. Sister Eva Trostle, of Bethany Bible School, gave us four services that were greatly appreciated by members and friends. Sunday-school, Christian Workers' and regular services are well attended. Our Sisters' Aid has undertaken the support of an India orphan. We appreciate very much the encouraging fact that our neighbors and friends are interested in this earnest work. Bro. Ellenberger, the great benefit derived from having the "Gospel Messenger" in every home and are working toward that end.—Mary P. Ellenberger, Mound City, Mo., Dec. 13.

Shoal church met in council Dec. 13. It was the time to elect our officers for the year, and Brethren J. H. and W. R. Argabright were chosen elders; Bro. Wilbert Erisman, Sunday-school superintendent; Bro. Oscar Argabright, president of our Christian Workers' Meeting.—Wilbert Erisman, Shoal Grove, Mo., Dec. 15.

NORTH CAROLINA

Fraternity church met in council Dec. 13. On account of weather conditions not so many were present. Officers were elected for the coming year, with J. F. Robertson, elder; J. P. Robertson, Sunday-school superintendent; E. R. Robertson, clerk for a period of three years.—J. F. Robertson, Winston-Salem, N. C., Dec. 15.

Melvin Hill (N. C.).—We met in council Dec. 13. We have decided to have a Bible School, beginning Jan. 5, with Bro. Clayton B. Miller as teacher. Our teacher-training class is doing fairly well. The Cradle Roll and Home Department are also progressing. During the first of the week we had a visit by Bro. I. J. Rosenberger, who was on his way to Sebring, Fla. He spent several days with us, and preached three sermons with us. Sunday-school was celebrated at the love feast at the Mill Creek church and preached one sermon there. His messages were inspiring.—Jennie M. Robb, Campobello, S. C., Dec. 15.

Pleasant Grove.—We held our love feast Oct. 18 and had with us visiting brethren from the Poplar and Bailey churches, N. C.; in all there were forty members present. Bro. Robert Willis preached for us on Sunday morning. Our Sunday-school is progressing nicely, under the direction of our Sunday-school superintendent. Nov. 26 Bro. John Jackson came to us, preaching on Wednesday evening and also on Thanksgiving Day. Preceding the sermon, the children of the graded department rendered a splendid Sunday-school program, a missionary and Thanksgiving program. Afterward a collection of $59.35 was lifted, to be divided between home and foreign missions. Bro. Jackson preached again in the evening to a large and attentive crowd.—Dora Bryant, Brummett, N. C., Dec. 15.

OHIO

Arlington congregation met in council Dec. 3, with Eld. J. W. Fidler presiding. The following officers were elected for the coming year: Bro. Chas. Klepinger, trustee; Bro. Vernon Dull, Sunday-school superintendent; the writer, correspondent and "Messenger" agent. Nov. 30 Sister Anna Eby, missionary from India, gave us a splendid talk, which was much appreciated by all. We expect to hold one series of meetings in the early part of the year.—W. E. Shank, Brookville, Ohio, Dec. 13.

Blanchard church met in council Dec. 13, with our elder presiding. Two letters were granted and church, Sunday-school and Christian Workers' officers elected for the coming year, with Bro. Geo. Sharp and Sister Jessie Bowser, Sunday-school superintendents; Bro. Frank Leatherman, president of Christian Workers' Society; the writer, "Messenger" agent.—Verna Weller, Continental, Ohio, Dec. 15.

Greenspring church met in council Dec. 6, with Bro. G. A. Snider in charge. Two letters were received and officers were elected as follows: Primary superintendent, Lucille Snavely; Sunday-school superintendent, Elmer Zimmerman; Christian Worker president, Edith Sellers. Elias Eby, Eberly, Logan Miller, Edmund Snavely, and their wives were installed as deacons.—Mrs. Caroline Eberly, Old Fort, Ohio, Dec. 11.

Greenville church met in council Dec. 10, with our elder, Bro. B. F. Sharp, presiding. Church and Sunday-school officers were elected for the coming year. Bro. J. W. Wertz was chosen Sunday-school superintendent; Bro. Raymond Fryman, clerk; the writer, correspondent. At our Thanksgiving Day service a collection of $34.39 was taken for Armenian and Syrian Relief. Thanksgiving evening our love feast was held, with Bro. Stuver, of Bradford, Ohio, officiating. A very spiritual service was enjoyed.—Mrs. Rebecca Weimer, Greenville, Ohio, Dec. 15.

Hickory church held the yearly love feast Nov. 16, with Bro. Jesse Gump, of Churubusco, Ind., officiating. Ministers present were Brethren Jay Hornish, John Sponseller and Chas. Kintner, with quite a number of members from other churches. They gave liberally to our support and we raised enough to finish paying the debt on the churchhouse. We extend many thanks to all who have helped us in the past. We held our regular council meeting Dec. 6. Although we have no resident minister we have preaching every two weeks. Bro. Jay Hornish, of Delaware, has been coming to our assistance since June 22 and has preached a number of cheering sermons.—Bertha Williams, Hicksville, Ohio, Dec. 15.

Jonathan Creek church met in council Dec. 6, with Eld. E. B. Bagwell, of Bremen, Ohio, presiding. Two letters were received, and the different treasurers gave their annual reports. District Mission work was considered, and we hope to be able to raise our apportionment. Officers were elected for the coming year: Sister Bro. Martin Snider; clerk, Bro. Marion Leekrone; "Messenger" agent, Bro. Homer Helser; the writer, corresponding secretary. The present Missionary and Temperance Committee was retained for another year, and Bro. M. S. Leekrone was reelected Sunday-school superintendent. We granted our pastor the privilege of attending the special Bible Term at Manchester. Nov. 23 a missionary program was rendered, being in charge of the Local Missionary Committee. We are making arrangements to have a Christmas program Dec. 21.—Mary H. Snider, Thornville, Ohio, Dec. 12.

Logan church met in council Dec. 6, with Eld. H. Z. Smith presiding. Officers for the following year were elected: Bro. H. Z. Smith, elder; Bro. Will Early, Sunday-school superintendent; Sister Barbara Hostetter, "Messenger" correspondent. One letter was granted and a committee was appointed to see about having a better lighting system installed in the church. Dec. 21-28 a Bible Institute will be held at this place, conducted by Bro. Herbert Richards, of Bethany Bible School.—Mrs. L. J. Snider, Bellefontaine, Ohio, Dec. 14.

Lower Stillwater.—Bro. Dan S. Young, of Ohio, preached interesting sermons to us on Sunday morning and evening, Dec. 14. He is out in the interest of the new church,, so much needed in Bradford. One was baptized recently. Our senior Sunday-school classes of young people, which have been going for only a few years, are becoming a force for good in the community. At their joint class meetings, held on the third Friday evening of each month, exercises are held, tending to the spiritual and intellectual development. At their next meeting, plans will be perfected whereby useful Christmas gifts will be distributed. They also sustain a well-attended and interesting Bible Study class every Sunday at 9 o'clock. Four members of the Manchester College Volunteer Band will render a program at Happy Corner on Saturday evening, Dec. 27.—L. A. Bookwalter, Trotwood, Ohio, Dec. 15.

Mohican church met in council Nov. 15, with Bro. A. I. Heestand presiding. Bro. Heestand was reelected elder for the coming year.—Jennie Worst, West Salem, Ohio, Dec. 10.

Painter Creek church met in council Dec. 13. Officers for the different departments of the church and spiritual development. At their council meeting, plans will be perfected whereby useful Christmas gifts will be distributed. They also sustain a well-attended and interesting Bible Study class every Sunday at 9 o'clock. Four members of the Manchester College Volunteer Band will render a program at Happy Corner on Saturday evening, Dec. 27.—L. A. Bookwalter, Trotwood, Ohio, Dec. 15.

Palestine church met in council Dec. 10, with Eld. R. M. Lantis in charge. Bro. D. P. Hollinger was elected a member of the Ministerial Board of Southern Ohio. He gave a very helpful talk on "The Need of Ministers in Southern Ohio." Bro. Ira Rike was elected Sunday-school superintendent. Bro. Hollinger was appointed leader of Christian Workers' Meeting.—Mac Hollinger, Greenville, Ohio, Dec. 12.

Pleasant View.—Nov. 18 Bro. Ralph Rarick, of Covington, Ohio, began our evangelistic services, continuing for three weeks. His sermons were highly interesting and helpful. The meetings were well attended. Eleven were baptized and one reclaimed. The singing was conducted by Sister Nettie Brown. Bro. Rarick gave us an inspiring talk Thanksgiving Day. The church met in council Nov. 26, with Bro. David Richie presiding. Bro. Rarick was elected elder, although he was not yet accepted, on account of much other church work that has been placed upon him.—Meda Bowman, Greenville, Ohio, Dec. 14.

Sugar Creek.—Oct. 19 Eld. D. D. Thomas, of Latty, Ohio, began a series of meetings, which resulted in thirty-one additions to the church. He remained home on account of illness in the family. He returned Nov. 4 and worked very faithfully until Nov. 16. There were no accessions but we were encouraged by these meetings. Our council was held Nov. 22 with Eld. Samuel Driver presiding. Two letters were granted at this time and three at our previous council, and we very keenly feel the loss of these members. Elders David Lytle and David Byerly were with us by request from Bro. D. Thomas, the pastor, although he has not yet accepted, on account of much other church work that has been placed upon him.—Meda Bowman, Greenville, Ohio, Dec. 14.

Herman Peters, Sunday-school superintendent; the writer, correspondent and "Messenger" agent.—Nancy E. Smith, Wauseon, Ohio, Dec. 10.

Troy Mission met in council Dec. 11, with Eld. Ira D. Blocher presiding. Four letters were received and two were granted. Bro. Chester Petry has been appointed to take charge of the pastoral work here. Church officers for the coming year were elected, including Missionary and Temperance Committees. Bro. Oran S. Yount was elected Sunday-school superintendent, and leaders for Christian Workers were also chosen. The Troy church will give a Christmas program Dec. 21. Eld. Blocher made a strong appeal for a sincere interest in the work here and spoke of the great need of the real Christian Rite.—Carrie E. Weddle, Casstown, Ohio, Dec. 14.

OREGON

Newberg.—The series of meetings, held by Eld. S. F. Sanger, closed with a love feast Nov. 30, in which about thirty communed. Eld. G. C. Carl, wife and son, Sister Myers and Bro. Caslow, of Portland, also Brother and Sister Fox, of Centralia, Wash., were with us. Bro. Sanger officiated. The members were strengthened and encouraged by Bro. Sanger's Gospel messages. The Sunday-school offering of $8 was used for World-wide Missions. Our Sunday-school offering for Armenian Relief amounted to $76.55.—Eliza J. Moore, Newberg, Oregon, Dec. 7.

PENNSYLVANIA

Covantry.—We are antiepiating a very instructive and uplifting series of lectures along the line of social and moral problems, by Capt. Wiard, President of the International Association of Detectives, to be held Dec. 31 to Jan. 4, inclusive. It has been well said that our civilization reflects our ignorance and that many times parents withhold truth from their children, thinking that they are maintaining innocence, when they are but maintaining ignorance. These conditions can only be overcome by education and training. Those of our number who were at the last Annual Conference at Winona Lake, and heard Capt. Wiard, felt that he was doing a great work.—Martha E. Haiderman, Pottstown, Pa., Dec. 15.

Ephrata.—Our council was held Dec. 8, with Eld. David Kilhefner presiding. Since the last council one letter has been

Brown Miller, of Huntingdon, Pa. He and his family expect to make Cleveland their home after the New Year. Last Sunday he presented a message on "Tenderness of Heart" that proved intensely practical and interesting. It brought out clearly how the correct principles of Christian living should be applied in the life of each individual.

Our people, who are edified by these services, agree that they hold an interest and helpful value that others, too, should find profitable in their lives. Do you know of friends or relatives in the city, who should come in touch with us? We shall be glad personally to enlist their interest, if you will furnish us with their name and address. The church is located at the corner of Superior Avenue and East 110th Street.

CANTON MINISTERIAL ASSOCIATION

The Canton Ministerial Association, Church of the Brethren, Canton, Ohio, met in regular session in the home of Eld. W. D. Keller, Canton, Ohio, Dec. 8. For the past year the ministers of the Freehnrg, Reading, Tnscarawas, Canton City, Canton Center, West Nimishillen, East Nimishillen, Springfield, and Akron City churches have met regularly once each month, excepting July, for the purpose of creating greater unity among the ministers, to make them more efficient hy encouraging study, meditation and a deeper consecration of life and purpose, and to be of mutual helpfnlness in all church activities. The past year has been one of great pleasure and profit to us all. Indeed, they were seasons of great rejoicing and strength.

We have been meeting at 1:30 P. M., in the homes of the various ministers, spending the afternoon in discussing topics pertaining to Ministerial Associations. But the afternoon has always been too short. So the last time we had an all-day session, which was still not long enough.

Our sessions are growing in interest and helpfulness. At present we are studying "Doctrine and Devotion," which proves of much interest to us all.

May we suggest to our ministering brethren everywhere that in these times of lethargy and spiritual indifference, we meet for mutual edification, to provoke one another to greater service for the Master. We have now on our roll nineteen members and a regular attendance. At our last session we had the pleasure of adding to our number Bro. Floyd M. Irvin, who is now laboring with the members of Reading church.

MOXHAM CHURCH, JOHNSTOWN, PENNSYLVANIA

We enjoyed a rich, spiritual feast from Nov. 11 to 13, when Bro. W. S. Long, of Altoona, and Bro. S. P. Early, of the Shade Creek congregation, Windber, Pa., were with us in our first Bible Institute. Bro. Long used as his general theme, "Voices of the Prophets." His clear, forceful manner in presenting these great themes, showed his extended knowledge of the Word of God. Bro. Early confined his work to the practical, dealing more particularly with the spiritual uplift of the Christian. In these discussions he gave many practical and helpful truths for workers in his Kingdom.

At the morning service, Nov. 23, the church planned to raise $100 for local expenses and in about ten minutes $228 was secured. The church met in special council Dec. 3, for the purpose of electing church and Sunday-school officers for the coming year. Our elder, M. Clyde Horst, presided, and the following officers were elected: Bro. D. P. Hoover, elder; Bro. Geo. Schmucker, reelected trustee; Bro. Irvin Hoover, as a member of the pastoral committee; Bro. M. S. Reiman, church clerk; Sister M. S. Reiman, "Messenger" correspondent. Bro. Irvin Hoover was reelected superintendent of the Sunday-school, and Sister I. W. Penrod, superintendent of the Primary Department.

Dec. 7 we observed Fathers and Sons' Day at the morning service. Last evening a Fathers and Sons' social was held, at which time a number of short addresses were made, dealing with the relationship which should exist between father and son. Following the talks refreshments were served.

Since our last report one has been received by baptism and one by letter. Mrs. D. P. Hoover.

McPHERSON COLLEGE NOTES

Our total enrollment for the present year has passed beyond 530. Nearly half of these are in the Collegiate Department.

Dr. Kurtz just returned from a trip, on which he visited several of the schools in the East. He reports that everywhere there is a marked growth.

On the morning of Dec. 9 we suffered a partial loss by fire in our gymnasium. It was a very cold day and fire-fighting was very difficult, but hy heroic effort the fire was confined largely to one corner of the building. Already steps have been taken to have the building repaired and ready for use by the time of opening school after the holiday recess.

Bible Institute will be held again this year. Last year the influenza epidemic made it necessary entirely to abandon the Institute. The dates for the present year are Jan. 25 to Feb. 1. A splendid program is being prepared. Because of the overcrowded condition, it will be well for all, intending to come, to notify us in advance. We shall endeavor to care for all who come, but it will aid us very much to know in advance of your coming. Notify either Prof. J. W. Deeter, or Prof. C. S. Morris. There will be no expenses except for subsistence, and that will be moderate.

The campaign for our new Science Hall goes steadily on. From present indications, the building will cost us nearly $100,000. We must build for the future, as well as for the present, hut we are in sore need already for all the room which we had planned to have in the new building. We may need to enlarge our plans again. The building must be a substantial brick structure, fireproof throughout. But no matter what it costs, we must have more room and we must have it soon. We plan to get work under way as soon as the winter breaks, and then push it right along. Meanwhile the field work must he done to solicit the funds.

Our series of meetings closed on Sunday night. Bro. J. Edson Ulery, of Onekama, Mich., was our leader. We had a most excellent meeting. At the close of the meeting twelve were received into the church by baptism.

The coal shortage over the West has not affected us to a very large extent as yet, due to the fact that we bought our coal last summer and have enough on hand to run us for several weeks yet.

A number of our students are arranging to make tours of some of our churches during the holiday vacation. These "Gospel Teams" do an untold amount of good in awakening the young people of the congregations visited.

As Field Secretary, the undersigned made a trip recently over into Western Colorado, where he enjoyed a visit in the home of our dear brother, S. Z. Sharp, the founder of our school. Bro. Sharp suffered a severe attack of illness lately, hut is again up and around, with his old-time vigor. He is keenly appreciative of the growth of education in our church. At the time he joined the church—in the early sixties—he was the fourth man in the church who had a liheral education. What a growth since that time!

And yet, look about at the wonderful needs of the present, and contemplate the growing needs of the future! Our young people must he trained and educated, and inspired to go out and give their life energies for the saving of the world.

W. O. Beckner.

DEATH OF BRO. WILLIAM BOWMAN

Bro. William Bowman was born in Franklin County, Va., Jan. 7, 1828, where he lived until death called him home Nov. 25, 1919, aged 91 years, 10 months and 18 days.

William Bowman

He was married to Mary Crayhill, of Botetourt County, Va., Feb. 16, 1854. To them were born ten children; one died in infancy. His wife died Dec. 19, 1894. He is survived by one brother, six sons, three daughters, fifty-nine grandchildren and fifty-five great-grandchildren.

Not only were those of the near relatives, who survive him, touched by his departure, but also the community as a whole, and especially the church, with which he united in early manhood, and to which he has been most earnestly devoted ever since. His afflictions prevented him from attending church in recent years. He always seemed glad, however, for the visits of the neighbors, and could converse with them intelligently until his last illness, which lasted only a few days.

The writer was one of the number who visited this aged brother on the annual church visit, in September. This occasion was a most impressive one. He had a member of the family take from his own purse his donation for the church treasurer, which represented his savings for some time past. He often said that he did not want a physician to increase the number of his days, but simply to allay his pain. He was awaiting the call of the Heavenly Physician, in whose abode there is no pain.

The funeral services were conducted by Eld. D. A. Hoff and J. A. Naff assisting, Nov. 27, at 11 A. M., in the Bethlehem church.

Boone Mill, Va. G. L. Bowman.

THE PASSING OF TWO AGED DEACONS

Bro. George W. Replogle

Our departed brother, son of Elder John and Sister Elizabeth Replogle, was born in 1848, in Bedford County, Pa. He united with the church forty-eight years ago, and was elected to the office of deacon ten years later, serving with unfaltering zeal until the day of his death.

In 1871 he married Mary Cameron, who died eight years later. To this union two sons and three daughters were born, four of whom survive. Later he married Sister Sarah Brown. To this union were born three sons and one daughter. Two of the sons were elected to the ministry at Juniata College.

About twelve years ago the family located in Roaring Spring, where Bro. Replogle was largely instrumental in erecting the present church building.

He died Dec. 4, 1919, after two days of suffering from uremic poison, following an operation.

Services in the church by the paster, Eld. M. J. Weaver, assisted by Elders Jas. A. Sell and D. B. Maddocks. His body was laid to rest in Dry Hill cemetery, near Woodbury.

Bro. Jonathan H. Snowberger

This beloved brother died at his home near Roaring Spring, Pa., Nov. 30, 1919, from diseases incident to advanced years, aged eighty years and five days. Early in life he united with the church and lived an earnest Christian life, serving in the office of deacon for many years. His wife, Sister Teressa Specht Snoberger, died in 1901. Later he married Sister Charlotte Brumbaugh who survives with two sons and three daughters by his former marriage. Three daughters preceded him.

Services in the Roaring Spring church by Bro. W. S. Long, assisted by Brethren M. J. Weaver and D. B. Maddocks. Interment in the Ahright cemetery. Lena M. Hoover.

Roaring Spring, Pa.

granted and one received. The Christian Workers' officers are Brethren Horace Buffenmyer and Phares Swigart. The Sunday-school superintendent and the assistants are as follow: Brethren J. M. Neff, Caleb Kilheiner and Ira Martin.—Gertrude R. Shirk, Ephrata, Pa., Dec. 10.

Everett.—Bro. Geo. A. Snider, of Lima, Ohio, began a series of meetings Nov. 5, continuing until Sunday, Nov. 23, delivering twenty-two inspiring sermons. The interest and attendance were fine. Many homes were visited and the membership was much benefited. Eleven were baptized and one received on his former baptism. Dec. 13 Bro. Jesse B. Emmert, missionary on furlough from India, gave us a splendid illustrated talk on conditions and peoples of India. The house was well filled and the audience attentive and interested. Over $85 was lifted for mission work in the Near East.—Joseph F. Snyder, Everett, Pa., Dec. 15.

Falling Spring.—Thanksgiving services were held in the Hade meetinghouse on Thanksgiving Day, at which time Bro. Albert Niswander, of the Bark Creek congregation, preached a very interesting sermon to an appreciative audience. An offering of $36.65 was lifted, to be used by the home church. It was decided to lift an offering at each of the other regular appointments. The organized class of the Shady Grove Sunday-school rendered a program on that church Nov. 30, which was well attended and very much appreciated. We were much pleased to have our elder, Bro. Oellig, with us at the Shady Grove church Dec. 7. He preached on the subject of the doctrines of the Brethren in the "Five-year Forward Movement." Bro. Oellig is a plain speaker and presented the doctrines of the church in a very simple and forcible manner, which was appreciated by all present. At the close of the services it was decided to hold a two weeks' series of meetings at the Shady Grove church in the near future. It possible we will secure Bro. C. H. Steerman, evangelist.—H. N. M. Gearhart, Shady Grove, Pa., Dec. 15.

Huntingdon church met in council Dec. 8, when officers were elected for the year. Our Bible Institute was a feast of good things. Having five missionaries on furlough with us, certainly increased the interest. Bro. Rioda, representing the African Inland Mission, is a live wire, and wonderfully awake to the needs of that country. We gave an offering for the work there. Our evangelistic services begin Dec. 30, with Bro. A. B. Miller, or Bridgewater, in charge. One was baptized on Sunday evening. We enjoyed a visit from our school committee, Brethren D. W. Kurtz and J. W. Lear, who gave very helpful messages. A number of our good workers went to Florida for a while. They will be much missed in Sunday-school and church, but we are willing to spare them for a needed change and rest.—Eleanor J. Brumbaugh, Huntingdon, Pa., Dec. 13.

Mingo church met in council Dec. 13, with Eld. Levi Ziegler presiding. Two letters were granted and one was received. Bro. Eugene Hoffman was elected superintendent of the Skippack Sunday-school. Bro. Levi Ziegler was chosen elder in charge for one year. The Ministerial Board of Eastern Pennsylvania being present, Bro. Harry H. Ziegler was called to the ministry and installed. Dec. 7 we closed a series of meetings at the Skippack house, conducted by Bro. Wm. Zobler, of Lancaster. The attendance and interest were good, and five Sunday-school scholars confessed Christ.—Elizabeth Hunsberger, Oaygerland, Pa., Dec. 15.

Mountville.—Nov. 16 Bro. Amos Kuhns, of Union Deposit, opened a series of meetings at the Mountville house, continuing till Nov. 30. These meetings were well attended and fairly good interest was shown. There were three conversions. Bro. Kuhns delivered eighteen sermons during the time he was with us. Nov. 27 a Thanksgiving service was held at the Mountville house, which was a spiritual feast for all. Bro. Kuhns presided and conducted an old-time testimonial service, giving liberty to all to express their thankfulness. An offering of $69.22 was taken, which the church decided should be used to help defray the funeral expenses of one of our brethren. Dec. 10 the Mountville church met in council at the Mountville house, with Eld. I. N. Musser presiding. There was a fair representation present. One letter was granted and three applicants for baptism were presented. A "Messenger" agent and church correspondent were also appointed.—Cora A. McKonly, Mountville, Pa., Dec. 15.

Norristown.—At the Sunday-school session Dec. 14, 111 were present, ont of an enrollment of 160. The collection was $6.32. A goodly portion remained for preaching services. Immediately after the close, the official board had a short session to consider the advisability to distribute the duplex envelopes to the contributors. A strong effort is to be made to have every contributor, whether member or not, use the envelopes and have all members living in town to unite with the church here. The Christian Workers' meeting in the evening were in charge of the Juniors, who elected their officers for the next term. This was followed by the second lecture of the illustrated pictures of India, which seemed to be much appreciated. The house was well filled, with a goodly number of strangers from the country. We are looking for a crowded house for the next and last number of the course, at the close of which the cantata "Redeemer and King" will be rendered.—J. Howard Ellis, Norristown, Pa., Dec. 15.

Pleasant Hill congregation met in council Dec. 13, with Eld. D. B. Hohf presiding. We decided to have a series of meetings in 1920, at each appointment—Pleasant Hill, Beaver Creek and North Codorus. Four letters were granted. Sunday-school reorganized, with Bro. H. C. Miller, superintendent. Services were held at this place on Thanksgiving Day. Our offering for foreign mission amounted to $100.—Amanda K. Miller, Spring Grove, Pa., Dec. 15.

Richland church held a very profitable missionary and Sunday-school Meeting Nov. 16, which was well attended. Able speakers were assigned to the various topics. Dec. 5 the church met in council and officers of the Sunday-school were elected, with Bro. J. P. King, superintendent. Three certificates were granted. A series of meetings will begin ot the Millbach house Dec. 27, with Bro. Hirom Ephelman, evangelist.—P. F. Phillipy, Richland, Pa., Dec. 13.

Rockwood.—During the evangelistic efforts at this place, forty were added to the church. Oct. 26 Bro. W. Hamilton, who had charge of the meetings, with Bro. M. L. Cassady conducting the singing. We held a number of cottage prayer meetings prior to the three weeks of evening services. A good spirit of unity is manifest in the work here, which is very encouraging. A building committee is at work now on location and plans for a house of worship. We organized a Junior Mission Study Class, and a class in teacher-training. Our mid-week prayer meeting is well attended. The Women's Adult Bible Class spent a social evening in one of the homes last week. They have organized into a working body and have begun some sewing to help supply the needs here.—Mrs. H. D. Spetcher, Rockwood, Pa., Dec. 12.

SOUTH CAROLINA

Mill Creek congregation held a love feast Dec. 5, with about thirty-six members communing. Bro. I. J. Rosenberger, of Ohio, officiated, and preached for us on the Sunday following. His subject was, "What soever a Man Soweth, That Shall He Also Reap," and he was listened to with much interest. We would be glad to have any other members stop with us on their way to the Southland.—Minnie Henderson, Landrum, S. C., Dec. 12.

TEXAS

Canadian.—Bro. John Stump and wife, and Bro. Sala, of Miami, Texas, stopped over with us last week on their way to Ochiltree County, Texas, to do some church work. It does us good to have these brethren stop over with us, as we are isolated from the church and all its members. Any members passing through Canadian will surely receive a welcome.—Lottie E. Carver, Canadian, Texas, Dec. 15.

VIRGINIA

Antioch.—We have just closed a very interesting series of meetings, conducted by Bro. J. S. Zigler, of Fayetteville, W. Va. He preached twenty-two sermons and visited in most of the homes of this community. Fourteen were baptized and all were greatly strengthened. The earnest efforts, put forth by Bro. Zigler during this meeting, will long be remembered by the Antioch congregation. Our Thanksgiving offering amounted to $50, which will go toward the support of Bro. I. E. Oberholtzer, Dec. 6 we met in council, with Bro. Jos. Bowman presiding. Officers were elected for the coming year, with Bro. B. T. Flora, Sunday-school superintendent; Bro. Noah Bowman, clerk; Sister Orpin Flora, correspondent. All other officers were reappointed.—Beula Bowman Peters, Rocky Mount, Va., Dec. 15.

Pleasant Valley (Southern District).—Oct. 14 Sister Elsie Shickel, of Roanoke, Va., was with us in the morning, and at the Reedville house in the afternoon, giving interesting talks on Sunday-school work. An offering of $5.20 was taken for that work. Nov. 9 was Rally Day at Reedville. A program was rendered by the school and dinner served on the grounds. This was a most enjoyable day for all present. Dec. 8 we closed a most interesting and instructive revival. Bro. H. W. Peters, of Wirtz, Va., was the evangelist, and all his sermons were spiritual and uplifting. The interest and spirit and attendance were especially good. Fifteen were baptized. The members are very much encouraged and the church strengthened.—Mrs. Livie A. Dulaney, Floyd, Va., Dec. 15.

Roanoke City church has experienced a great revival during the year 1919, reaching the climax in a series of meetings, conducted by Bro. E. S. Coffman, of Harrisonburg, Va., beginning on Sunday morning, Nov. 23, and closing Dec. 7. Seventy-five came forward, forty-seven of whom were received into the spiritual and uplifting church by baptism and two reclaimed. Our pastor has been preaching strong Gospel sermons during the year, with increasing interest and attendance at church. He and his faithful wife have also been doing very effective pastoral work. The workers were organized and instructed to secure the right man secured to conduct the meetings. Sunday evening the house was filled to overflowing to hear the last sermon. Bro. Coffman did not have Sunday-morning service, but gave us a short but baptismal service on Monday evening and gave a short talk. Five came forward when an invitation was given. These were included in the total number of conversions.—Mrs. John H. Shickel, Roanoke, Va., Dec. 11.

Roanoke City.—Friday night, Dec. 12, the members convened for the council meeting. Most of the time was taken up with the election of officers for the coming year. Bro. J. A. Hoover was chosen Messenger agent; Bro. Allen Flora, superintendent; Bro. B. Hylton, Sunday-school superintendent. Sunday-school Board, Brethren B. B. Garber, J. Allen Flora, W. M. Shickel and Sister Nina Moomaw. Christian Workers' president, J. Alfred Flora. At the close of the evening service on Sunday, Dec. 14, seven candidates were received into the church by baptism; six have been received by letter since our last report.—Mrs. John H. Shickel, 703 Third Avenue Northwest, Roanoke, Va., Dec. 15.

Troutville.—Our Thanksgiving services were held in the Trinity church. Bro. W. M. Kahle preached an excellent sermon and several numbers were given by the young people of that community. An offering of $157 was lifted and will be used for Child Rescue work in the State of Virginia. Since our last report five have been received into the church by baptism.—Frankie Showalter, Troutville, Va., Dec. 12.

WASHINGTON

Centralia.—At our regular December council, which convened the 3rd, we elected our church and Sunday-school officers for the ensuing year. Bro. D. B. Eby, of Olympia, was chosen elder; Bro. Mark MacDonald, church clerk and correspondent and Messenger agent; Bro. Mark MacDonald, Sunday-school superintendent. At present we are without a resident minister, but the regular appointments are being filled by ministering brethren from Olympia, which we greatly appreciate. We are hoping to have a resident minister in the near future. Our Sunday-school has arranged to have a program on Christmas Day, at 10:30.—Mrs. D. E. Fox, Centralia, Wash., Dec. 10.

East Wenatchee church met in council Dec. 13, with Eld. J. J. Filbrun presiding. Church officers were elected for the year as follows: Bro. Warren Slabaugh, elder; Bro. J. J. Filbrun, assistant elder; Eva Frantz, church clerk; Owen Kintner, Sunday-school superintendent, with Mrs. J. S. Zimmerman, president of the Christian Workers' Meeting. Bro. Paul Mohler will conduct our Bible Institute held during the holidays. In February Bro. Frank Sargent, of Chicago, will be with us in a series of meetings. Nov. 16 we held our Harvest Meeting, at which Bro. Dorsdorff gave two interesting Harvest sermons. The offering amounted to $145. This fall the church and Sunday-school has raised $1,010.10 for the Armenian orphans.—Bunah Graybill, Wenatchee, Wash., Dec. 13.

Yakima church met in regular business council Dec. 3, with our pastor, Bro. J. S. Zimmerman, presiding. Two letters were received and the following officers were elected for the coming year: Bro. J. H. Gordon, elder; Mrs. J. S. Zimmerman, Sunday-school superintendent. Under the direction of our pastor the Sunday-school and church interests are growing. A Primary Department has already been organized and site Jan. 1 we will organize a Junior Department. Nine families have moved in during the year, increasing our membership by twenty-two. None of our members have moved away, and we have lost none by death during the year, for which we are very thankful. Bro. Zimmerman preached our Thanksgiving sermon, after which an offering of $38.25 was lifted, which will be sent to Bethany Bible School. We are planning on holding our Bible institute during the month of January.—Mrs. O. L. Replogle, Yakima, Wash., Dec. 8.

WEST VIRGINIA

Brick.—Thanksgiving Day we met for a previously announced special service. The members arrived, but no minister greeted us. We waited until we knew a meeting was coming. Then we had a service of Scripture reading, short talks, prayers and songs. Those present enjoyed the service, though we had no sermon. An offering of $16.78 was taken.—Lillie F. Alderman, Scherr, W. Va., Dec. 12.

Hammer Schoolhouse.—August 3 Bro. S. Kiracofe and Sister Ollie V. Kerlin began a series of meetings, which continued for six weeks. Bro. Kiracofe preached wonderful sermons which stirred the people. Fourteen were baptized and four reclaimed.—Martha Hartman, Circleville, W. Va., Dec. 12.

Sandy Ridge.—Bro. E. S. Kiracofe and Sister Ollie V. Kerlin held a series of meetings in July, preaching nineteen sermons in all. Five were received by confession and baptism.—Martha Hortman, Circleville, W. Va., Dec. 12.

WISCONSIN

Maple Grove.—Oct. 20-22 Bro. Roger D. Winger, of Chicago, gave three inspiring lectures on the "Forward Movement." Oct. 26 Brother and Sister Winger, of Chicago, began a series of meetings. On account of the inclement weather they were unable to continue as many as we hoped for, but two confessed Christ and all received much spiritual food. At the close of the meetings we enjoyed our love feast, with twenty-six present. Bro. Wm. Filer, and Brother and Sister Root, of Rice Lake, were with us. Our regular services are well attended. Several new families have moved in, which helps out in the work. On Thanksgiving evening members and friends planned a surprise, and seventy-five gathered at the home of the writer, bringing all sorts of groceries. A new range was presented, through their generosity the price of the stove was overreached by $38. The evening was spent in a social way and a nice supper was served from the well-filled baskets.—George R. Shode, Stanley, Wis., Dec. 16.

The Message of the Book of Revelation

This is a plain, simple, practical treatise on the book of Revelation, and it ought to be in every home. The letters to the seven churches, the seven seals, the seven bowls full of the wrath of God, the four living creatures, the two horrid beasts, and the millennium, and a great number of other symbols, have been the ground of much speculation. Why should we not see them in their practical value? Why not spend a part of these long winter evenings, around the family table reading this valuable book? There ought to be an agent in every neighborhood selling it. Send for descriptive circular and agents' prices. Or if there is no agent in your neighborhood, send $1.10 for a copy. B. B. HOFF, Author and Publisher, 3435 Van Buren St., Chicago.

A DEVOTIONAL COMMENTARY

Complete in Seven Volumes

Through the Bible Day by Day

Rev. F. B. Meyer's Comments on the Bible, Book by Book

There are a good many people who do not have the time to make a thorough study of the Bible. Therefore, it was indeed a happy thought when it occurred to F. B. Meyer to prepare a series of brief studies that make it possible to cover the whole Bible in a connected and intelligible way at the daily devotional hour. These studies will commend themselves to many Bible readers—not simply because of the author, F. B. Meyer, but also because of the possibilities connected with the series. It is now possible to go through the Bible day by day with such a Bible student as F. B. Meyer as a guide.—Gospel Messenger.

Pocket Lesson Commentary

By E. W. Thornton

A vest pocket commentary by a man that knows how to write. While this commentary is comparatively new, each added volume has met with a very encouraging response. It gives the lesson text, daily readings, comments, and questions for research and discussion. Cloth, 30c, postpaid.

Amos R. Wells'

Cyclopedia

of 20th Century Illustrations gives 900 classified illustrations and tells how to use them.

What users say:

Bishop John H. Vincent:

"A gift of world wide wisdom embodied in a rich, unique Cyclopedia of Twentieth Century Illustrations. It is impossible to state its worth. It is a fountain of sweet goodness and a museum of ancient and modern Aids to all Teachers and Preachers and Parents."

Dr. Russ H H. Conwell:

"Dr. Amos R. Wells has given the truth wings. His Cyclopedia of Twentieth Century Illustrations is a book which should be in every library and within the reach of every author and public speaker. It is a privilege and a duty to commend it."

Dr. David James Burrell:

"I sat up two evenings to read it; then tells its own story. It is as interesting as one of Joe Lincoln's novels—and what more could I say? If I were a young preacher and looking for high spots in the art of illustration I would keep this Cyclopedia within easy reach."

Prof. Cleland B. McAfee:

"The illustrations ought to teach any man how to look out on the world about him and find materials for his speaking. These are days when men ought to find their illumination in present day life rather than in historical conditions."
